Transfer of Property Act. For neither Gopal Row nor 3rd defendant became or could have become absolutely entitled to the property so far as 1st defendant's share was concerned. As Danappa v. Yamnappa (6) and other cases referred to in Raushan Ali Khan Ohowdury v. Kali Mohan Moitra (7) show, the right is to contribution and is secured only by a lien. These considerations applied to the present case, and the decision must be that plaintiff's suit is not for redemption and is not subject to Article No. 148.

The question is then between Articles Nos. 126 and 144, the contention in connection with the latter being that enquiry must be held to ascertain the date, at which 3rd defendant's possession became adverse to 1st defendant and plaintiff. It is urged that the lower Appellate Court has already dealt completely with the matter in its reference to 1st defendant's alleged acquiescence; but that is only one aspect of it. The decision in Bharrao v. Rakhmin (8) has been referred to as negating 3rd defendant's right to an enquiry; but it is not clear that it can be applied to the facts in the case before us. To these facts Article No. 126 is exactly applicable; and it was applied to similar facts in Ramasamy Aiyar v. Vanamamalai Aiyar (9), the superfluity of any enquiry as to the character of defendant's possession being pointed out. The suit, being subject to Article No. 126 and having been filed over thirteen years after the possession of 3rd defendant began, is out of time and must be dismissed with costs throughout, the District Munsif's decree being restored and the appeal being allowed.

SHADASIVA AIYAR, J.—The 3rd defendant is the appellant. The suit was for redemption of $\frac{1}{4}$ th share in a certain property half of which was mortgaged for Rs. 700 in 1892 to the 2nd defendant by the 1st defendant and his father who owned the said half share in equal moieties of $\frac{1}{4}$ th and $\frac{1}{4}$ th. The plaintiff is the purchaser of the 1st defendant's $\frac{1}{4}$ th share. The other half share in the property belonged to one Narasayya but we are not concerned with that half share in this suit.

The 1st defendant's father and Narasayya sold the entire property to the 3rd defendant and to another person (who transferred his rights afterwards to the 3rd defendant) for Rs. 2,000. As regards Narasayya's half share which was sold for Rs. 1,000, there is no dispute in this suit. As regards the other half share which the 1st defendant's father sold for the remaining Rs. 1,000, the 1st defendant's father is found to have had no right to sell the 1st defendant's $\frac{1}{4}$ th share out of that half share. Thus the 3rd defendant, so far as title is concerned, has the same only to the extent of $\frac{1}{4}$ th share. As there was a mortgage for Rs. 700 in 1892 on both the quarter shares which belonged to the 1st defendant and to his father in favour of the 2nd defendant and as half of that Rs. 700 or Rs. 350 is binding on the 1st defendant's $\frac{1}{4}$ th share now vested in the plaintiff, the plaintiff offers in the plaint to pay Rs. 350 and seeks to redeem the said $\frac{1}{4}$ th share on payment of the said Rs. 350.

As I said already, the 1st defendant's father sold away both the $\frac{1}{4}$ th shares in 1897. Though the 2nd defendant was the original mortgagee under the mortgage of 1892, as the 3rd defendant after his purchase in 1897 paid up in April 1898 the Rs. 700, mortgaging to the 2nd defendant out of the sum of Rs. 1,000 (the price he paid to the 1st defendant's father for the half share) and is in possession of the half share from April 1898, this suit for redemption of $\frac{1}{4}$ th share is really directed against the 3rd defendant.

Several defences to the suit were raised by the 3rd defendant (the appellant before us), but I think it is necessary to consider only the defence of limitation. The plea of bar by limitation is based on the fact that from April 1898 the 3rd defendant has been in adverse possession (claiming as full owner) till the date of suit (August 1912), that is, for more than 14 years. Articles 126 and 144 of the Limitation Act are relied upon.

The District Munsif upheld the plea of limitation without mentioning in his judgment the Article of the Limitation Act on which he relied. The Subordinate Judge on appeal held that the suit was not barred by

(6) 26 B. 379; 4 Bom. L. R. 61.

(7) 4 C. L. J. 79.

(8) 21 B. 137 at p. 142; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 91.

(9) 26 Ind. Cas. 873.

MURAJALLI MUNIA GOUNDAN V. RAMASAMI CHETTI.

limitation because the mortgage of 1892 for Rs. 700 was payable only in June 1902, which was within 12 years of the date of the plaint (August 1912). His judgment also does not refer to any of the Articles of the Limitation Act. He gave a decree for redemption in favour of the plaintiff on payment of Rs. 350 and of half of the value of the improvements. (The claim for improvements, even if the plaintiff was entitled to redeem, was put forward by the 3rd defendant on the ground that the plaintiff's vendors knew of the sale of 1897, that the 3rd defendant redeemed and got into possession in April 1898 and that 3rd defendant made improvements of large value to plaintiff's knowledge without objection on plaintiff's part.) The Subordinate Judge quotes from the District Munsif's judgment without dissent as follows:—"He" (the plaintiff) "stood by when these," that is the improvements, "were made. He knew of the sale and of the 3rd defendant's possession." Then the learned Subordinate Judge says: "there is no dispute to the claim for compensation. But the claim" (that is, the amount due for the value of the improvements) "should be proved by the best evidence." The Subordinate Judge, therefore, refused to accept the amount of Rs. 4,000 claimed by the 3rd defendant as the value of the improvements and directed the issue of a commission by the lower Court to exactly ascertain such value before passing the final decree for the redemption of the 4th share.

As I said, it is necessary for the disposal of this appeal to consider only the question of limitation. I am clear in my opinion that Article 126 of the Limitation Act applies to this case. That Article provides a limitation period of 12 years for a suit by a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara Law "to set aside his father's alienation of ancestral property," the period being calculated from "when the alienee takes possession of the property." It has been held under the analogous Article 44 relating to a suit by a minor whose property was alienated by his guardian that the expression "suit to set aside a transfer of property" includes a suit in which there is a prayer for consequential relief of possession [see Annamalai Chettiar v. Pichu Ayyar (10)]. I am also clear that the Article 126, which speaks of a suit "to set aside" the father's alienation of ancestral property, denotes also a suit in which possession is claimed and does not only contemplate a mere declaratory suit [see Rustomjee's Limitation Act, page 326, quoting Dev Eai v. Shiv Ram (11)]. The present suit is by a person claiming from a Hindu (the 1st defendant) governed by the Law of the Mitakshara to set aside the said Hindu's (1st defendant's) father's alienation of ancestral property to the extent of the 1st defendant's share and for consequential relief of possession by redemption. The alienee (the 3rd defendant) took possession of the property in April 1898 and, as more than 12 years had elapsed from that date before the date of suit, the suit is barred under this Article. Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar for the respondent contended that the Article 126 (first column), when it uses the words "to set aside his father's alienation of ancestral property" means to set aside his father's alienation of ancestral property, provided the alienation was made by the father alleging that it was ancestral property or at least without alleging that it was not ancestral property." I see no reason whatever to add any such words as those italicized by me to the first column of the Article. Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar relied upon the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case reported as Balwant Singh v. Rev. Rockwell Clancy (12) to the effect that when an elder brother mortgages a property as if he was the sole owner and not as the manager of the family consisting of himself and his younger brother, the creditor is not entitled to prove that the younger brother's share was also bound by the mortgage as executed by the de facto manager for necessary family purposes. In the first place, it is not easy to see what the above observation has to do with the interpretation of the Article 126. Further, their Lordships clearly make a distinction between an alienation by an elder brother and an alienation by a father. They state at page 303*: "It need hardly be said that Sheeraj (1) 25 Ind. Cas. 463; O P. R. 1914; 260 P. L. R. 1914; 16 P. W. R. 19 4 (12) 14 Ind. Cas. 629; 34 A. 296; 1912 M. W. N. 467; 11 M. L. T. 344; 16 C. W. N. 577; 5 C. L. J. 476; 14 Bom. L. R. 422; 23 M. L. J. 18; 39 I. A. 109; 9 A. L. J. 569 (P. C).

*Page of 34 A.—Ed.

MURAJALLI MUNIA GOUNDAN v. RAMASAMI CHETTI.

Singh" (the alienor elder brother) "was not an ancestor or a predecessor of Maharaj Singh" (the younger brother). The Legislature and the Hindu Law do make a distinction between an alienation by a father of ancestral property and that by any other person who was a mere manager.

The doctrine of right by birth in the son is wholly antiquated and inconvenient for modern times. The Privy Council have taken advantage of the texts relating to the father's power of alienation for antecedent debts to mitigate the inconvenience of that doctrine and the Legislature has provided by a special Article 126 for the perfection of the title of an alienee from the father, when a Hindu son who wants to take advantage of the antiquated Mitakshara Law seeks to set aside such an alienation. It is significant that the alienation under Article 126 need not be for consideration. It is also significant that Article 126 applies alike to an alienee with and to an alienee without notice. See Bharrao v. Rakhmin (8). The Legislature has clearly fixed an overt and patent fact, namely, the taking of possession of the property by the alienee, as the event from which the period has to be calculated so as to avoid as far as possible difficult questions as to notice.

Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar further argued that the words in the third column of Article 126 "when the alienee takes possession of the property" mean "when the alienee takes possession of the property by the sole and unaided virtue and effect of the father's alienation" and that where the alienee gets possession by redeeming a previous usufructuary mortgage, the date of such possession given by mortgagee will not form the starting point under the third column and so apply Article 126. Here again I see no reason whatever to add to the plain language of the Article. Supposing for instance the alienation by the father is made one year after a trespasser had deprived the father of his possession of the property and the alienee after his alienation sues the trespasser and gets into possession, can it be argued that the son can come in more than 12 years afterwards treating the alienee's possession as that of a mere co-sharer and treating Article 126 as not applicable because the alienee had to sue the trespasser in order to get possession.

Assuming, however, that Article 126 is not applicable, I think that the suit is barred also under Article 144. In Vasudev v. Balaji (3) the facts were as follows:—

V. and G, co-owners of a land, mortgaged it in 1872. V. alone redeemed it in 1882 and obtained possession and he and his heirs asserted adverse and exclusive title to the whole and continued in possession till 1898. Then G's heirs brought a suit in 1898 for redemption of their half share. Jenkins, C.J., and Crowe, J., held that the co-owner who redeemed the whole of the mortgage was not a mortgagee, and did not stand in the shoes of the mortgagee, that he was a mere chargeholder, that a charge holder can assert and claim adverse possession and that after 12 years the charge could not be redeemed by the other co-sharer as the title by adverse possession became perfected. The learned Judges held that Article 148 applied only to a suit against a mortgagee, and not to a suit against a person who obtained a charge by paying up the mortgagee. In this connection, it might be remarked that, under section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act, one of several co-mortgagors who redeems the mortgaged property and obtains possession thereof does not himself become the mortgagee but is given only a charge on the share of the other co-sharers for the proportion of the expenses of redemption and of obtaining possession. In this case, it is clear on the proved documents and the facts found by the lower Appellate Court that the 3rd defendant, when he purchased in 1897, had the animus to claim title as the sole owner of the equity of redemption and not merely to claim title to the first defendant's father's $\frac{1}{4}$ th share, and that he took possession in April 1895 with the animus to hold the whole half share against all the world and not as a mere co-sharer with the first defendant in that half share. That possession of immoveable property is notice to the whole world of the title under which possession is held, and that possession is prima facie adverse and exclusive are well known principles of law. See Magu Brahma v. Bholi Das (13). Of course, a mortgagee or a co-sharer or a tenant who first obtains possession as such, cannot without notice to the mortgagor or to the other co-sharers or to the landlord

(13) 20 Ind. Cas. 195; 19 C. L. J. 252; 18 C. W. N. 657.

MOHANANDA DUTTA CHOWDHURY v. BAIKANTHA NATH DUTTA.

(as the case may be) claim to hold adversely, that is, by mere unilateral declaration of intention he could not convert his original possession into the adverse possession, but in this case the possession was obtained from the very beginning under an assertion of exclusive title.

The date fixed for the redemption in the mortgage of 1892 has no relevancy on the question of adverse possession, as it is not a mortgagee who sets up adverse possession but a purchaser from one of the co mortgagors (see Freeman on Co-tenancy, section 224, at pages 296 and 207).

In the result, I hold that the suit is clearly barred by limitation under Article 126, and even if Article 120 does not apply, under the general Article 144 and I would, therefore, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the District Munsif with costs payable by the plaintiff to the 3rd defendant throughout.

Appeal allowed.

M. C. P.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 776
OF 1916.

March 14, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice
Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, Kt.

MOHANANDA DUTTA CHOWDHURY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BAIKANTHA NATH DUTTA AND OTHERS
—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow, surrender by, of part of estate, validity of.

A surrender in favour of her husband's reversioners made by a Hindu widow otherwise than for consideration to meet legal necessities, in order to be valid, must be of the whole of her interest in the estate. [p. 873, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Sylhet, dated the 17th December 1915, affirming that of the Munsif, 3rd Court, Habiganj, dated the 23rd November 1914.

Babus Mohindra Nath Roy and Gobinda Chander De Roy, for the Appellant.

Babu Sasadhar Roy (Senior), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant No. 2 against the judgment of the learned District Judge, Sylhet, affirming the decision of the Munsif of Habiganje. The suit was brought to recover possession of an one-anna share as against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 on a declaration of title by purchase. The admitted facts are these. The original owner of the property was one Gopinath. He had three sons; the defendant No. 1, the father of the defendant No. 2 and one Chandranath. Chandranath died leaving a widow, Tripura Sundari, a daughter who married one Protap and the son of that daughter named Jnanendra. The title in this case is made in this way. On the 19th July 1901 Tripura Sundari executed a document (Exhibit 4) in favour of Jnanendra who was then a minor. The document, after the ordinary recital that she was in want, stated as follows: "If I make you absolute owner of an one-anna share out of my share of the properties mentioned below by transferring the same to you by a deed of release and if your father sells that share by a kobala accompanied by an ekrar to compensate loss in your behalf, some persons are ready to purchase that share." That does not purport to be a sale by the widow for the purpose of meeting her necessities. It simply states that it would be a convenient way of selling the property if it is made over to the grandson Jnanendra. Then, the deed states: "I on relinquishing whatever right I have of enjoyment and possession of an one-anna share out of my share of the undermentioned properties worth Rs. 300, etc., make you absolute owner in respect of the said share. From this day, whatever right of enjoyment and possession I have in the lands proportionate to that share being extinguished, you become absolute owner." It is said that that document is a sale by the widow or may be treated as a sale by the widow for the purpose of meeting her present necessities. That cannot be anything of the sort. The document purports to be a release by the widow of an one-anna share of her life-interest and the purpose for which the release was made was thus stated in the deed, namely, that the release having been made to Jnanendra, Jnanendra's father Protap by executing an ekrarnama might be able to get some person to purchase the property. The cases of the Privy Council and of this Court are quite clear that a release by a widow to the reversioner cannot be made of less than the whole of her interest. The reason is to prevent these continual releases to the reversioner for the time being and large portions of the property from being withdrawn from the person who ultimately turns out to be, in fact, the reversioner on the widow's death and also that if a widow has got to give up the whole of her interest she would be very careful before parting with the whole of the property at the same time. It is said in this case that when this man Protap sold the property seven months after, that transaction along with Exhibit 4 formed one and the same transaction. I do not agree. The plaintiffs did not allege that it was so and obviously it cannot be so. Moreover, the fact found by the learned Judge is that the consideration money obtained by Protap at the sale is not traced beyond the hands of Protap. It is not shown that it went to Jnanendra or to somebody else. I think a case like this is clearly opposed to the decision of the Full Bench of this Court that a surrender by a Hindu widow made otherwise than for consideration to meet legal necessities must be of the whole of her interest. This case was an attempt to surrender a small portion and Exhibit 4 did not, in my opinion, operate to pass that one-anna share to Jnanendra which was subsequently purported to be sold to the plaintiffs by Protap. That being so, we ought to set aside the decision of the learned District Judge and allow the present appeal and dismiss the plaintiffs' suit with costs both in this Court and in the lower Court.

DEOKI NANDAN v. KALI SHANKAR.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 363 OF 1916.

December 5, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

DEOKI NANDAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

KALI SHANKAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Partition case before Revenue Court—Title, question of, raised by applicants themselves—Civil suit, maintainability of—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 111.

Where in a partition case filed in a Revenue Court, before any notices were issued to the recorded co-sharers or at any rate before any objections could be filed by them to the application for partition, the applicants themselves asked the Court to postpone the case until they could have the question of their title cleared up in a Civil Court and the Revenue Court granted the required postponement and the applicants then instituted the proposed suit in the Civil Court:

Held, that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. [p. 874, col. 2.]

Mukhtar Ahmad v. Barati Lal, 25 Ind. Cas. 316; 17 O. C. 224; 1 O. L. J. 335, distinguished from.

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated 10th July 1916, confirming that of the Munsif, Purwa, dated 26th February 1916.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for the Appellants.

Pandit Tara Sharnkar Sharma, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—The only question which arises for determination of this second appeal is whether or not the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory suit which was brought by the plaintiffs-appellants against the defendants-respondents. The case has already been before this Court on a question of limitation. It was decided here in second appeal that the suit was not barred by time, and this Court refused to interfere with a remand order which had been made by the lower Appellate Court directing the case to be returned for investigation on the merits. After the case went back to the Court of first instance this question of jurisdiction arose. The defence was taken that the suit was not cognizable by a Civil Court. This plea was given effect to by the Munsif, who dismissed the suit. His order dismissing the suit has been upheld in appeal by the lower Appellate Court. In my opinion the decision of the Courts below was wrong. In order to elucidate the matter in question it is necessary to set out the following facts.

DEOKI NANDAN V. KALI SHANKAR.

The parties are co-sharers in a village called Dubepur in the Unao district. This village is held in imperfect partition and is divided into two pattis, one of which is called Patti Auseri representing a share of 13 annas 4 pies. The owner of this patti is the defendant-respondent, Gaya Prasad, No. 8. The other Patti Sri Kishan which consists of 2 annas 8 pies is held by three sets of owners. The plaintiffs between them own a 1 anna and 16 krants share in this patti. The first and second defendants who are the sons of one Ambika Prasad own a 1 anna 4 pies share, and the other defendants Nos. 3 to 7 own the rest, namely, 3 and 4 krants. Ambika Prasad, whose name has just been mentioned, made an application to the Revenue Court for an imperfect partition of this Patti Sri Kishan. The present plaintiffs Deoki Nandan and others objected to an imperfect partition taking place, the main ground being that it was not proper that imperfect partition should be allowed because the whole Mauza was joint (bl ijmal) and that until all the co-sharers of both the pattis were joined in the proceedings it would not be possible to arrive at a correct division of the shares. This objection filed by Deoki Nandan and others was, however, rejected in June 1913 as being beyond time. The imperfect partition case proceeded and these plaintiffs again objected; but their objection was overruled. Finally in order to attain their purpose the plaintiffs on the 1st of September 1913 put in an application to the Revenue Court asking for a perfect partition of their share and demanding that all the co-sharers in the village including Gaya Prasad, the owner of Patti Auseri, should be made parties. The object clearly was that the plaintiffs might obtain a total separation of their share in the entire Mauza. On the 9th of September the plaintiffs came before the Revenue Court and presented a petition in which they referred to the application made on the 1st of September. They went on to say that they desired this application for perfect partition to be postponed until they went to the Civil Court in order to obtain a decision regarding the proper extent of their share. This application having been put in the Assistant Collector passed the following order:—

"The petition of the applicants for adjournment is granted. Let the case be put up again on the 15th December."

After this the plaintiffs came to the Civil Court and brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen.

It must be admitted that the plaint has been very badly drafted and that the plaintiffs could not be given relief in the form in which it is sought in paragraph 9 of the plaint. At the same time it appears to me that if the Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit, there is a case for a declaratory relief if the facts can be established as they are represented by the plaintiffs. I will deal first, however, with the question of jurisdiction.

The Courts below have relied upon a Bench decision of this Court which is reported as Mukhtar Ahmad v. Barati Lal (1). But in my opinion the present case is one of a different kind and the law as laid down in this Bench decision cannot be applied to the facts before me. Section 111 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act shows the manner in which questions of title arising in partition proceedings can be brought before a Civil Court, and it was held in the Bench case to which I have referred that the question whether the Civil Court has jurisdiction in such cases must be determined with reference to the provisions of this section. It will be seen on a reference to section 110 that the circumstances which are contemplated in section 111 arise only after a notice has been issued to the recorded co-sharers of the village calling upon them to file objections. Section 111 provides that if on or before the date fixed for the proclamation any of the recorded co-sharers to whom notice has issued files an objection relating to a question of proprietary title, then the Revenue Court can deal with the matter in one of the three ways set out in section 111. What is clear, however, in the present case is that this suit with which we are now dealing did not come into the Civil Court in consequence of any of the events described in sections 110 and 111. It appears that before any notices were issued or at any rate before any objections could be filed to the application for perfect partition which the plaintiffs-appellants put before the Revenue Court, they themselves went to the Assistant Collector and asked him to stay his hand while they went to the Civil Court in order to have the question of their title cleared up. It is manifest, therefore, that the Assistant Collector had not before him any objection of a recorded co-sharer such as is described in section 111 of the Act, and it is further clear that the Assistant Collector did not decline to grant the application for partition until the question in dispute had been determined by a competent Court. All he did was to stay proceedings and to direct that no action should be taken upon the application until the plaintiffs who had made that application had done something which was necessary for them to do by means of a suit in the Civil Court. In these circumstances I am unable to see how it can be said that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to entertain this suit was in any way ousted. In my opinion it was not, and the decision that the suit was not entertainable must be set aside as erroneous. The case must now go back for investigation on the merits.

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 316; 17 O. C. 224; 1 O. L. J. 335.

KISHORE LAL GOSWAMI v. TARAPADA BHATTACHARJEE.

The frame of the plaint has occasioned a certain amount of difficulty and it has been conceded that the plaintiffs cannot ask for relief in the form in which it is sought in paragraph 9 (a) of the plaint. To me it seems that the question which will have to be investigated is the following. The plaintiffs say that in the present state of affairs in which the whole village is divided by imperfect partition into two Pattis Auseri and Sri Kishna, they, the plaintiffs, are not in possession of the full area of the village to which they are entitled as being owners of a 1 anna and 16 krants share. In other words, the suggestion is that as the village is divided at present, Patti Sri Kishan does not contain the full area which it ought to, having regard to the ratio which 2 annas 6 pies bears to 13 annas 4 pies. The plaintiffs say that taking the area of the whole village their 1 anna and 16 krants share represents an area of 51 bighas 12 1/15 biswas, while if partition were effected only in respect of the Patti Sri Kishan they would get possession of an area of 43 bighas 13 biswas 16 4/5 biswas only, which is a good deal less than the area to which they are entitled. It was this circumstance which led the plaintiffs to object to the application for an imperfect partition of Patti Sri Kishan only, for they objected that if that partition be carried out the result would be to give them a great deal less than they are entitled to. What they now want to be made clear is that as owners of a 1 anna and 16 krants share they are entitled at the time of the division of the whole of the village lands to a share of the area of the village which bears the proportion of 1 anna and 16 krants to 16 annas, and it seems to me that this is a declaration which if the necessary facts are established, the Civil Courts are competent to grant them. Once this matter has been settled, the plaintiffs will be in a position to ask the Revenue Court to go on with the application for partition and to have partition made in accordance with the declaration made by the Civil Court.

I allow this appeal, set aside the order of both the Courts below and send the case back to the Court of first instance for decision on the merits. Costs here and hitherto will abide the result.

Cause remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1496 OF 1916.

April 24, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, Kt.

Raja KISHORE LAL GOSWAMI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

TARAPADA BHATTACHARJEE—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Lease, construction of Toll, payment of, in respect of goods sold on boat or road.

The defendant took a lease of a certain property, to which the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act applied, for the purpose of carrying on a shop. The lease provided for the payment of a certain amount of rent and also for the payment of a toll over the stipulated rent as part of the rent in respect of goods that should be sold in the shop or on boat or on road on certain terms:

KISHORE LAL GONWAMI V. TARAPADA BAHTTACHARJEE.

Held, that on a reasonable construction of the lease the defendant was liable to pay the toll not only in respect of goods sold in the shop but also in respect of goods which, having been taken from the shop to the nearest boat or road, would be sold there, but that his liability did not extend to the case of goods sold on boats and roads far away from the shop. [p. 876, col. 2; p. 877, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court, Hooghly, dated the 4th of April 1916, modifying that of the Munsif, 2nd Court, Serampore, dated the 23rd of November 1914.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Dr. Sarat Chunder Basak, (with him Babu Bepin Chunder Bose), for the Appellant.—The plaintiff is the appellant, and the appeal arises out of a suit for rent which the plaintiff claims under a mourasi mokarari lease. The lease provides a fixed rent as well as certain commission payable to the landlord upon the amount of the goods sold in the shop, that is, standing on the land or on boat or road as aratdar. The first Court allowed the claim in full, but on appeal the lower Appellate Court disallowed the commission upon the amount of the goods sold, on the ground that there is no consideration for such a contract and that if the commission, which is described in the lease as * * (dan) or * * (kor), is allowed, the plaintiff would be a share-holder of the defendant's firm. I submit the lower Appellate Court has erred. When the payment of the commission is expressly stipulated in the lease, the defendant cannot get out of the contract to pay the same. On a proper construction of the lease the Court of Appeal below should have allowed the claim for commission.

Dr. Jadunath Kanjilal, (with him Babu Hemendra Chunder Sen), for the Respondent.—The condition in the lease as regards the payment of toll upon the goods bought and sold in the shop or on boat is not valid and operative in law. Refers to section 23 of the Contract Act. There is certainly no consideration for the contract for the payment of the toll upon the amount of the goods sold in the public road or on boat plying on a public river.

Dr. Sarat Chunder Basak replied,

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff against the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge of Hugly, dated the 4th April 1916, modifying the decision of the Munsif at Serampore. The defendant took a lease of certain property to which the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act apply for the purpose of carrying on a shop—for the purpose of his aratdari business amongst other things. The lease provided for the payment of a certain amount of rent. It also provides that the lessee should pay dan or kor over the stipulated rent as part of the rent in respect of goods that should be sold in his arat or on boat or shop or road as aratdar on certain terms. Dr. Kanjilal at the conclusion of his argument was driven to admit that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, in so far as it refused to decree the commission in respect of goods sold in the shop as aratdar, could not be supported. That is obvious. The only question is with reference to the goods sold on boat or road. Dr. Kanjilal's view is that it would be extremely hard that the plaintiff, who is apparently a Pleader, should be permitted to overreach the ignorant aratdar by having stipulated that whenever he should sell on any road in any country he should be liable to pay a commission to the plaintiff. That is not what the lease means, you must put a reasonable construction on the lease. What the plaintiff meant to provide against is this: Perhaps he knew the ways of the aratdars. He meant to provide that the aratdar should not be entitled to anchor a boat in the stream opposite or close to the shop and by taking the goods from the shop to the boat sell them there and say that that is not a sale within the meaning of the lease. Similarly, he should not be entitled to take the goods out of the shop on the road and instead of selling them in the arat sell them on the road and say that he is not liable to pay commission in respect of the goods sold on the road adjoining the shop. Such cases were intended to be covered by the lease. In respect of the goods so sold, there was nothing to prevent the lessee to stipulate that he should be liable to pay a commission. Nobody can ever likely suggest that this aratdar, when he is in his boat far away from his place of business and sells a maund of potatoes there, he is liable to pay to his landlord at Serampore a commission of one rupee per one hundred maunds in respect of goods sold at that distance. The lease has got a perfectly clear and reasonable meaning. The case must be remitted, to the Court of first instance to find out what amount of additional rent by way of commission on things sold by the defendant as aratdar in the shop or on boat or on road, as I have already mentioned, is payable to the plaintiff. Costs of this appeal will be paid by the respondent.

BHAIRON PRASAD v. SHEO DARSHAN.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—I agree.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 344 OF 1916.

May 14, 1917.

Present:—Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

BHAIRON PRASAD—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

SHEO DARSHAN—PLAINTIFF,

Musamma! INDRANA AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Execution—Sale—Mortgage prior to attachment, whether binding on auction-purchaser.

A person who purchases property, which has already been mortgaged, in execution of a decree, cannot acquire larger rights than those which his judgment-debtor possessed on the date of the sale. [p. 877, col. 2.]

An auction-purchaser of a property mortgaged to a person under a registered deed, executed prior to the attachment of the property, is bound by the mortgage even if he had no notice of the mortgage and the mortgagee failed to have his lien notified at the time of the sale. [p. 878, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated the 30th June 1916, reversing the order of the Officiating Munsif, Rae Bareilly, dated the 31st March 1916.

Babu Surendro Nath Roy, for the Appellant.

Syed Zahur Ahmad, for Respondent No. 1.

Babu Lachhman Prasad, for Respondent No. 3.

JUDGMENT.—Ganga Bakhsh Singh held a decree for arrears of rent against Musamma! Indrana, in execution of which he brought to sale certain trees in a grove situated in the village Manjhawan belonging to the latter. Prior to the sale Lodheshwar made an application on behalf of his brother Sheo Darshan the plaintiff to the Revenue Court, stating that his brother held a mortgage of the said grove for Rs. 48 and that the money due on that mortgage should be notified at the time of the sale. The Revenue Court refused to recognize Lodheshwar as having any authority to present the application on behalf of his brother Sheo Darshan and rejected the application. In the order rejecting the application the Revenue Court further observed that the time fixed for payment in the mortgage was four years and that it was noticeable that the mortgagee had not brought a suit for the recovery of his money in spite of the expiry of that period. What the relevancy of that observation was to the order which was passed on that application is not quite apparent. The trees were purchased at the auction-sale by Bhairon Prasad. Subsequently Sheo Darshan filed the present suit for recovery of the money due on the mortgage, praying in addition that the sale effected in favour of Bhairon Prasad should be set aside. The Court of first instance dismissed the claim on the ground that the plaintiff was estopped by reason of his failure to notify his lien in the manner provided by law. The lower Appellate Court, however, came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not guilty of any act or omission, such as would operate as an estoppel against him. It, therefore, decreed the claim for the sale of the mortgaged property.

The learned Counsel who appears for the defendant-appellant contends that his client was a bona fide purchaser for value and that the plaintiff was not consequently entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in satisfaction of his mortgage. A person who purchases property subject to a prior mortgage in execution of a decree for arrears of rent cannot, however, acquire larger rights than those which his judgment-debtor possessed on the date of the sale. The mortgage held by the plaintiff was registered, and the defendant-appellant, as the purchaser of the rights of the judgment-debtor, is bound by the mortgage, which was effected prior to the attachment, which gave rise to the sale. The mere fact that the appellant had no notice of the mortgage or that application made by the brother of the plaintiff for notification of his lien was disallowed is of no avail to him, because if it be assumed that Lodheswar had any authority to file the application on behalf of the plaintiff, the fact that the suit has been filed within one year from the date of the order passed by the Revenue Court is sufficient to render it maintainable. As a matter of fact no application for the notification of the lien was made by the plaintiff himself, and no act of his or omission on his part can be relied on in proof of the plea, which the defendant-appellant has pressed in this appeal. It has also been argued on behalf of the defendant-appellant that the mortgage held by the plaintiff was collusive and without consideration. But no such plea was set forth in the grounds of appeal or appears to have been urged at the time of the hearing of the appeal in the lower Appellate Court. The finding of the learned Munsif was that the mortgage was made for consideration. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

NAJA MIA v. ABDUL KADAR.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1685 OF 1916.

April 25, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, Kr.

NAJA MIA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL KADAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VIII, r. 5—Pleadings, statement of, in India—Written statement—Omission to deny allegation of title in plaint, effect of. In this country a very high standard of pleading cannot be expected. [p. 874, col. 1.]

Where, in a suit for possession of land, the defendant in his written statement did not specifically deny the allegation made by the plaintiff in his plaint that the property sued for formed a portion of a certain taluk and the Munsif, holding that there was a constructive admission by the defendant of the plaintiff's title as alleged in the plaint, decreed the suit without considering the evidence adduced on both sides on the question of title:

Held, that the lower Appellate Court was justified in reversing the decision of the Munsif on the ground that there was no such admission on the part of the defendant as would warrant a decision in favour of the plaintiff's title, specially as the trial Court had required proof of the plaintiff's title in spite of the so-called admission by the defendant. [p. 879, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Chittagong, dated the 8th April 1916, reversing that of the Additional Munsif, Chittagong, dated the 24th June 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Kshitish Chandra Sen, for the Appellant.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiff. The appeal arises out of a suit for possession of certain lands. Plaintiff claims the land on the basis of a Settlement granted to him in 1909 by defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 2 purchased the disputed land which appertains to the Taluk of one Mobarak Ali in 1901. The defence of defendant No. 1, the only contesting defendant in this suit, is that he purchased the land from Mobarak Ali's daughters. The Court of first instance did not enter into any evidence, but found the land to appertain to the Taluk of Mobarak Ali simply on the admission of defendant No. 1. In this country under Order VIII, rule 5 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court may in its discretion require additional evidence even where there is an admission in the pleadings and the Court generally does so, but the Court is not bound to do so.

[FLETCHER, J.—The admissions in this case are constructive admissions.]

There is no specific denial in the written statement that the Taluk appertained to the Taluk of Mobarak Ali and this is constructive admission. We specifically stated in the plaint that the lands appertained to the Taluk Mobarak Ali. Hence in order to refute that there must be specific denial in the written statement.

[FLETCHER, J.—The lower Appellate Court did not accept the admission of defendant

DELAUNEY v. PRANHARI GUHA.

No. 1 because there was evidence in support of defendant No. 1's case.]

When the plaintiff makes out a prima facie case, under the Patni Regulations the defendant has got to prove his case also. On his failure or omission to do so, the plaintiff's suit must be decreed.

Babu Probodh Kumar Dass, for the Respondents, was not called upon.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal preferred by the plaintiff against the judgment of the learned District Judge of Chittagong, dated the 8th April 1916, reversing the decision of the Additional Munsif of the same place. The suit was one brought for recovery of possession of land. The plaintiff claimed that he had got a settlement from the defendant No. 2, who had purchased the Taluk that had formerly belonged to one Mobarak Ali and which had been sold for arrears of revenue under the Patni Regulation. The defendant No. 1 said that he was a purchaser of the property from Mobarak Ali's daughter. The appeal is preferred substantially on this ground. It is said that the defendant No. 1 in his written statement failed to deny the allegation made by the plaintiff that the property sued for formed a portion of Mobarak Ali's Taluk and that, therefore, there was a constructive admission and no proof was required of that. There are many answers to this—first of all, proof was required by the Court. Evidence was given on both sides as to whether this land was or was not within the limits of Mobarak Ali's Taluk. From this it is quite clear that the Judge in the Court of first instance did not act on this supposed admission. Secondly, in these written statements filed before the Munsif, one cannot expect a very high standard of pleadings. The defendant No. 1 in this case says that he denied everything; he denied the title of the plaintiff and denied all the allegations contained in the plaint. Of course, that may not be a very scientific way of drafting a written statement. But what is clear from that is that this defendant intended to put every fact in issue and all the facts being in issue and the Judge having required proof of the title of the plaintiff, in coming to the conclusion that the learned Judge did come to, he simply dealt with the case on the footing that there was no supposed admission made by the defendant No. 1. The learned Judge was not bound by the view that the learned Munsif took. That seems to be quite obvious.

The other point raised, namely, whether the plaintiff's lessor has got a title under the Patni Regulation which must override any title that the defendant No. 1 has, has absolutely no force in it at all, because the first thing and the essential thing for the plaintiff to prove is that the property sued for forms a portion of the Taluk brought to sale under the Patni Regulation and this he has failed to prove.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1711 OF 1916.

February 7, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

MRS. E. J. DELAUNEY, EXECUTRIX
TO THE ESTATE OF LATE J. P. DELAUNEY—DEFENDANT NO. 4—APPELLANT

versus

PRANHARI GUHA—PLAINTIFF AND CHANDRA KUMAR GUHA AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Bengal school—Yautuka and ayautuka property—Burden of proof—Succession—Ejectment, suit for—Mesne profits, claim for, against trespasser, maintainability of.

The burden of proving that the property which a Hindu lady purchased long after her marriage was her yautuka property, because the purchase was made from a special fund obtained during her nuptial ceremony, is on the person who asserts it. [p. 880, col 2]

To the ayautuka property left by a Hindu female the sons and the maiden daughters may be entitled in equal shares, but the married daughters are postponed to the sons. [p. 880, col 2.]

Defendant No. 1, under colour of title from defendant No. 4 to whom he attorned, dispossessed the plaintiff's tenants who thereupon surrendered. Defendant No. 4 realised rents from the defendant No. 1 for some years. In a suit by the plaintiff for ejectment of defendants Nos 1 and 4:

Held that whatever the relation might be between defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 4, the possession of the defendant No. 1 as against the plaintiff was that of a trespasser, and the plaintiff was entitled to mesne profits as against him [p. 882, col. 1.]

DELAUNEY V. PRANHARI GURA.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Noakhali, dated the 25th April 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, Sandip, dated the 29th of August 1914.

Babus Tarak Chandra Chakrabortty, Dhirendra Lal Kastgir and Tarakeswar Nath Mitter, for the Appellant.

Babu Bhagirath Chandra Das, for Defendant No. 1, Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—This is an appeal from the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge of Noakhali, dated the 25th April 1916. The suit is a suit in ejectment and it was brought by the plaintiff against various defendants. The suit was dismissed in the trial Court but decreed in the lower Appellate Court. The appellant before us is the defendant No. 4 and there are also cross-objection by defendant No. 1. The plaintiff traces his title to a lady named Nanda Kumari wife of Sarat Chandra Guha. Sarat Chandra died in 1299 (B. S.) and Nanda Kumari in 1300 (B. S.). The case made is that the land in dispute is included in the land purchased by Nanda Kumari from one Gourhari Guha under a conveyance, dated the 17th Sraban 1296. On Nanda Kumari's death her rights in this property are said to have devolved upon her son Mohini, and on his death the property is said to have passed to the son of his sister Ganga Monee. That son died an infant and the property is then said to have devolved on his father, the defendant No. 5, from whom the plaintiff obtained it under a shikmi taluki lease, dated the 10th Aswin 1317. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that this title is established.

It is contended in this appeal, firstly, that the Subordinate Judge has erred in law in the way in which he has dealt with the burden of proof on the question whether the property in the hands of Nanda Kumari was what is known as Yautuka or what is known as Ayautuka. The learned Subordinate Judge says this: "There is no evidence that Nanda Kumari had any Yautuk property or she purchased a property of Exhibit 3 with the proceeds of any Yautuk property. Hence if the disputed land belonged to Nanda Kumari it was her Yautuk property. Ayautuk property of a Hindu female governed by the Dayabhaga School is inherited by her son in preference to her daughter. Hence Mohini was the legal heir of Nanda Kumari." It is argued that the learned Subordinate Judge has wrongly thrown the onus of proving that the property was Yautuka on the appellant. The 'Yautuka' of a Hindu wife consists of the gifts made to her during the nuptial ceremonies. The particular property in question was purchased 17 or 18 years after the lady's marriage. If the purchase was made from any special fund, it would seem that the burden of proving that should fall upon the person who asserts it. But apart from that the Judge in another part of this judgment has found that the property did in fact descend from Nanda Kumari to Mohini and though apparently at the time Mohini had two married sisters alive, no objection was taken by them and no claim was made by them to the whole or any part of the property. In the circumstances, therefore, it cannot, in my opinion, be said that the learned Subordinate Judge has erred in the mode in which he has dealt with this part of the case. In this connection, it is further suggested that the learned Subordinate Judge was not entitled to say that the Ayautuka property of a Hindu female is inherited by her sons in preference to her daughters. The learned Pleader has referred to a text the meaning of which he says is doubtful or ambiguous. But the proposition laid down by the Subordinate Judge, who is himself a Hindu, appears to represent the commonly accepted view of the order of succession to Ayautuka property. To such property the sons and the maiden daughters may be entitled in equal shares but the married daughters are postponed to the sons (Shastri's Hindu Law, 3rd Edition, page 415).

The second contention of the learned Pleader is that the Subordinate Judge has not found that at the date of Mohini's death Ganga Monee's son was in existence. But the fact was not disputed. "There is no dispute" says the Subordinate Judge, "that the infant son of Ganga Monee and the defendant No. 5 inherited the property of Mohini or, in other words, the son of Ganga Moni was the heir of Mohini and the defendant No. 5 was the heir of the aforesaid son." It is impossible to go behind a positive statement of this kind made by the Subordinate Judge in the course of a long and careful judgment.

DELAUNY C. PRANHARI GUHA.

The third point taken is that the learned Subordinate Judge has in some way neglected to deal with the case as put for the plaintiff in the first paragraph of the plaint. That paragraph refers to a partition or exchange of properties which took place between Nanda Kumari and her husband. The first paragraph of the plaint, however, cannot be read by itself. It must be read with the rest of the plaint. There is no definite statement there that the property now in dispute was property obtained by Nanda Kumari in exchange for some property of her which went to her husband. A definite statement on the subject will be found in paragraph 5 of the plaint. That paragraph states:—"That the aforementioned Nanda Kumari Guha was owner in possession of the land of Schedule (Ka) by virtue of the aforesaid purchase under a deed of private sale and in right by adverse possession." The plaint, therefore, specifically affirms that the land specified in the first schedule or the land in dispute was purchased by Nanda Kumari from Gourhari; and there is the further assertion of a right by adverse possession to that land. Moreover, there is a clear finding in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge that the conveyance executed by Gourhari in favour of Nanda Kumari does include the disputed land. There is, therefore, in an appeal confined to questions of law no substance in this contention.

Then as to limitation, that turns on the question of possession. It is suggested that the learned Subordinate Judge has not sufficiently dealt with this question. What is it that the Subordinate Judge has found? He has found that this property descended from Nanda Kumari to Mohini. He has found that by the pattah of the 22nd Chaitra 1899 the property was leased by Mohini to Bisweswar Guha, the father of defendants Nos. 2 and 3. These defendants are the first cousins of defendant No. 1. In the year 1307 a portion of the land covered by the lease of 1893 was surrendered by or on behalf of defendants Nos. 2 and 3. The portion so surrendered was settled by Mohini with Nabin Chandra Guha, the brother of defendant No. 1, and apparently is now in the undisputed possession of Nabin. As I read the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, he has further found that the land in dispute continued in possession of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as tenants of Mohini till the year 1908. In that year a Record of Rights was published. The Subordinate Judge's view, stated, if not expressly at any rate with sufficient clearness, is that subsequent to the publication of the Record of Rights the defendant No. 1, under colour of a title from the defendant No. 4, somehow continued to dispossess defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and that the possession of defendant No. 1 does not go back beyond the year 1908. The plaintiff had some difficulty in realising his rent from defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and he brought a rent suit against them and secured a decree. Thereafter they paid rent for one year, but finally surrendered the land to the plaintiff. The plaintiff says that he attempted to obtain possession after this second surrender, which occurred at the end of 1911 or beginning of 1912, and was unsuccessful and he dates his cause of action from the year 1913. On the facts as found by the Subordinate Judge it is quite clear that this suit is within the time allowed by the law of limitation.

Another objection taken by the learned Pleader is that the Subordinate Judge has not dealt with defendant's title. The defendant No. 4 is the owner of a 4-anna share of the Zamindari right, but that is not the title under which she claims in the present suit. She claims as a purchaser at a Court sale. The sale certificate is dated the 5th December 1908 and it purports to pass the Taluki title. This title, however, is the very title which Nanda Kumari is said to have purchased long before from Gourhari, in whom according to the Subordinate Judge the title vested. Nither the plaintiff nor her predecessor-in-interest was a party to the rent suit in execution of the decree in which the sale was held. Therefore, neither the decree itself in the rent suit nor the sale in execution of that decree can bind the plaintiff. As to this title set up by defendant No. 4 and defendant No. 1 under him, the Subordinate Judge's view is perfectly clear. He has found that defendant No. 1's settlement is a fictitious one; and he adds that before 1308 he had no right in the land. He adds that "defendant No. 4 was never in khas possession of the disputed land. She did not take delivery of possession of the disputed land through Court. She did not take amicably. The defendant No. 1, who either dispossessed the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 during their minority or was in collusion with them, attorned to defendant No. 4 who simply got rent for 1316 and 1317 (B. S.) for the disputed land from the defendant No. 1 in 1909 and 1910. She as a Talukdar had no concern with the disputed land other than the receipt of this rent." It is obvious that, whether rightly or wrongly, the Subordinate Judge is of opinion on the merits that the title of defendant No. 1 as also of defendant No. 4 was purely a paper and fictitious title.

VITHOBA V. SEGO.

Coming to the cross-objections filed on behalf of defendant No. 1, the first objection on his behalf is that he has been made liable for mesne profits. He says that mesne profits ought to be paid not by him but by defendant No. 4. Whatever the relation may be between defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 4 the possession of the defendant No. 1 as against the plaintiff is that of a trespasser and the plaintiff is entitled to mesne profits as against him. The next objection raises the question of the possession of defendant No. 1 over again. That I have already dealt with and I need not repeat what I have said. It has also been argued for the defendant No. 1 that the Subordinate Judge has not definitely found that the lands in suit are identical with the land leased to the plaintiff by the document of the year 1317. That document is Exhibit No. 1 on the record. The two plots of land to which the first schedule of the plaint refers are both found by the Subordinate Judge to be included in that document. He says that plot No. 2 of Exhibit No. 1 includes the plaint land. There is no substance, in my opinion, in the cross-objections urged on behalf of defendant No. 1. The plaintiff not being the appellant, I guard myself from being understood to express any opinion on the question whether it was open to the defendant No. 1 to take any of these cross-objections except the first.

The result is that the appeal and the cross-objections must be dismissed. The plaintiff is entitled to his costs of the appeal and the cross-objections from defendant No. 4 and defendant No. 1 respectively.

BEACHCROFT, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 45 OF 1917.

February 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Batten, Offg. J. C.

VITHOBA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

APPELLANTS

versus

SEGO AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Minor, decree against—Negligence of guardian ad litem in conduct of suit—Bad management of suit—Failure to raise money by encumbering property in order to prevent final decree from being passed, whether gross negligence—Non-service of summons on minor's guardian, whether sufficient ground for setting aside decree by suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 13, O. XVII, r. 2—Audi alteram partem, applicability of.

Gross negligence on the part of a guardian or next friend in conducting a suit on behalf of a minor is a good ground for the minor to bring a suit for setting aside the decree. [p. 884, col. 2.]

But mere bad management of a suit by the guardian or an omission to raise money on behalf of the minor by further encumbering the estate, in order to prevent a final decree in a mortgage suit from being passed, is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a mortgage decree unless the conduct of the guardian amounts to fraud or gross negligence. [p. 884, col. 2.]

Daulat Singh v. Raghubir Singh, A. W. N. (1894) 141, followed.

There is no exception to the rule audi alteram partem, unless such an exception is made by legislation. [p. 885, col. 2.]

The mere non-service of summons on a party to a suit is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the decree in a fresh suit unless it is part of a scheme of fraud. [p. 886, cols. 1 & 2.]

If an ex parte decree is passed against a minor under Order XVII, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, the remedy of the minor acting through his guardian lies in the provisions of Order IX, rule 13 of the Code, and he cannot obtain relief in a separate suit unless the absence of the guardian has resulted in such an injustice to the minor as would amount to gross negligence on the part of the guardian. [p. 886, col. 2.]

VITHOBA V. SEGO.

A minor once represented by a guardian does not cease to be so represented merely because an ex parte decree is passed against him owing to the absence of his guardian. [p. 886, col. 2.]

Appeal against the judgment of the District Judge, Bhandara, in Civil Suit No. 33 of 1915, dated the 31st January 1917.

Messrs. M. Gupta, S. Ramdas and R. B. Wyawahare, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Sir B. K. Bose and Mr. V. Bose, for Respondent No. 1.

Messrs. V. M. Jukadkar and Bhawanji Shankar, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit filed as a sequel to the case disposed of in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 30 of 1913 disposed of on 6th February 1915. The minor defendants in Suit No. 50 of 1908 Sego and Jagan have now brought a suit for a declaration that the decree final in that suit is null and void and for possession of the mortgaged property, alleging that the mortgage-debt has been fully satisfied by the usufruct of the property since it has been in the decree-holder's possession. In the alternative they ask to be allowed to redeem in case any balance of the mortgage debt remains unsatisfied. The District Judge has granted a decree that the final decree passed against the plaintiffs in Suit No. 50 of 1908 does not bind them and is null and void as against them. He has not, however, granted a decree for possession or redemption but has relegated the parties to the position they were in before the decree final was passed. It is admitted by both sides that if the District Judge is right in holding that the decree final does not bind the plaintiffs, the form of the decree in this suit is a correct one.

The plaintiffs claim that relief should be granted on three grounds. The first is fraud on the part of the decree-holders; the second is negligence on the part of Budhu the guardian ad litem of the plaintiffs in the former suit; thirdly, it is said that the decree final is void against the plaintiffs as they were not properly represented by a guardian ad litem when the decree was passed.

The learned District Judge has held that none of the allegations of fraud made against the decree-holders have been proved, and this finding has not been challenged in argument by the learned Counsel for the respondents. The nature of the fraud alleged is, however, closely bound up with the charge of negligence directed at Budhu.

The facts of the case as regards the circumstances in which the decree was made final have been fully set out in the former judgment of this Court and the judgment appealed against and need not be repeated fully here. It is sufficient to say that Budhu is the full brother of one appellant and step brother of the other appellant and was their guardian ad litem. When the decree-holders applied for a final decree for foreclosure, a notice was issued to the minors in which they were described as minors by guardian Sakharam, Sakharam being their father. Sakharam was not their guardian ad litem, but it has been found that the notice was drawn up incorrectly not through anybody's fraud but by a pure mistake, Sakharam having been nominated as guardian ad litem by the plaintiffs in that suit at the commencement of the proceedings. He declined to act as guardian of his sons and then Budhu was appointed guardian ad litem. Even Sakharam was not served as guardian of the minors but the notice was served on the minors personally. Subsequently on the 25th September 1910 service was made on Sakharam and Budhu, the first and second defendants in the case, in their own names and not as guardians of the minor defendants. The notice was to appear on 8th October 1910, but they did not appear, and the notices were held to have been duly served on them. What happened was, and this is the version adopted by the plaintiffs in this suit, that Sakharam and Budhu, when they saw the process-server appear, concealed themselves inside the house and the notices were affixed to the house.

In the lower Court the charges of fraud made against the decree-holders have broken down and no attempt is made to sustain them in this Court. The specific acts of negligence alleged against Budhu are, (1) that he made no attempt to raise the mortgage money before 15th April 1910, the date named for payment in the preliminary decree; (2) that he did not apply on the minors' behalf to set aside the ex parte final decree against the minors; and (3) that he did not appeal against the final decree on behalf of the minors on the ground that it had been passed behind their backs. In estimating the negligence, if any, on the part of Budhu we must see what the allegations made by the plaintiffs are, and these are contained in the main charge of fraud against the decree-holders. The plaintiffs allege that on 25th September 1910, when Budhu and Sakharam concealed themselves within the house from the process-server, a compromise was effected inside the house between the parties, and the defendants stated to the mothers of the plaintiffs that they would not get the decree made final for the full 5 annas 4 pies mortgaged but would give up the minors' share of the property and accept the other half of the property in full satisfaction of the decree. According to the plaintiffs' case, therefore, what they would have urged, if they had appeared through their guardian ad litem on 8th October 1910, is that the decree-holders had released their share of the property. The story about the alleged compromise on 25th September 1910 has on very good grounds been found to be a tissue of falsehoods and this finding is accepted in this Court. I do not understand how the plaintiffs can complain that their guardian did not appear for them and tell a story which has now been found to be absolutely false. There can be no negligence in omitting to come forward and tell a false story. It is nowhere alleged in the plaintiffs' pleadings that if they had appeared through a diligent guardian they would have asked for an extension of time. According to their case what they would have pleaded would have been something perfectly different. Presumably any appeal made on behalf of the plaintiffs would have put forward the story that has now been put forward and is found to be false. I do not see how we can ignore the plaintiffs' pleas in the present case and suppose that a different case might have been put forward for them than the one they have advanced now. But even if we ignore the specific allegations made by the plaintiffs, it remains to be seen whether Budhu can be said to have been negligent in not raising the money, in not applying to have the ex parte decree set aside on the ground that the minors have not been served and in not appealing against the decree on the same ground. As to the alleged negligence in not raising the money the plaintiffs' plea is that the other co-sharer of Mouza Paldongari was willing to advance the money on easy terms, that is to say, that the money might have been raised by further encumbering the property. Budhu and Sakharam did not raise the money in their own interest, and an omission to raise the money on behalf of the minors by further encumbering the estate is not such an act of gross negligence as would entitle the plaintiffs to treat the decree as a nullity. It is not alleged that the money was available on the 8th October, the date on which the decree was made final, and in these circumstances it cannot be imputed as an act of gross negligence that Budhu failed to appeal or failed to take steps to set aside the ex parte decree. No money was deposited on account of the plaintiffs until 24th August 1912. No doubt gross negligence on the part of a guardian or next friend in conducting a suit on behalf of a minor is a good ground for the minor setting aside the decree; vide Lolla Shoo Churn Lal v. Ramnandan Dobey (1), Ram Sarup Lal v. Shah Latasat Hossein (2), Gottapati Subbana v. Gottapati Narasamma (3). But mere bad management of a suit by the guardian is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a decree unless it amounts to fraud or gross negligence; vide Daulat Singh v. Raghbir Singh (4). The time for payment expired on 15th April 1910, and the decree was made final on 8th October 1910. The minors through their guardian could have asked for an extension of time quite independently of any application by the decree-holders for making the decree final. No such application was ever made on their behalf. In the circumstances of the case it was not gross negligence on the part of the guardian to abstain from seeking to set aside or appealing against a final decree merely on the ground that the minors had not been noticed. It was an omission on his part which may well have

VITHOBA v. SEGO.

(1) 22 C. S. 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 7.

(2) 29 C. 735.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 16; 27 M. L. J. 480.

(4) A. W. N. (1894) 141.

VITHOBA V. SEGO.

been the wisest course in the circumstances of the case. It would have been gross negligence not to appeal or apply for restoration if the money had been paid or if the alleged compromise had really taken place, but it was not necessarily negligence to abstain from doing so when all that could be hoped was that the Court might possibly grant an extension of time, which had not been asked for up to the date of the hearing of the application to make the decree absolute.

We next come to the most important question in the case, namely, whether the final decree is a nullity against the minors because they were not noticed when the decree-holders applied to have the decree made final. The District Judge seems to think that this point has been settled by my remarks in the former case. This is not so. I held and I still hold that the minors' guardian was not noticed, and, therefore, the minors were not represented at the hearing when the decree was made final. I did not intend to say, nor could I say, that the minors were entirely unrepresented so that the proceedings against them were void. Nothing I said in the former appeal can possibly make this question res judicata. I will first dispose of three arguments raised on behalf of the appellants. It is first of all urged that on an application being made for an order under Order XXXIV, rule 3 (2), for a final decree the non-applicant party concerned is not entitled to notice thereof or to appear and be heard in answer thereto. It is urged that the ruling in Seth Bagandas v. Shridhar (5) is no longer to the point, since under the present Civil Procedure Code all proceedings up to the granting of a final decree are proceedings in the suit. I am of opinion, however, that the principles of that ruling are still in force. The proceedings started by an application to make a foreclosure decree final are no doubt proceedings in the suit, but they are a fresh stage in the proceedings which are opened by the application. The mere mentioning of a date for payment in the preliminary decree cannot possibly be a notice of the re-opening of the fresh stage of the proceedings beginning with an application to make the decree final. Where there is no possibility of giving the parties a date for further hearing, then the other side must be given a notice when the proceedings are re-opened by one party or the other. To ignore this rule would be to neglect the maxim audi alteram partem. Under Order XXI, rule 22, it is provided that in execution cases notice to the judgment-debtor need be given only if the application is made more than a year after the date of the decree. This seems at first sight to be an exception to the rule laid down by the maxim, but it is not really so. If nothing at all were said about noticing the other side then a notice would have to issue. What rule 22 really means is that the rule is that the other side should be noticed, but that rule need not be observed if the application is made less than a year after the date of the decree. This is not an execution case, but I have mentioned the point in order to show that there is no exception to the rule audi alteram partem, unless such an exception is made by legislation.

It is next urged for the appellants that the service on the minors personally was a valid service. No serious argument has been addressed in support of this contention, which I consider to be unsustainable. This plea certainly does not obtain adequate support in some remarks of Wilson, J., in Suresh Chunder Wum Chowdhry v. Jagat Chunaer Deb (6).

It is also suggested that the fact that Budhu was personally served was a sufficient service on the minors of whom he was the guardian, though he was not served as their guardian. I am not prepared to say that the service on a guardian personally as a party to the suit can never be a good service on the minors of whom he is the guardian, but I adhere to my opinion that in this case the service on Budhu cannot be regarded as a proper service of the notice to the minors through their guardian inasmuch as Budhu never subsequently acted in the capacity of the minors' guardian. When he applied in Exhibit P-10 to set aside the ex parte decree, he did so on his own behalf and not on behalf of the minors.

(6) 14 C. 204 at p. 215 (F. B.); 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 135.

VITHORA v. SEGO.

The main contention on behalf of the appellants is that the final decree is merely an ex parte decree in the ordinary sense of that term, liable to be set aside in the prescribed manner, and not a mere nullity not requiring to be set aside or liable to be set aside only by a separate suit. On the one hand we have a class of cases dealt with in Rashid-un-nisa v. Muhammad Ismail Khan (7), Sham Lal v. Ghasita (8), Hanuman Prasad v. Muhammad Ishaq (9), Khairaj Mal v. Daim (10) and Purna Chandra Kumar v. Bejoy Chand (11). These were all cases in which either no guardian at all was appointed at any stage of the suit or in which the guardian appointed was not legally competent to be a guardian or next friend. On the other hand we have a class of cases instanced by Raghubar Dyal Sahu v. Bhikya Lal Misser (12), where throughout the suit the infant has been duly represented by his guardian. In such a case where the infant after attaining majority seeks to set aside that decree by a separate suit, he can succeed only on proof of fraud or collusion on the part of his guardian. In the present case the plaintiffs were duly represented by their guardian and that representation undoubtedly extended until the termination of the suit by the passing of the final decree. After studying the cases Narsing Das v. Bibi Rafikan (13), Pran Nath Roy v. Mohesh Chandra Moitra (14), Radha Raman Shaha v. Pran Nath Roy (15), Khagenendra Nath Mahata v. Pran Nath Roy (16) and Puran Chand v. Sheo Dat Rai (17), it seems to me clear that the mere non-service of summons on a party to the suit is not a sufficient ground to set aside the decree in a fresh suit, though where the non-service is a part of a scheme of fraud the decree might be set aside. There are no rulings exactly on all fours with the present case. The first question that arises is whether a minor who is duly represented by a guardian is in a better position than an adult. He would certainly be in a better position if he was not served because no guardian was appointed for him. If an ex parte decree is passed against a minor under Order XVII, rule 2, it appears to me that the remedy of the minor acting through his guardian lies in the provisions of Order IX, rule 13, and he cannot obtain relief in a separate suit unless the absence of the guardian has resulted in such injustice to the minor as would amount to gross negligence on the part of the guardian. In other words, a minor once represented by a guardian does not cease to be so represented merely because an ex parte decree is passed against him owing to the absence of his guardian.

The further question remains whether the minors in the present case can be said not to have been represented because no notice was served on their guardian at the opening of the fresh stage of the suit. After some consideration I am of opinion that the minors cannot be said not to have been represented by a guardian. They were represented, but an ex parte order was passed against them in circumstances which would have entitled their guardian to apply to have the ex parte decree set aside under Order IX, rule 13. The Court took steps to have the minors served but owing to a mistake of procedure they were not served. It appears to me that they are exactly in the same position as if their guardian had been served but had been unavoidably prevented from attending in circumstances which entitled him to have the ex parte decree set aside. In such circumstances I do not think it can be said that the minors were not represented at all.

The lower Court has held that there was no fraud, and I have held that there was no gross negligence on the part of the guardian, and I am of opinion in the special circumstances of the case that while the minors could have applied to set aside the ex parte decree under Order IX, rule 13, they cannot set aside the decree under a

(7) 3 Ind. Cas. 864; 31 A. 572; 13 C. W. N. 1182; 10 C. L. J. 318; 6 A. L. J. 822; 11 Bom. L. R. 1225; 6 M. L. T. 279; 19 M. L. J. 631; 36 I. A. 168 (P. C.).

(8) 23 A. 459.

(9) 28 A. 137; 2 A. L. J. 615; A. W. N. (1905) 229.

(10) 32 C. 296; 9 C. W. N. 201; 2 A. L. J. 71; 7 Bom. L. R. 1; 1 C. L. J. 584; 32 I. A. 23; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 734 (P. C.).

(11) 18 Ind. Cas. 859; 17 C. W. N. 549; 18 C. L. J. 18.

(12) 12 C. 69; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 48.

(13) 5 Ind. Cas. 198; 37 C. 197; 11 C. L. J. 250; 14 C. W. N. 507.

(14) 24 C. 546; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1032.

(15) 28 C. 475; 5 C. W. N. 757.

(16) 29 C. 895; 29 I. A. 99; 6 C. W. N. 473; 4 Bom. L. R. 363; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 206 (P. C.).

(17) 29 A. 212; 4 A. L. J. 51; A. W. N. (1907) 31.

SALAMAT RAI v. KANSHI RAM.

fresh suit since the decree was not a nullity but an ex parte decree within the ordinary meaning of that term. To hold otherwise would, in my opinion, be to hold that when a defendant is entitled to get a decree set aside under Order IX, rule 13, he is always as a matter of course entitled to set aside the decree by a separate suit if he is a minor. I do not find anything in the circumstances of this case to entitle the plaintiffs to any special consideration.

For the above reasons I set aside the decree of the District Judge and dismiss the suit with costs in both Courts.

Decree set aside.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.
MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL
No. 2757 of 1916.

January 22, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevie.

SALAMAT RAI—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

KANSHI RAM—PLAINTIFF, AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Pre-emption—Land on outskirts of town included in Municipal limits for certain purposes, whether becomes part of town—"Owner", who is.

The mere fact that for certain reasons the Local Government has seen fit to include a part of the Premgarh estate within the Municipal limits of Hoshiarpur city, does not necessarily mean that the locality in question has become a part of the town for purposes of pre-emption. Although the site in dispute is situate between the Hoshiarpur city and the railway station, and shops have sprung up in the vicinity, it cannot be said that the town has extended so far. [p. 887, col. 2.]

Where a person buys agricultural land assessed to revenue and becomes one of the khevatdars, he must be regarded as an owner of the estate for purposes of pre-emption, no matter whether the area he buys is small and whether he pays only a few annas as revenue: and he does not cease to be such owner merely because he walls off the land and stores iron thereon. [p. 887, col. 2; p. 888, col. 1.]

Miscellaneous second appeal from the order of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 16th July 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 7th December 1915, dismissing the claim and remanding the case for trial and decision of the remaining two issues.

Bakshi Tek Chand and Lala Balwant Rai, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from an order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23. The facts are given in the judgments of the lower Courts.

It is first argued before me that the land in suit is in a town. It is true that it is now within Municipal limits, but it still remains a part of the estate known as Premgarh village. It is between Hoshiarpur city and the railway station and, though shops have sprung up in the vicinity, I do not think it can be said that the town itself has extended so far and I do not see that the mere fact that for certain reasons the Local Government has seen fit to include a part of the Premgarh estate within Municipal limits necessarily means that the locality in question has become a part of the town.

The next question urged is, that plaintiff by his purchase of a small plot of land, 1 kanal 14 marlas in area, for building purposes has not become an "owner of the estate," or that if he did become such an owner by his purchase, he has ceased to be such an owner by his purchase, having walled the land which he bought and turned it into a store. Here several well-known rulings are cited. In some it has been held that an owner of a site in the abadi, or an owner of a share in a well, or a purchaser of a share in a pond does not become an owner in the estate. But in most at least of the rulings one of the main tests seems to be whether the claimant's purchase is assessed to land revenue. The term "owners of the estate" has generally been interpreted as meaning the khevatdars or body of men who pay the land revenue. Here plaintiff has bought agricultural land assessed to revenue, and has become one of the khevatdars. It is true that the area is small and that he only pays a few annas as revenue, but still he is a khevatdar and so I think he must be regarded as an owner of the estate. I can see no good reason for holding that he did not become such an owner because of his purpose in buying, i.e., to build a house or that he has ceased to be such an owner by the fact that he has walled off his land and stores iron there.

RAMESWAR LAL BHAGAT v. GIRWAR PRASAD SINGH.

This appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 527 AND 538 OF 1915.

August 14, 1917.

Present:—Sir Edward Chamier, Kt.,

Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

RAMESWAR LAL BHAGAT—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

Raj Kumar GIRWAR PRASAD SINGH

AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Jagir, transfers of portions of, nature and effect of—Resumption, right of—Burden of proof

A jagirdar sold all his rights in certain villages to certain Chowdhris, who in turn sold all their rights in those villages to the ancestor of the plaintiff. The defendants, who were the descendants of the original jagirdar, contended that the transfer to the Chowdhris was not a sale, but merely a grant of baidari tenure according to which only heirs male of the grantee could succeed, and that as the last holder of the tenure had left no male issue, the plaintiff being his daughter's son, they were entitled to resume the villages. It was found that the ancestors of the plaintiff had been in possession of the villages for generations and that the words used in respect of the transfers of the villages were bikri and farokht:

Held, that the burden was on the defendants to prove their right to resume both as against the Chowdhris and as against the ancestors of the plaintiff. [p. 890, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Palamanu, dated the 24th August 1915.

Messrs. Khurshed Hasnain and Jamiini Mohan Mukherji, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Pugh, Mritunjay Lal and R. L. Dutt, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, C. J.—These appeals arise out of suits brought by the appellant to establish his right to three villages Gurturi, Kolhua and Gorgo lying in Parganah and District Palamanu. The defendants to the two suits are different but the questions for decision are the same. The two suits were tried together in the Court below and they may be disposed of by one judgment.

At the beginning of the 19th century Gurturi and Kolhua were part of the Jagir of Sheo Prasad Singh in the Zemindari or Raj of Raja Churaman Rai of Palamanu. In 1800 Sheo Prasad Singh transferred them to some Chowdhris, who in 1806 transferred them to Manog Bhagat. Similarly, Gongo was part of the Jagir of Pati Singh in the same Raj. In 1800 he transferred it to the above-mentioned Chowdhris, who in 1807 transferred it to Manog Bhagat. From 1807 the history of all three villages is the same. Manog was succeeded first by his widows Ram Kuer and Phool Kuer and subsequently by Sheo Prasad Bhagat who claimed to have been adopted by him. Sheo Prasad was succeeded by his three sons of whom the survivor Janki Charan Bhagat died in 1901. Sonkali Koer his widow took possession. The defendants in each of these cases disputed her right and there were compromises whereby she was allowed to retain 10 annas in two villages and 12 annas in the third. The plaintiff, however, maintains that she in fact retained possession of the whole of the three villages. Sonkali died in 1907. The plaintiff, who is son of a daughter of Janki Charan, took possession but his right was disputed and these suits were brought in 1913. The defendants are descendants of the original Jagirdars.

Both parties have quoted freely from the District Gazetteer and Sir W. Hunter's Statistical Account of Bengal, Volume 16. These publications shew that the British took possession of the Parganah in 1773 and settled it with the Raja for 5 years. In 1786, a second settlement was made with Raja Churaman Rai, who was a minor. In 1789 a third settlement was made by a Mr. Leslie who drew up a list of Jagirdars and fixed the revenue due from them to the Raja. Churaman Rai on attaining majority assumed the management of his estate, but he fell into arrears with the revenue and the estate was sold to the Government in 1814. Government granted it to another Raja in 1816, but resumed it two years later and has held it ever since. In 1818 the amount payable by the Jagirdars was re-fixed. In 1839 and 1872 other settlements were made. Lastly, in 1894, the settlement was made which is now in force. Prior to the British conquest, the Chero rulers had created a number of Jagirs and other tenures resumable on failure of male heirs of the grantees, retaining the remainder of the Parganah as their khalsa or personal property. When Government came into possession, the Jagirdars were allowed to retain their Jagirs, the khalsa villages alone remaining in the direct possession of Government, and it is these which now form what is known as the Palamau Government estate.

RAMESWAR LAL BHAGAT v. GIRWAR PRASAD SINGH.

The following proviso was published as one of the conditions of the sale at which the Government purchased in 1814, "Whereas there are several tenants in the Parganah Palamau, commonly termed Jagirdars, who have for a long period held their lands at a fixed and easy rent, it is hereby notified that the abovementioned persons are to be continued in possession by the purchaser and his heirs or by whatever person the estate may be hereafter possessed in consequence of private or public sale or any other kind of transfer, on their agreeing to such an equitable jama as may be determined by the Assistant Collector at Ramgarh; should the proprietor of the estate and the Jagirdars disagree as to the term of settlement, subject to an appeal to the Court of Justice." Government succeeded to the rights of the old rulers and did not resume the Jagirs but proceeded to assess them to rent. No distinction was made between the different classes of Jagirs and in practice they were recognized as both heritable and permanent. In 1894 it was found that they had been freely transferred either in whole or in part by sale; in every case but one, male heirs of the original grantee were in existence, and while in the case of the larger fiefs the custom of primogeniture had been followed, in the smaller ones, which form the majority, the tenures had been freely divided amongst members of the family like any ordinary property. This being the state of affairs it was decided in 1895 that the transferability of all such tenures should be recognized and the right of resumption on failure of male heirs abandoned once for all, that all transferees should be admitted to registration and that the tenures should thenceforth be raised to the position of revenue paying estates.

The plaintiff's case is that the original Jagirdars sold all their rights in the 3 villages to the Chowdhris who in turn sold all their rights to Manog Bhagat, and that the (plaintiff) as the heir of Janki Charan, grandson of Manog, is consequently entitled to the villages.

The defendants pleaded that they knew nothing of the alleged sale by their ancestors to the Chowdhris or of the alleged sale by the Chowdhris to Manog Bhagat and that the truth was that their ancestors, who originally held the villages as Jagirdars with rights heritable by heirs male only, had granted them to Manog Bhagat in baidari tenure according to which only heirs male could succeed and as Janki Charan Bhagat had left no male issue, they, the defendants, were entitled to resume the villages. The greater part of this defence is obviously false and has been abandoned. There is, as will be seen later, overwhelming evidence that the original Jagirdar transferred the villages to the Chowdhris, that the Chowdhris transferred them to Manog Bhagat, and that the defendants' ancestors merely recognized the transfer to him.

The defendants admit that their ancestors recognized the right of Sheo Prasad Bhagat to succeed Manog Bhagat. It is common ground that the defendants' ancestors held the villages subject to the Raja's right of resumption on failure of male heirs. If the defendants' ancestors transferred all their rights to the Chowdhris and the latter transferred all their rights to Manog Bhagat, it would appear that the defendants are not entitled to resume the villages. As descendants of the original Jagirdars they could have no such right and as successors to the Government or the Raja by reason of the action taken in 1895 the defendants are in no better position in this respect.

It appears to me that these appeals might be allowed and the claim of the plaintiff decreed on the short ground that the defendants have not shown that they have any right to resume against the Chowdhris. The Bhagats have been in possession of the villages for generations under a transfer from the Chowdhris, who in turn obtained the villages from the defendants' ancestors. It appears to me that it is for the defendants to prove their right to resume both as against the Chowdhris and as against the Bhagats. If the burden of proof is on them, they have certainly failed to discharge it. The fourth issue in the case was, "Had the Chowdhris an absolute saleable title to the property in suit or only a limited right to it subject to resumption on failure of male heirs?" I do not understand the passage at the close of the Subordinate Judge's judgment to the effect that it is not open to the plaintiff to prove that there is a descendant of the Chowdhris still living.

RAMESWAR LAL BHAGAT v. GIRWAR PRASAD SINGH.

However, as the case may go before a higher Tribunal and is one of considerable interest in the District, I propose to examine the evidence with a view to determining, as if the burden of proof was on the plaintiff, what was the nature and what was the effect of the transfers by the Jagirdars to the Chowdhris and by the Chowdhris to Manog Bhagat.

The plaintiff alleges that his predecessors lost a number of valuable documents relating to these villages in 1877 and he asked the Subordinate Judge to admit secondary evidence of them. The Subordinate Judge, for reasons which seem to me to be wholly insufficient, ruled that the loss of the documents had not been proved. I am aware that it has been held that the question whether a case has been made out for the reception of secondary evidence is primarily one for the Trial Court. But in the present instance I am of opinion that there has been a clear miscarriage. On May 17th, 1877, Thakur Sahai, General Agent of Jasodanund Bhagat, reported at the Patna Police Station that a large number of documents and some other property had been stolen from him two days before at Gurturi, a village in the interior. He gave a list of the documents and property with full details and stated that two of them had been subsequently recovered. No reason can be suggested why the Bhagats should have decided to make away with a mass of important documents. The present plaintiff is not responsible for the report. He gave evidence himself and all that he could say was that such a report was made and that he had not been able to find the documents although he had searched for them. I see no reason whatever for rejecting his statement and none has been given by the Subordinate Judge. I am clearly of opinion that secondary evidence of the contents of the lost deeds is admissible. The Subordinate Judge makes a point of the non-production of the waguzasht in favour of Manog Bhagat, but that document must have been executed a great many years ago, probably about 80 years ago, and it is not surprising that it is not forthcoming. Nor, I may note, did the defendants call upon the plaintiff to produce it or cross-examine the plaintiff about it.

The earliest documents in order of date are copies of petitions presented by an agent of Manog Bhagat in September 1810 (Exhibits 9 and 10). They recite the sale of the villages by the Thakurs to the Chowdhris and by the Chowdhris to Manog, state that Manog has been paying the revenue of the villages (Rs. 19.4.0 and Rs. 36) and pray that the villages may be exempted from the then impending sale of the Raj. These petitions refer to the transfers as out-and-out sales. At that time there can have been no object in misrepresenting the nature of the transfers. Moreover, the deeds were produced for inspection. In 1840 the Chowdhris sued Sheo Prasad Bhagat for possession of the villages on the allegation that they had only mortgaged them to Manog (Exhibit 11). The suit was dismissed in January 1843. A re-trial was ordered and took place in 1856 with the same result (Exhibits 12 and 13). The judgment of 1843 is important, not only because Sheo Prasad succeeded in shewing that there had been an out-and-out sale to Manog but because it shews that the deeds by which the Thakurs transferred to the Chowdhris were before the Court and were regarded by the Court as deeds of sale. It also recites a waguzasht granted by the Thakurs to Manog recognizing the sale to him. The words used are bikri and farokht, which mean sale and nothing else. The waguzasht, as its name shews, cannot be regarded as a fresh grant to Manog. In 1886 we find the Jagirdar saying in answer to a question regarding the sale or mortgage of portions of his Jagir that 12 villages had been sold, and in the details he says that Gurturi is in possession of Sheo Prasad Bhagat [see Exhibits 4 (b) and 4 (c)]. In 1893 the statement is repeated by the Jagirdar's agent, who said that Gurturi had been sold to Sheo Prasad Bhagat by his predecessor [Exhibits 4 and 4 (a)]. In the Jagirdari registers [Exhibits 14 and 14 (a)] Gurturi and Kolhua appear as Nos. 5 and 6 in one list and Gongo as No. 6, in another, and it is stated that they are held by Janaki Prasad Bhagat by purchase. All these documents point unmistakably to the transfers by the Thakurs and Chowdhris having been sales out-and-out. There is no hint at any thing in the shape of a sub-Jagir. There appears to have been out-and-out sales for a stated and large consideration. The plaintiff produced a large number of receipts for payments made by his predecessors [Exhibits 1 (a), (ab), (ap), (a₁), (b), (c), (d), (e), (g), (h), (k), (n), (o), (r), (z)] to show that they were described as purchasers. The word used is kharidar. We also find the words hai and kharidigi in these documents. All these words imply a sale. The defendants seek to discount the value of these documents by pointing out that the sums acknowledged were usually described as rent. I do not consider that the word rent militates against the view that the transfers were out-and-out sales. The holders of the villages were in the position of tenure-holders and in earlier years at all events they were paying to a person in the position of a Zemindar. Defendants' Exhibit G, a letter from the Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, explains the position clearly. Much stress was laid by the defendants on the fact that their predecessors paid the road cess [Exhibits 5 and 5 (a)], but it is difficult to see who else could have paid it in the first instance. The Jagirdars had sold portions only of their Jagirs, Government seems to have recovered from the Jagirdars whom they treated in recent years almost as Zemindars (as shown by the Gazetteer quoted above) and the Jagirdars recovered from each of the transferees his quota of the revenue or whatever he was bound to pay under the terms of his purchase. Attention was also drawn to the fact that whereas in 1812 the plaintiff's predecessor paid Rs. 19-4-0 for Gurturi and Kolhua and Rs. 36 for Gongo (Exhibits 2 and 10), he paid Rs. 27-9-0 and Rs. 42-6-0 in 1896. This does not appear to be a matter of any great importance. Exhibit 1 (ap) shows that the amount of the payments for Gurturi and Kolhua must have been constant for over half a century at all events. The additional amount may have been due to one of many readjustments of the revenue by the Government. Nor can one attach great importance to the fact that on one occasion some kind of abwab (ruqumat) was paid, for the defendants have for a long time been in the position of superior Zemindars qua the plaintiff in fact, if not in law.

RAMESWAR LAI BHAGAT V. GIRWAR PRASAD SINGH.

The defendants rely on some litigation between Sheo Prasad Bhagat and the Government regarding a village called Kesmar, which was purchased from Raja Churaman Rai by the Chowdhris and sold by them to Manog Bhagat. On the death of Manog the Government refused to recognize Sheo Prasad as his adopted son and Sheo Prasad brought a suit for a declaration of his title (Exhibits H, I and J). Sheo Prasad failed to prove his adoption against the Government and his suit was dismissed. One of the points taken in the case was that Government had no right to resume unless and until it was shown that there was no heir of the Chowdhris alive. This plea was brushed aside on the ground that after the purchase by Government the Chowdhris had not been recognized at all. That case appears to have no bearing whatever on the present case.

Both sides have filed copies of judgments in other cases as precedents which they wish us to apply or follow. Exhibits F, L, M, N, P and R filed by the defendants show that grants by Rajas in Palamau and elsewhere in Chota Nagpur are ordinarily resumable on failure of male lineal descendants. This is not disputed by the plaintiff, whose case is that he is entitled to retain his villages because there are still in existence male lineal descendants of the Jagirdar.

The judgment, Exhibit S, is produced to show that the word bai (which ordinarily means sale) is often used in Palamau to denote a mukarrari. This does not assist the defendants. Lastly, defendants rely upon the case of Perkash Lal v. Rameshwar Nath Singh (1) as shewing that the words al aulad in a Chota Nagpur grant should be interpreted to mean male lineal descendants only. These words appear from Exhibit 11 to have been used in the endorsement on the sale deed by which the villages were transferred to Manog Bhagat, but they are accompanied by the words naslan bad naslan (generation after generation) and we have no direct evidence as to the language used in the transfer by the Thakurs to the Chowdhris.

SRISTIDHAR GHOSE v. KEDARESWAR BISWAS.

The plaintiff, on the other hand, relies upon Exhibit 19, a judgment of the Calcutta High Court in a case in which a Jagirdar had sold his rights to some Mahtons by a baipatr. The Mahtons sold their rights to the Bengal Coal Company. After that the Government abandoned their rights and converted the Jagirdari into milkiat or ownership. I do not think that that case has any bearing on the present cases and I do not feel at all satisfied that the decision was correct. It seems to have been held that the subsequent acquisition of the proprietary title operated to change the character of the right acquired by the Mahtons.

After a careful consideration of the evidence in these cases I have come to the conclusion that the decision of the Subordinate Judge cannot be supported.

In the documentary evidence which covers a period of over 80 years, the Chowdhris and the Bhagats are referred to invariably as purchasers. I am unable to believe that such words as bai, forokht and khariid, which mean sale and purchase, would have been used if the Chowdhris and the Bhagats had been only sub-Jagirdars. The circumstance that the widows of Manog Bhagat were allowed to take possession of villages shows that Manog's interest was not descendible to male heirs only. Assuming that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff, I hold that he has proved that the Chowdhris purchased the rights of the Jagirdars and that Manog purchased the rights of the Chowdhris. I hold that the defendants have entirely failed to prove that the Chowdhris or the Bhagats were sub-Jagirdars of the original Jagirdars. The attempt to establish the existence of a baidari tenure as a kind of sub-Jagir has signally failed. The word bai may be used loosely for a mukurrari as was said in one case, but that is a very different thing from using the word bai to indicate a sub-Jagir.

I would allow these appeals and give the plaintiff a decree for possession in each case with mesne profits from the date of dispossession to the date of delivery of possession in execution or the expiry of three years from the date of this decision, whichever event first occurs, the amount to be determined by the Court below.

I would also in each case give the plaintiff his costs in both Courts.

If this case is taken before a higher Tribunal the translation of the rubakars in the litigation which began in 1840 should be carefully revised. It is extremely inaccurate in some places.

SHARFUDDIN, J.—I agree.

Appeals allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2883 OF 1915.

April 26, 1918.

Present :—Sir Charles William Chitty, Kt., and Mr. Justice Smither.

SRISTIDHAR GHOSE AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KEDARESWAR BISWAS AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (XI of 1859), s. 52—Permanent tenure sold at revenue sale—Howla, whether affected by sale.

Within a resumed khas mahal there was a nim-osat taluk (i. e., permanent tenure), of which the last settlement had taken place in 1908. Under this nim-osat taluk there had existed a howla from 1863. The nim-osat taluk was sold in 1912 at a revenue sale under Act XI of 1859.

Held, that the sale of the nim-osat taluk did not affect the howla which had been in existence from before the last settlement of the nim-osat taluk. [p. 593, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Khulna, dated the 2nd August 1915, reversing that of the Munsif at Bagirhat, dated the 28th July 1914.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak (with him Babu Bepin Chandra Bose), for the Appellants.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is preferred by the plaintiffs and arises out of a suit brought by them to recover rent from the defendants Nos. 1 to 11 as osat howladars. The plaintiffs claimed as purchasers at a revenue sale of a 9-pie share in a nim-osat taluk, within a resumed khas mahal bearing Touzi No. 556. The revenue sale took place on 20th March 1912 (1318). The tenant defendants pleaded that they were not liable to pay rent direct to the plaintiffs inasmuch as there was in existence a howla created long ago by the outgoing owners of the nim-osat taluk in favour of themselves.

NAWAB BIBI V. MUHAMMAD DIN.

When the case first came on for hearing before us on 7th March last, we were of opinion that a remand would be necessary for the determination of several questions of fact. On further consideration, however, we came to the conclusion that all we required to know was when the nim-osat taluk was last re-settled. It was argued before us on behalf of the plaintiffs-appellants that the howla, if it existed, was annulled by the revenue sale in 1912. The date, therefore, of the last Settlement of the nim-osat taluk was clearly of the highest importance. We accordingly adjourned the case for the Vakils to obtain the necessary information from their clients. It is now conceded for the appellants that the last Settlement of the nim-osat taluk took place in 1908. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that the howla existed from 1290 (1883) and that rent was paid in respect of it down to 1316, two years after the final publication of the Record of Rights in Chait 1314. He further finds that it had an existence altogether separate from and independent of the nim-osat taluk. It follows that it could not be affected by the sale of the nim-osat taluk in 1912 (1318) (see section 52 of Act XI of 1859). In these circumstances it is clear that the plaintiffs cannot recover rent directly from the tenant defendants, and that their suit was rightly dismissed.

This appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1744 OF 1917.

April 10, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.
Musammat NAWAB BIBI—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT

V-78148

MUHAMMAD DIN—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Muhammadian Law—Dower, prompt, right to, accrual of—Dower, whether can be made conditional upon restitution of conjugal rights—Consummation, absence of, whether bars recovery of prompt dower.

The fact that a Court can make a decree for restitution of conjugal rights conditional on payment of prompt dower does not show that a wife's decree for prompt dower can be made conditional upon her living with her husband. [p. 894, col. 1.]

Prompt dower can be demanded by a wife at any time after the right thereto has vested in her whether before or after consummation and she can refuse all conjugal rights on the part of the husband until it is paid. [p. 894, col. 1.]

The right to prompt dower vests at marriage and it can be claimed by the wife at any time thereafter. It is a debt due by the husband to the wife and its payment cannot be made conditional on the wife living with her husband. [p. 894, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 21st March 1917, varying that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Gujrat, dated the 30th May 1916, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Appellant.

Sheikh Niaz Ali, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Musammat Nawab Bibi, plaintiff-appellant, sued her husband, Muhammad Din, defendant-respondent, for Rs. 250 on account of her prompt dower. Muhammad Din brought a cross suit against Musammat Nawab Bibi in which he claimed restitution of conjugal rights. Both the parties have been given decrees in their respective suits; but the lower Appellate Court has made the decree of Musammat Nawab Bibi conditional on her appearing in Court and agreeing to return with Muhammad Din to his house. The Court also made Muhammad Din's decree for restitution of conjugal rights conditional on his paying Rs. 250 for his wife into Court.

Musammat Nawab Bibi in second appeal asks that the condition attached to her decree should be struck out. In arguing the case on behalf of the appellant Mr. Mukand Lal Puri refers to Article 204 of Mulla's Muhammadian Law, CHAINU V. MANBODH.

to Wilson's Anglo-Muhammadan Law, 4th edition, page 122, paragraph 41, and to Muhammadan Law by Amir Ali, Volume II, page 503. In the last named book the following remarks occur:—

"When the right to the dower has once vested in the woman, it is not defeated or lost by any conduct on her part. For example when the marriage has been consummated, or a 'valid retirement' has taken place, the woman's right to her dower is not lost by her subsequent apostasy or adultery. * * * * *

The prompt portion of the mahr may be realized by the wife at any time before or after consummation * *

* * * The great difference between prompt and deferred dower is this, the portion of the dower specified in the contract as prompt is payable and realizable at once, and the wife can refuse all conjugal rights on the part of the husband until it is paid."

These extracts show that prompt dower can be demanded by a wife at any time after the right thereto has vested in her. The right vests at marriage and can be claimed by the wife at any time thereafter. It is a debt due by the husband to the wife, and no authority has been referred to which lays down that the payment of it can be made conditional on the wife living with her husband. Mr. Niaz Ali on behalf of the respondent has referred to Bai Hansa v. Abdulla Mustaffa (1), in which it was held that after consummation of marriage non-payment of dower, even though proved, cannot be pleaded in defence of an action for restitution of conjugal rights. This and other rulings of a similar nature do not, however, help the respondent. Nor does the fact that a Court can make a decree for restitution of conjugal rights conditional on payment of prompt dower show that a wife's decree for prompt dower can be made conditional upon her living with her husband.

It should further be noted that the respondent never pleaded that the payment should be made conditional. His defence was that the amount of dower agreed upon was only Rs. 32 and he expressed his willingness to pay half of that on account of prompt dower. The only question at issue in the case was, whether the dower was Rs. 32 or Rs. 500 as alleged by the plaintiff.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and modifying the order of the lower Appellate Court grant the plaintiff unconditional decree for Rs. 250 on account of her prompt dower. I further direct that the respondent shall pay the appellant's costs in this Court.

Appeal accepted.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No 236 OF 1917.

April 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

CHAINU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MANBODH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings—Case closed for judgment—Public path—Encroachment, suit for removal of, by private person—Special damage, proof of.

Plaintiff brought a suit for possession of a site on the ground of his having been the owner of the same. The case was closed for judgment for 30th November 1916. The plaintiff applied to the Court on 25th November 1916, praying that a right of way six cubits broad should be given to him. The Trial Court held that the plaintiff was not the owner of the site, but it directed the defendant to remove his hut so as to allow a right of way as claimed by the plaintiff: [p. 895, col. 2.]

Held, that the plaintiff should not have been allowed to amend the plaint after the case had closed for judgment.

Special damage for obstruction of a highway has to be established in a case for the removal of an encroachment on the highway. [p. 895, col. 2.]

Bansilal Abirchand v. Atmaram Bapuji, 7 C. P. L. R. 97, followed.

Appeal against the decision of the Court of the District Judge, Raipur, in Civil Appeal No. 6 of 1917, dated the 5th March 1917, preferred against the decision of the Munsif, Dhamtari, in Civil Suit No. 537 of 1916, dated the 30th November 1916.

Mr. M. Chuckerbutty, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. R. Deo, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff's case as stated in the plaint was that he was the owner of a site situated at Mouza Sooni-Kalan, Tahsil Dhamtari, that he had lent it to the defendant to keep his husking machine on and that in 1916 defendant took exclusive possession of the site and built himself a new hut on it. Plaintiff's story as regards the ownership of this particular plot has been held not to be proved by both Courts. The case was closed for judgment in the Trial Court on the 23rd November 1916, it being then fixed for the 30th November 1916. On the 25th November 1916 the plaintiff appeared with his Pleader, defendant being in person, and the Pleader presented an application saying that if plaintiff's possession over the site and hut were not proved, he prays that "the way of six cubits in breadth, as it was previously, may be given to me so that I may not be put to any inconvenience in going and coming." On this the defendant was examined; he denied having encroached on the lane which he admitted was used by the plaintiff. He further said: "I do not want to produce any fresh evidence on this point." The Munsif thereupon framed the additional issue, 'Whether defendant had encroached upon the lane in question; if so, to what extent.' He found that there had been encroachment to the extent of three feet and decreed that defendant should remove his new hut so as to restore the lane to its former breadth. On appeal the District Judge, Raipur, finds that there had been no proper amendment of the plaint and that the relief given could not have been granted and looking to the time when the relief granted was asked for, finds that the first Court should have refused it and not allowed the plaintiff at the last stage of his case to make out a fresh case. He, therefore, allowed the appeal.

DEBI SARAN SINGH v. RAJBANS NATH DUBEY.

Here it is contended that the Trial Court's decree as to the lane should be restored. It seems to me that the plaintiff should not have been allowed to ask for this further relief after the case had been closed for judgment. The defendant on that day was not represented by a Pleader and it is doubtful if he understood exactly what the effect of his calling no further evidence meant. Various questions would have to be gone into, for instance, whether the lane was a public or a private one and if the former, what particular damage had been suffered by the plaintiff, i. e., damage beyond what was suffered by others entitled to use the same lane. Special damages for obstruction of a highway have to be established in a case of this nature: see Bansilal Abirchand v. Atmaram Bapuji (1). This matter must be fought out in a separate suit, for I decline to allow, the plaintiff to pitchfork this claim into the case at the stage he did. I, therefore, uphold the decision of the District Judge dismissing the appeal.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 7 C. P. L. R. 97.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 194 OF 1914.

January 25, 1918.

Persent:—Mr. Justice Chapman and Mr. Justice Atkinson.

DEBI SARAN SINGH AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAJBANS NATH DUBEY AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 54—Bengal Estates Partition Act (V B. C. of 1897), ss. 10, 11, 12—Partition of revenue-paying estate—Civil Court decree for partition, execution of—Collector, power of—Partition, whether can be re-opened.

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to execute a decree for partition of a revenue-paying estate, provided that it does not assume jurisdiction to partition the liability for the land revenue. In the event of a party applying to the Collector for a partition of the land revenue after partition has been effected by the Civil Court, it would be open to the Collector to re-consider the allotment of the shares granted in the Civil Court proceeding. [p. 896, col. 2.]

There is no principle of law which enables a Civil Court to re-open a partition properly made under a Civil Court decree otherwise than by proceedings by way of review. The effect of the final decree of a Civil Court for partition is to put an end to the co-tenancy and to vest in each person or group a sole estate in a specific property or allotment. The law does not provide for a suit in the Civil Courts under which these separated estates can be divested and a co-tenancy re-created for the purpose of making a fresh partition. [p. 896, col. 2; p. 897, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decision of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Gaya, dated the 30th March 1914.

DEBI SARAN SINGH v. RAJEANS NATH DUBEY.

Messrs. Lachhmi Narain Singh and Jal Gobind Singh, for the Appellants.

Mr. Khurshed Hasnain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAPMAN, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for partition and for possession of a 2-annas 3 dams odd share in an estate purchased at a sale for arrears of revenue on the 5th June 1901. The plaintiff alleges that he was dispossessed in 1912. The share that was purchased by the plaintiff is an Ijmali or residuary share, that is to say, the share remaining after the creation of separate accounts in respect of other shares in the estate under the Revenue Sales Act. The defendants Nos. 17 to 22 who did not contest the suit represented, according to the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge against which there has been no appeal, a share of 5 dams only. The plaintiff claimed a partition of the entire estate. The remainder of the share-holders who contested the suit pleaded that the plaintiff was not entitled to a partition of the entire estate, inasmuch as there had been a previous partition on the 27th September 1893 under a decree of the Civil Court. Under that decree the estate had been divided into 12 separate shares. The residuary share purchased by the plaintiff fell within certain of the separated shares or pattis. The defendants' contention was that the plaintiff was entitled only to have his share carved out of these pattis. Their case was that the remaining 7 separated pattis should not be interfered with. This contention was overruled by the learned Subordinate Judge on the ground that the plaintiff by his purchase of the residuary share acquired an undivided share in the entire estate and that he was not bound by the previous partition. The defendants now appeal to this Court.

The question we have to determine is connected with the concurrent jurisdiction of the Collector and of the Civil Court in the matter of partitions. The Collector is responsible for the collection of the land revenue and, with that in view, the Collector has under the various Estates Partition Acts been charged with the jurisdiction of making partition of revenue-paying estates including the partition of liability to land revenue. This jurisdiction is given to the Collector with the object of ensuring that the security for the land revenue shall not be imperilled by the manner in which the partition is effected. The Civil Courts have jurisdiction to grant decrees for partition of revenue paying estates, but the Code of Civil Procedure requires that the execution of the decrees for partition shall be effected by the Collector, see section 51 of the present Code of Civil Procedure. Under the decision of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Jogdishury Deba v. Kailash Chundra Lahiry (1), however, the majority of the Judges took the view that a Civil Court has jurisdiction to execute a decree for partition of a revenue-paying estate provided that it does not assume jurisdiction to partition the liability for the land revenue. This view of the matter has been confirmed by the terms of section 12 of the Estates Partition Act, 1897. It is thus possible to say that in the event of a party applying to the Collector for a partition of the land revenue after partition has been effected by the Civil Court, it would be open to the Collector to reconsider the allotment of the shares granted in the Civil Court proceeding.

While, however, the jurisdiction of the Collector to re-open a partition made by the Civil Court may possibly have been retained, there is nothing in any of the Statutes and certainly not in any principle of law which would enable a Civil Court to re-open a partition properly made under a Civil Court decree otherwise than by proceedings by way of review. This view of the matter is based both upon the principle of res judicata which was applied in the case of a previous partition by the Privy Council in the case of Nalini Kanta Lahiri v. Sarnamoyi Debya (2), and also upon the principle that the effect of the final decree of a Civil Court for partition is to put an end to co-tenancy and to vest in each person or group a sole estate in a specific property or allotment. The law does not provide for a suit in the Civil Court under which these separated estates can be divested and a co-tenancy re-created for the purpose of making a fresh partition.

(1) 24 C. 725; 1 C. W. N. 374; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1152 (F. B.).

(2) 24 Ind. Cas. 294; 19 C. W. N. 531; 27 M. L. J. 76; 1 L. W. 607; 16 M. L. T. 544; (1914) M. W. N. 948; 21 C. L. J. 23; 17 Bom. L. R. 1 (P. C.).

DERI SARAN SINGH v. RAJBANS NATH DEBEY.

The learned Subordinate Judge has taken a different view upon the authority of the case of Gungadeen Misser v. Kheeroo Mundul (3) That was a decision of the year 1874. The facts of that case appear from the judgment to be as follows:—

A share holder in a revenue-paying estate had been in exclusive possession of 25 bighas of land, the subject of the suit, together with other land in lien of his undivided share in the estate. The plaintiff purchased the 25 bighas of land above referred to from this share holder. The contesting defendants had purchased the share of certain other co sharers at a revenue sale. The plaintiff's contention was that these contesting defendants by their purchase at the auction sale had obtained merely a right to exclusive possession of specific portions of the estate held by the defaulting share-holders whose shares these contesting defendants had purchased. The argument was that inasmuch as the defaulting share-holders had been content to hold exclusive possession of specific portions of the revenue-paying estate in lien of their undivided share, the contesting defendants who purchased the defaulting shares were entitled only to get those specific portions. It appears that the defaulting share-holders had obtained a separation of accounts under section 10 of the Revenue Sales Act and not under section 11. The Judges held that the plaintiffs' suit must be dismissed upon the ground that under the terms of the Revenue Sales Act where an account has been separated under section 10 and the corresponding share is sold, what is sold is an undivided share and not any specific portion of the estate, and that to enable the plaintiff to succeed in such a suit would be to introduce uncertainty into the auction sales and the security of the land revenue. The report in the Bengal Law Reporter is imperfect. A fuller report of the judgment will be found in Gungadeen Misser v. Kheeroo Mundul (3). It is not clear from that report that there had in fact been a regular partition effecting the complete separation of the interests of the share holders. Phear, J., who delivered the judgment said that the different share-holders had by some sort of private partition come to among themselves appropriated different portions of the mahal; but the Judges did not expressly find that there had been such a complete partition as to put an end to the condition of co tenancy. In such a case no question of res judicata or of the effect of a Civil Court decree for partition arises. That case obviously would be no authority to justify us in holding that a partition effected by a Civil Court decree can be re-opened in a subsequent suit in a Civil Court. I would also be disposed to qualify the statement of the law made in that case. It would be more correct to say that when a share in respect of which a separate account has been opened under section 10, or a residuary share is sold under the Revenue Sales Act, the extent to which the share must be held to be undivided will depend on the facts of each case. It may be that the share remains undivided only in respect of liability for land revenue and is divided in every other respect subject to the power of the Collector to re-adjust the allotments in the event of the liability for land revenue being partitioned by him. In the present case the plaintiff asked that the liability to land revenue should remain joint as before.

(3) 14 B. L. R. 170; 22 W. R. 419.

The case of Gungadeen Misser v. Kheeroo Mandal (3) was referred to with approval in the case of Annoda Prasol Ghose v. Rajendra Kumar Ghose (4) and in the cases of Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prasad (5) and Kumar Kalmand Singh v. Syed Sarafat Hossein (6). These cases do not carry the matter any further and certainly provide no authority for the contention that a decree for partition effected by a Civil Court does not finally terminate the condition of a co tenancy and put an end to all further right to partition so far as any rate as the Civil Courts are concerned.

In the case of Moonshee Buzlool Rahman v. Pran Dhar Dutt (7) it was held that an auction-purchaser of the rights of Government in an estate sold for arrears of revenue is not bound by a decision previously obtained to which the defaulting proprietor was a party, and this principle has been

(4) 29 C. 223; 6 C. W. N. 375.

(5) 7 C. L. J. 1.

(6) 12 C. W. N. 528.

(7) 8 W. R. 222.

LAXMAN RAO V. VITHOBA.

extended to the case of an auction-purchaser of an entire estate at a sale under the Revenue Sales Act [Kanta Proshad Hajari v. Abdul Jamir Sadagar (8), Gokul Chandra Das v. Hara Sundari Dasi (9) and Gadadhar Bose v. Kadha Charan Poddar (10)]. But the principle has never been applied to the purchaser of the share of an estate at a revenue sale.

In the present case it would be obviously most inequitable that the properties, created into separate estates so far back as 1893 and separately enjoyed now for some 25 years, should be again thrown into the hotchpot. We set aside the judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge and, in lieu thereof, we direct that there be a preliminary decree for a partition of the plaintiff's share in the pattis created by the previous partition in which the share purchased by him now lies. These pattis will be ascertained by the Subordinate Judge and a preliminary decree made by him accordingly. In order to make an equitable partition of the plaintiff's share in these pattis, it may be necessary to make a fresh partition of the defendants' share also in these pattis. The defendants are entitled to their costs in this Court and to half their costs in the Court below. In assessing the costs in this Court no allowance should be given for the preparation of the paper-book having regard to the reckless manner in which numbers of unnecessary papers were included in it.

ATKINSON, J.—I concur.

Appeal allowed.

(8) 8 C. W. N. 676.

(9) 9 C. W. N. 383.

(10) 34 C. 868.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 155 OF 1914.

June 24, 1915.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman,
Kt., J. C.

LAXMAN RAO—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT
versus

VITHOBA—DEFENDANT—NON-APPLICANT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XVII, r. 1
(1)—Adjournment, power of Court to grant—Order refusing adjournment, whether appealable—Appellate Court, discretion of, to interfere with order refusing adjournment—Evidence Act (1 of 1872), s. 162—Summoning Government servant to produce document—Discretion of Court—Procedure.

Under rule 1 (1), Order XVII, of the Civil Procedure Code, a Court may at any time grant an adjournment if sufficient cause is shown; but no appeal is allowed from an order refusing adjournment and even where the refusal is impeached in an appeal from the decree, an Appellate Court is generally disinclined to interfere with the trial Judge's exercise of his discretion. [p. 899, col. 1.]

Simon Elias v. Joravar Mull, 24 W. R. 202, relied upon.

If a Court decides to summon a Government official for the production of certain documents, it should only do so after careful consideration and once the summons has been issued, production should ordinarily be insisted on if the party who obtained the summons so desires. [p. 899, col. 2; p. 900, col. 1.]

Application for revision of the decree of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Nagpur, dated the 10th February 1914, in Suit No. 2291 of 1913.

Mr. R. B. Gadgil, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application for revision of a decree dismissing with costs the applicant's suit against the non-applicant.

The parties were both head constables at Kamptee Police station house from the 1st to the 14th November 1910. The applicant's case is that he was the Muharrir during that period and in that capacity supplied oil and stationery worth Rs. 14-6-3 for Police purposes. Rupees 20 are allowed by Government for the said station house as monthly expenditure on oil, paper, pens and ink and the admitted practice is for this sum to be drawn and paid monthly in arrears to the Muharrir on production of his vouchers. The claim includes also Rs. 1-13-10, being the allowance for 14 days in respect of work done by the Muharrir in connection with the registration of vital statistics. His duty is performed jointly by the Muharrir and the Madadgar who divide between them the sanctioned allowance of Rs. 6 per mensem, the Muharrir taking Rs. 4 and the Madadgar Rs. 2 in the event of the District Superintendent of Police or other proper authority deciding that the allowance has been duly earned.

The trial Judge has held that the defendant, not the plaintiff, was the Muharrir during the first 14 days of November 1910 and that the plaintiff has not established supply of the oil, etc., of which he claims the price.

LAXMAN RAO V. VITACBA.

In revision two points are pressed, one that production of two documents should have been enforced and the other that the reasons given for disbelieving the plaintiff's evidence are insufficient.

The documents in question are (1) a copy of the entry in the several diaries of the station house, generally known as the roznamcha, which notes transfer of charge from the plaintiff to the defendant on the 14th November 1910 with the charge report annexed thereto and (2) the station house register of purchases of oil and stationery and their distribution to Police Officers. On the 12th January 1914 the Inspector-General of Police was directed by summons issued in the form of a letter to produce these and other documents or cause them to be produced at the next hearing on the 7th February 1914. Instead of complying with this direction, as he was bound to do, the Inspector-General wrote intimating that he was "not prepared to sanction the production of the documents asked for". The plaintiff was represented by an experienced Pleader at the hearing of the 7th February, but the witnesses in support of the claim were examined and the case closed without any application to the Court for further action in respect of the aforesaid documents. The Judge fixed the 10th February for delivery of judgment and that date was duly adhered to, but the same day an application was filed asking that the documents should again be called for. This application was rejected on the ground that it had been preferred too late.

In my opinion it cannot be said that the lower Court acted illegally or irregularly in declining to adjourn the case. Under rule 1 (1), Order XVII, First Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code, the Court may at any time grant an adjournment if sufficient cause is shown; but no appeal is allowed from an order refusing adjournment, and even where refusal is impeached in an appeal from the decree, an Appellate Court is generally disinclined to interfere with the trial Judge's exercise of his discretion. See Simon Elias v. Joravar Mull (1). Moreover, the plaintiff did not really require the charge report which he wanted the Inspector-General to produce, inasmuch as a witness admitted that in the roznamcha transfer of the duties of Muharrir from the plaintiff to the defendant was recorded on the 14th November 1910, no reference being made therein to any earlier devolution of work. That the charge report did not mention any articles of stationery as made over to the defendant is expressly stated by the plaintiff's own witnesses, Hiralal and Chandrabhan constables stationed at Kamptee on November 1910, the latter still there. The register of purchases is not to be found in the list of registers prescribed in the Police Manual, P. V. V., Ch. II, Sec. IV nor is it spoken of by any of the plaintiff's witnesses.

The real dispute between the parties seems to be whether the plaintiff or the defendant actually did the work of Muharrir during the first 14 days of November 1910. That none of the entries in the cash book for that period are in the plaintiff's hand was admitted by the plaintiff's witness Chandrabhan to whom the book, produced by Mr. Sewell, A. D. S. P., was shown. Sitaram, D. W. No. 3, the shop-keeper who supplied the oil used in November, deposed that he dealt with the defendant and showed his bahi containing entries in the defendant's hand of those transactions. As to the credibility of the plaintiff's witnesses one is admittedly a friend of his, as to another the Judge recorded a note to the effect that his manner was so hesitating as to show that he was "far from truthful", and the third till confronted with the cash book swore that the entries of the 8th and 12th November 1910 were in the plaintiff's handwriting. That P. W. Nos. 1 and 2 are not truthful persons seems to me indicated by their alleging an acknowledgment of liability and promise to discharge as made by the defendant shortly before the plaint was filed, a story to which there is no corresponding allegation in the plaint.

On the whole then I see no reason to interfere. The application is dismissed without notice to the opposite party.

In conclusion I think it desirable to direct the trial Judge's attention to section 162, Indian Evidence Act. If a Court decides to summon a Government official for the production of certain documents it should only do so after careful consideration, and once the summons has issued production should ordinarily be insisted on, if the party who obtained the summons so desires.

PUNJAB MUTUAL HINDU FAMILY RELIEF FUND, LAHORE v. SARDARI LAL.

Application dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 1144 OF 1917.

April 15, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

THE PUNJAB MUTUAL HINDU FAMILY RELIEF FUND, LAHORE—

DEFENDANT—PETITIONER

versus

SARDARI MAL—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 20—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 7, Exp. III—Cause of action—Place of suing—Money payable on death in Lahore—Death occurring at another place—Jurisdiction.

Plaintiff's mother who resided in Lahore became a member of the Punjab Mutual Hindu Family Relief Fund, Lahore. She died at Lyallpur where the plaintiff resided. The Fund's moneys which went to relieve distress on the death of members, were payable under the rules in Lahore. The Fund also carried on business at Lyallpur through an agent. Plaintiff brought a suit to recover the moneys from the Fund at Lyallpur:

Held, that the Lyallpur Court had jurisdiction to hear the suit against the Fund on the grounds (1) that the death of its member which was part of the cause of action occurred at Lyallpur and (2) that the defendant Fund carried on its business at Lyallpur through an agent.

Petition for revision of the order of the Munsif, 1st Class, Lyallpur, dated the 29th November 1917, holding that his Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Petitioner.

Lala Jagan Nath, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner is the Punjab Mutual Hindu Family Relief Fund, which I gather to be a benevolent society, managed by certain philanthropists, collecting subscriptions, which go to relieve distress on the death of members.

The plaintiff's mother resided in Lahore and became a member. According to the rules of the Fund moneys payable on deaths are payable in Lahore.

Plaintiff resides in Lyallpur and his mother died there. He has sued the Fund in Lyallpur and the Lyallpur Munsif has decided that he has jurisdiction on two grounds, (1) that the death which occurred in Lyallpur is part of the cause of action, and (2) that defendant carries on business in Lyallpur through an agent.

For petitioner it is contended on the strength of Salig Ram v. Ohuba Mal (1) that Explanation III of section 17 of the old Code is still good law. I think it would still apply to most cases, but it has been omitted from section 20 of the present Code, which speaks simply of a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action wholly or in part arises. The words underlined (italicised) are new, and found no part in the old Code. Now in a case like the present, is not the death the immediate cause of action? Had the death not occurred, how could the plaintiff sue at all? In Vishvendra Thirtha v. National Insurance Co. Ltd. (2), where plaintiff sued to recover on a life policy, it was held the suit could be brought where the policy-holder died. And in Read v. Brown (3) it was held that the cause of action comprises "Every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support... the judgment of the Court," and so though every other part of the cause of action had arisen outside the City of London, the plaintiff was allowed to sue within the city merely because the debt had been assigned to him within the city. I think then that the lower Court is right in regarding the fact of the death having occurred in Lyallpur as giving jurisdiction to the Lyallpur Courts. Further I think the lower Court is right in holding that the defendant carries on business in Lyallpur, seeing that the defendant keeps an agent there who, though he cannot enter into contracts, collects subscriptions and induces new members to join, supplying them with entrance forms which are filled in and sent to Lahore.

It may be urged on behalf of the defendant that it is very hard that the defendant

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 712; 34 A. 49; 8 A. L. J. 1160.

(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 392.

(3) (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 128; 58 L. J. Q. B. 120; 60 L. T. 250; 37 W. R. 131.

RAMADHIN CHAUDHURY v. KUMODINI DASSI.

should be liable to be sued in remote places. It may, however, be said in return that in some cases it would be very hard on a poor man living far from Lahore to be compelled to come to Lahore to sue the defendant, especially if the evidence which he had to produce (e.g., relating to the death of a person) was only obtainable at his own home and not in Lahore.

I reject the application but pass no order as to costs.

Appeal rejected.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 729
OF 1917.

April 30, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Thornhill.

Babu RAMADHIN CHAUDHURY

—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât KUMODINI DASSI AND ANOTHER

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Agreement to pay enhanced rate of rent after expiration of term of tenancy, validity of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 74.

An agreement by a tenant that if he holds over upon the expiry of the term he would pay rent at a higher rate than that which he paid during the term, is valid and enforceable. [p. 907, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Monghyr.

Mr. Jager Nath Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Atul Krishna Ray, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the judgment of the District Judge of Monghyr dismissing the appeal from the decree of the lower Court.

The plaintiffs-respondents' case is that the defendant took a settlement of 2 bighas 17 cottahs of land at an annual Jama of Rs. 8-8-0 under a registered Kabuliât, dated the 28th April 1903. In the Kabuliât it was stated that after the expiration of the term of five years he won't retain possession without taking fresh settlement and if he does retain possession, he shall go on paying rent to the Maliks at the rate of Rs. 5 per bigha so long as he shall so continue in possession, and to this payment neither he nor his heirs shall have any objection. The term mentioned in the Kabuliât expired in 1320 and the plaintiffs brought a suit to recover two years' rent, that is, for 1321 and 1322, at the rate of Rs. 5 per bigha.

The chief point for decision is whether the plaintiffs are entitled to recover rent at this rate. For the defence it is stated that the enhanced rate is in the nature of penalty. The plaintiffs rely on the case of Gunput Singh v. Josodhur Singh (1). In that case it was stipulated in the Kabuliâts "that after the expiration of the term of five years I shall cease to have any right to retain possession; that in case I fail to execute fresh Kabuliâts the Malik Zamindars shall have the power to realise rent at Rs. 5 per bigha on the strength of the Kabuliât and I shall have no objection to this."

It appears to me that the present case and the case referred to above are almost identical so far as the terms of the Kabuliâts are concerned. It remains only to consider whether this decision has been overruled or encreached upon.

In Gobind Mandar v. Banarsi Prasad (2) Mookerjee, J., followed the decision of Gunput Singh v. Josodhur Singh (1) referred to above, holding an agreement by the tenant that if he held over upon the expiry of the term, he would pay rent at a higher rate than he did during the term, was valid and enforceable. That case was decided on the 26th February 1913 by Mookerjee, J., and Beascheroff, J. The same Hon'ble Judges a few weeks later formed the Court which heard the case reported as Abdul Aziz v. Karu (3) which is relied on by defendant. In his judgment Mookerjee, J., refers to the two former cases and points out that they are clearly distinguishable from the case before them, inasmuch as the lease had been granted for a term at a rent specified and the tenant had agreed that if he continued in occupation after the expiry

(1) 20 Ind. Cas. 516; 17 C. L. J. 590.

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 35; 18 C. L. J. 74.

(3) 21 Ind. Cas. 443; 18 C. L. J. 95.

BAPC V. SITTI.

of the term, he would pay rent thereafter at a rate which was not deemed as the proper consideration for occupation of the land. Such enhancement of rent depended upon "if the tenant claimed an occupancy right in the land or caused a claim to be put up by any other person." The learned Judges held that the enhancement amounted to a penalty and was consequently not enforceable in law. I think the decision in Gunput Singh v. Josodhur Singh (1) above mentioned must govern this case.

With reference to the question of cesses referred to in the lower Appellate Court's judgment, the defendant's Vakil has been unable to find any notification to exempt the holding from the operation of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and consequently abandons the point.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 800 OF 1914.

February 21, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

BAPU—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SITTI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Co-sharers—Surrender of tenancy lands to one co-sharer—Notice by other co-sharers to vacate their shares—Suit for possession—Delay, unreasonable, effect of.

The ordinary tenancy lands in suit were at first held by the 1st defendant as sub-tenant. After having acquired a share in the village he got a surrender from the tenants and the fields were held by him as khudkasht. The plaintiffs, who were co-sharers in the village, gave a notice to the 1st defendant calling on him to vacate their shares in the land but the notice did not contain any offer to contribute the plaintiffs' share of the cost of acquisition. The plaintiffs brought the present suit for joint or exclusive possession of their share of the fields about 2 years after the notice and nearly 4 years after the entry in the khassra about the surrender:

Held, (1) that there had been unreasonable delay in bringing the suit; [p. 903, col. 1.]

(2) that as the notice was of a threatening nature describing the possession of the defendant as wrongful and making no offer to contribute towards the cost of acquisition and as the defendant had been in occupation of the field as sub-tenant for many years, it was not a case in which the plaintiffs could get a decree for joint physical possession. The remedy of the plaintiffs was to have a partition effected. [p. 903, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the District Judge, Ohhindwara, dated the 7th November 1914, in Appeal No. 172 of 1914.

Dr. H. S. Gour and Mr. S. C. Chowdhury, for the Appellant.

Sir Bipin Krishna Bose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts found are that the 2nd defendant Ramprasad, the lambar-dar of the village, and the plaintiffs Sitti and Pitti are separated brothers. Each of them is a co-sharer to the extent of 5 annas. The 1st defendant Sitaram (alias Bapu) became a one-anna co-sharer on the 26th June 1906. The ordinary tenancy lands in suit were at first held by the 1st defendant as sub-tenant. He subsequently got a surrender from the tenants and the fields were held by him as khudkasht. There is no finding as to the exact date on which the surrender was given effect to, but the fact was entered in the khassra on the 22nd February 1910, from which date there is a presumption that the plaintiffs were aware that the 1st defendant was in possession not as a sub-tenant but as a co-sharer. On the 17th January 1911 the 2nd defendant accepted nazrana from the 1st defendant and gave his approval to the surrender. The plaintiffs admit that they knew on the 1st September 1911 that the tenants had surrendered the fields to the 1st defendant. On the 12th December 1911 the plaintiffs gave a notice to the 1st defendant calling on him to vacate within 8 days the shares of the plaintiffs in the fields, alleging that he had entered wrongfully into possession; the notice contained no offer to contribute the plaintiffs' share of the cost of acquisition. The plaintiffs' suit for "joint or exclusive possession" of their 10-annas share of the fields was filed on the 28th November 1913, that is to say, about 2 years after the notice, and nearly 4 years after the entry in the khassra. The lower Courts have given a decree to the plaintiffs for joint possession to the extent of their 10-annas share, subject to their paying Rs. 750 to the 1st defendant as their share of the cost of acquiring the fields from the tenants. The 1st defendant appeals to this Court. It has been laid down by Stanyon, A. J. C., in Ramdayal v. Gulab Bai (1) that a suit like this must be brought without unreasonable delay. What is unreasonable delay is a question for determination according to the circumstances of each case. In Second Appeal No. 766 of 1907 the same learned Additional Judicial Commissioner held 3 years to be an unreasonable delay. The learned District Judge while recognising these principles, held that the plaintiffs made an early declaration of their intention to share physical possession of the fields by means of the notice of 12th December 1911. I am unable to agree that this notice in any way affected the situation. The notice was of a threatening nature, it described the possession of the 1st defendant as wrongful, and it made no offer to contribute towards the cost of acquisition. In this case also there is the fact that the 1st defendant was in occupation of the fields as sub-tenant for many years. In the circumstances of the case I am of opinion that it is not a case in which the plaintiffs should get a decree for joint physical possession and that the proper course is to adopt the course indicated by Bose, A. J. C., in Second Appeal No. 406 of 1909. The remedy of the plaintiffs is to have partition effected. The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside and a fresh decree will be drawn up declaring that the plaintiffs are co-sharers to the extent of 10 annas in the village and that their title as such as regards the fields in suit is not affected by the 1st defendant's sole possession of the fields. Having regard to the conduct of the parties I order that the parties shall bear their own costs throughout Decrees set aside.

JOTINDRA KUMAR DASS v. GAGAN CHANDRA PAL.

(1) 4 N. L. R. 120.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 741 of 1917.

February 25, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tennon and Mr. Justice Newbould.

JOTINDRA KUMAR DASS—DECREE-HOLDER—PETITIONER

versus

GAGAN CHANDRA PAL AND OTHERS—

JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182 (5)—

Execution of decree—Payment of portion of decretal amount by judgment-debtor—Limitation, fresh starting point of.

A decree-holder gets a fresh starting point for limitation to execute the decree within the meaning of Article 182, clause (5) of the Limitation Act, from the date on which a portion of the decretal amount is paid by the judgment-debtor. [p. 904, col. 1.]

Rule against the order of the Court of Small Causes, Dacca, in Suit No. 450 of 1913.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Rajendra Chandra Guha, for the Petitioner.—The application for certifying payments can be made under Article 181 of the Limitation Act within three years of the date of payment, and such an application has been held to be a step-in-aid of execution. See Chhoto Rakhal Das Majumdar v. Jogendra Narain Mozumdar (1) and Radha Charan v. Man Singh (2). The present application for execution was made three days after the application for certifying payment and was, therefore, within time. See Eusuffzeman Sarkar v. Sarchia Lal Nahata (3) and Lakhi Narain Ganguli v. Felamani Dasi (4). The learned Small Cause Court Judge fell into an error in holding that section 20 of the Limitation Act is a bar to the execution of the decree, although that section has no application to the facts of the case.

On one appeared for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This Rule is directed against an order by which the Court of Small Causes of Dacca has refused the application for execution of a certain decree on the ground that the decree is time-barred. The decree is dated the 9th May 1913. The decree-holder, who is the petitioner before us, alleges that the judgment-debtor made a payment to him of Rs. 25 on the 10th June 1914, and a further payment of Rs. 50 on the 20th November 1914. He also alleges two earlier payments which for the purposes of this Rule we may disregard. On the 6th June 1917 he made an application to the Court for certifying the above payments. On the 9th June 1917 he next applied for execution of his decree. Without taking evidence in

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 391; 10 C. L. J. 467 at p. 470.

(2) 12 A. 392 at p. 395; A. W. N. (1890) 119; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 995.

(3) 34 Ind. Cas. 606; 20 C. W. N. 272; 43 C. 207, 23 C. L. J. 390.

(4) 27 Ind. Cas. 11; 20 C. L. J. 131; 18 C. W. N. 206; 1906.

TUKARAM v. ARJUNA.

the matter the learned Subordinate Judge held that the payments of the 10th June 1914 and 20th November 1914 to which we have referred, taken with the decree-holder's application of the 6th June 1917, were not sufficient to save limitation. We are unable to hold that on the facts before him he has come to a proper decision in this matter. We need only refer him to the cases reported as Ohhoti Rakhai Das Majumdar v. Jyendra Narain Majumdar (1), Lakhi Narain Ganguli v. Felamani Das (4) and Eusuffzaman Sarkar v. Sanchia Lal Nahata (3). From these cases it will appear that the payments of June and November 1914 being within three years from the date of the decree and the application of the 6th June 1917 being again within three years from the date of those payments, it follows that if those payments were in fact made, the decree-holder will have a fresh starting point for limitation within the meaning of Article 182 (5) of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act.

Under these circumstances we set aside the order made by the Court of Small Causes and return the record to him, in order that after the taking of evidence he may proceed to dispose of the application before him in accordance with law.

Order set aside; Record returned.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 245 OF 1915.

October 4, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

TUKARAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

ARJUNA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act IV of 1882, s. 95—Payment by co-mortgagor—Charge, whether created. Payment made by natural guardian of co-mortgagor not appointed by Court, whether sufficient to create charge—Evidence Act (1 of 1872), s. 8—Res gestæ, admissibility of.

All that section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act requires is that one of several co-mortgagors should redeem the mortgaged property in order to obtain a charge on the share of the other co-mortgagors. It is not essential that the redemption should take place in Court. If the money is paid out of Court and the decree holder accepts it and certifies the payment, the requirements of the section are fulfilled. [p. 905, cols. 1 & 2.]

Plaintiff alleged that he had paid the whole amount of a mortgage decree passed jointly against him and the defendant, and claimed a charge against the mortgaged property in respect of the amount paid for the defendant. The defence was that the payment was made by the plaintiff's mother who was not authorised to act on behalf of her minor son, the plaintiff. Her name was proposed as the guardian ad litem of the plaintiff in the mortgage suit but she was removed from the guardianship and the defendant was appointed in her place.

Held, that though the payment by the plaintiff's mother was irregular, the acceptance of the decree-holder amounted to a certificate that the payment was duly made and had the effect of curing the irregularity and that the plaintiff, therefore, acquired a valid charge over the defendant's share in the mortgaged property. [p. 90, col. 2.]

Under section 8 of the Evidence Act statements accompanying conduct and explaining such conduct are relevant. [p. 90, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the Divisional Judge, Nagpur, dated the 24th February 1915, in Appeal No. 62 of 1914.

Dr. H. S. Gaur, for the Appellant.

Mr. V. R. Pandit, B. B., for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The second appeal arises out of a suit for contribution under section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act. One Ramrao Joshi had obtained a mortgage-decree against the plaintiff Arjuna, who was then a minor, and the defendant Tukaram and his mother Musammatt Janhi. The plaintiff's case is that he paid the whole amount of the mortgage decree, hence he is entitled to a charge upon the defendant's share of the mortgaged property for half the amount paid. The defence was that the money was paid by one Pagu Patil, who had entered into an agreement jointly with the plaintiff's mother and the defendant for advancing the money, that as Pagu allowed his claim to be barred by limitation, he has thereupon set up the plaintiff to institute a false suit. The first Court, after disposing of the plea of limitation against the plaintiff, summarily decided the facts in favour of the defendant. The lower Appellate Court has held that the money was paid by the plaintiff. The other points arising out of the case will be dealt with after disposing of the main contention on the merits. On behalf of the defendant-appellant, the finding of fact is impeached on the ground that the application made by the plaintiff's mother, Exhibit P 4, relied on by the Divisional Judge is not relevant, and also on the ground that there has been misconception of the evidence on the part of the learned

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

Judge of the Court below. I have no reason to suppose that there has been any misconception of evidence. All that is urged is that there is not any reference to some of the documents in the case and amongst others to Exhibit D 10. The judgment of the learned Divisional Judge does not indicate that he had not read the whole of the evidence. There is nothing in the letter Exhibit D 10 which is inconsistent with the findings of the lower Appellate Court. As regards the statements made in the application Exhibit P 4, they are admissible as part of the res gestæ. The statement is to the effect that Arjuna was making the payment on his behalf, and not on behalf of his co-defendant Tukaram. Under section 8 of the Evidence Act statements accompanying conduct and explaining such conduct are relevant. There is, therefore, no error of law to vitiate the finding of the lower Appellate Court and I must hold that it is binding on me in second appeal.

It is urged that the payment made by the plaintiff's mother was an officious payment by a person not authorised to act on behalf of the plaintiff, and, therefore, no claim for contribution lies. This argument is founded upon the fact that the plaintiff's mother who was originally named as guardian ad litem in Ramrao's suit was removed from the guardianship, and defendant Tukaram appointed as guardian ad litem in her place. This payment was made without a formal order appointing her as guardian ad litem. It is clear that the procedure of the Court was somewhat irregular. The appointment of the defendant as guardian ad litem if Arjuna did not, in any way, take away the right of the natural guardian to redeem the mortgaged property with the consent of the decree-holder. Although the proceedings were in Court, the decree-holder accepted the money and waived all irregularities. I do not think that it is competent to the defendant to rely upon this irregularity for the purpose of defeating the plaintiff's claim. All that section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act requires is that one of the several co-mortgagors should redeem the mortgaged property in order to obtain a charge on the share of the other co-mortgagors. It is not essential that the redemption should take place in Court. If money is paid out of Court and the decree-holder accepts it and certifies the payment, the requirements of the section are fulfilled. The payment by the plaintiff's mother without her being formally appointed as guardian ad litem was an irregular payment. But the acceptance of the decree-holder amounted to a certificate that the payment had been duly made, and this had the effect of curing the irregularity in payment. The result is that, in my opinion, the plaintiff acquired a charge over the defendant's share in the mortgaged property. There was some discussion as to whether the claim is barred by limitation or not. So far as the enforcement of the charge is concerned, it is clearly within time. But a personal claim against the defendant under section 69 of the Contract Act is barred. Although the point has not been specifically taken before me, I think the decree of the lower Court should have been limited by adding a declaration that the defendant is not personally liable for the claim, if the sale proceeds of the property fall short of the decretal amount. The appellant has failed on all important points. In lieu of the decree of the lower Appellate Court a proper decree for sale will be passed as suggested above. The appellant will pay the costs of this appeal. Time for payment is extended till 4th April 1917.

Decree varied.

MADRAS HIGH COURT. FULL BENCH.

APPEAL NO. 24 OF 1915.

February 20, 1918

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling, Kt.,

Mr. Justice Coutts Trotter and

Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RANGASAMI NAICKER AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 TO 18 AND

20 TO 40—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family consisting of one adult co-parcener and minors—Testamentary guardianship, appointment of, for minors' properties by manager, validity of—Statutory authority, sanction of.

It is not competent to the only adult co-parcener of a Mitakshara family consisting of himself and his minor co-parceners to appoint a testamentary guardian to the co-parcenary properties of the minor co-parceners. [p. 910, col. 2; p. 911, cols. 1 & 2.]

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha, 7 W. R. 73 at p. 74, not followed.

Raj Lukhee Dabee v. Gokool Chunder Chowdhry, 13 M. I. A. 209; 12 W. R. P. C. 47; 3 B. L. R. P. C. 57; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 275; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 518; 20 E. R. 529, Sami Row v. Eliavatha Row, 16 M. L. J. 357 and Gharib-ullah v. Khalak Singh, 25 A. 407; 30 I. A. 165; 5 Bom. L. R. 478; 7 C. W. N. 681; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 483 (P. C.), distinguished.

Mahabeshwar Krishnappa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni, 21 Ind. Cas. 350; 38 B. 94 at p. 103; 15 Bom. L. R. 882, dissented from.

Kanakasabai Mudaliar v. Ponnusami Mudaliar, 21 Ind. Cas. 848, Krishna Aiyar v. Chakrapani, 29 Ind. Cas. 475 and Alagappa Iyengar v. Mangathai Amman-gar, 34 Ind. Cas. 766; 40 M. 672; 30 M. L. J. 504, followed.

Por Apling, J.—The attractive doctrine that everything which is not expressly forbidden should be held lawful, if expedient, is one which has its dangers and requires careful consideration before application. [p. 910, col. 1.]

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—On principle, a person who is not capable of making a gift of his property or to dispose of it by testament cannot be in a position to control that property after his death. [p. 911, cols. 1 & 2.]

The Indian enactments dealing with guardianship, viz., the Court of Wards Regulation, the Guardians and Wards Act and the Widows' Re-marriage Act give no statutory authority for the appointment of a testamentary guardian in respect of co-parcenary property. They only refer to cases in which such power of appointment is permissible under the law, for example cases of self-acquired property in Madras or Dayabhaga property in Bengal. [p. 913, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Tanjore, in Original Suit No. 3 of 1913.

This appeal coming on for hearing on the 31st of August 1917 and having stood over for consideration till the 19th of September 1917, the Court (the Chief Justice and Kumaraswami Sastri, J.) made the following ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BENCH.

KUMARASWAMI SASTRI, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit filed by the appellants against the 1st defendant and several others for an account of the management of their properties by the 1st defendant during their minority and for the setting aside of the alienations made by him in favour of the other defendants. The case of the plaintiffs is that one Chidambaram Pillai died leaving two undivided sons, Ramasami Pillai the father of the 4th plaintiff and Appukutti Pillai the father of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd plaintiffs. Ramasami Pillai died in 1900 and Appukutti Pillai in 1902. At the time of Appukutti Pillai's death all the plaintiffs were minors and he was the only adult member of the undivided family. He left a Will, dated the 6th October 1902. The material portion of the Will runs as follows:—"As my sons and my elder brother's sons are minors, I have appointed Venkatachella Pillai son of Theagaraja Pillai of Puduputhur, Nega-patam Taluk, executor herein having requested him regarding the management of the affairs for the purpose of looking after all the affairs of the family after my death till the minors come of age, as he is a near relative of mine being maternal uncle and a reliable man who would faithfully look after the affairs and take pains in improving the property ... If the creditors press for payment, the lands in Orathu Kannur Vattam Vadakathalai village shall be sold to him who wants the same. The properties after paying up the debts shall be added to the family property."

This defendant who was appointed executor took possession of the estate and made the alienations complained of in the plaint. The 1st plaintiff attained majority in 1908 and the 1st defendant is alleged to have severed his connection with the estate and to have put him in possession of the properties that then remained. The alienations made by the 1st defendant are impeached on the ground that the Will is invalid under Hindu Law and that there was no necessity for the alienations.

As the Will on its face purports to deal with joint family properties, it cannot confer any title on the 1st defendant so far as the properties are concerned, as section 4 of the Probate and Administration Act expressly provides that no property which would otherwise have passed by survivorship shall vest in the executor or administrator.

It is argued that the Will is valid in so far as it appoints the 1st defendant the guardian of the minor members of the undivided family and that under the terms of the Will the appointment of the 1st defendant as executor and the conferring upon him of the powers of management (set out in detail) amounted to his appointment as a testamentary guardian.

The question for determination, therefore, is whether a Hindu, who is the only adult member of a co-parcenary consisting of himself, the sons and nephews, can appoint a testamentary guardian to his minor co-parceners.

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

So far as appointment of a guardian to the person of minors is concerned, the power of a Hindu father is not disputed. In Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma (1) Wallis, C. J., and Abdur Rahim, J., held, following Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2), that a Hindu father was entitled to appoint a guardian for his child by Will so as to exclude the mother from the guardianship. This decision was followed by Sadasiva Aiyar and Moore, J.J., in Alagappa Iyengar v. Mangathai Ammangar (3), where the learned Judges held that it was competent to a Hindu father to appoint a guardian by Will to the person of his minor son, though he could not do so in respect of undivided family properties.

As regards appointment of a guardian to the properties of minor co-parceners there is a conflict of authority. In Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2) it was held that under Hindu Law the father has power to appoint either orally or by writing a person to be guardian of his minor children.

The facts appearing in the report show that the parties were governed by the principles of Hindu Law current in Mithila, where the Mitakshara is the leading authority though it is supplemented by the Vivada Ratnakara and the Vivada Chintamani. In dealing with the powers of the father, Lceh, J., observed :—"We think the Principal Sudder Ameen has taken an erroneous view of the Hindu Law as regards the power of a parent to appoint a guardian for his children. No doubt the mother is the natural guardian of her child; and were any person to attempt to deprive her of this right without authority, her right would, under ordinary circumstances, be supported; but we are not aware of any provisions of the Hindu Law, nor have any such been shown in support of the Principal Sudder Ameen's view, which prohibit a father from appointing by writing or by word any other person than the mother to be the guardian of his minor children. The Principal Sudder Ameen has found the Will to have been duly executed. If his finding in this respect be correct, the Will, though inoperative as regards the disposition of the property which is contrary to the principles of the Hindu Law current in Mithila, is not so as regards the appointment of a guardian." The decision has not been questioned in any of the subsequent decisions and is clear authority for the proposition that a Will, though invalid as a disposition of property, can be effective to create a testamentary guardian.

In Bindai v. Muthurabai (4) Jenkins, C. J., and Aston, J., held that the principle that no guardian can be appointed to the property of a minor, who is a member of a joint and undivided Hindu family and whose only property is his interest in the joint property, does not apply to cases where all the members of the family are minors and that a testamentary guardian can be appointed, subject to the limitation that it would be open to any minor on attaining majority to apply for the removal of the guardian so appointed. This case was followed in Ramchandra v. Krishnarao (5). In Mahableshwar Krishna v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6) Scott, C.J., and Beaman, J., after referring to Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2) and Rai Lukhee Dabea v. Gokool Chander Chowdhry (7), were of opinion that it was competent to a Hindu father to appoint a testamentary guardian to the property of his minor children and to give directions for management.

A contrary view, however, has been taken in Kanakasabai Mudaliar v. Ponnusami Mudaliar (3) by Sadasiva Aiyar and Spencer, J. The appeal arose out of an application to remove a guardian who purported to act as guardian appointed by a Will of the father of certain minors.

It appears from the report that Abdur Rahim and Spencer, J.J., without expressing any opinion, called for a finding as to whether the properties dealt with by the Will were ancestral or self-acquired. On receipt

(4) 30 B. 152; 7 Bom. L. R. 809.

(5) 32 B. 259; 10 Bom. L. R. 279.

(6) 21 Ind. Cas. 350; 38 B. 94 at p. 103; 15 Bom. L. R. 882.

(7) 13 M. L. A. 209; 12 W. R. P. C. 47; 3 B. L. R. P. C. 57; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 275; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 518; 20 E. R. 529.

(8) 21 Ind. Cas. 848.

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 453; 22 M. L. J. 247; (1912) M. W. N. 53; 11 M. L. T. 53.

(2) 7 W. R. 73 at p. 74.

(3) 34 Ind. Cas. 766; 40 M. 672; 30 M. L. J. 504.

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

of the finding Sadasiva Aiyar and Spencer, JJ., observed as follows: "On the finding that the properties are ancestral properties of the testator (petitioner's father) he had no right to appoint guardians by Will in respect of such properties which survived to his sons" and treated the guardian as a "mere trespasser." No authorities seem to have been cited at the Bar and the judgment does not refer to or discuss any of the previous authorities on the subject.

In Krishna Aiyar v. Chakrapani (9) Mr. Justice Oldfield was of opinion that a testamentary guardian was not a person "appointed by a competent authority" within the meaning of Order XXXII, rule 6 (2), of the Civil Procedure Code so as to entitle him to draw moneys from Court without giving security. The learned Judge simply followed Kanakasabai Mudaliar v. Ponnusami Mudaliar (8) and Budhilal v. Morarji (10).

The question again arose for decision in Alagappa Iyengar v. Manguthai Ammangar (3). Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar, who delivered the judgment of the Court, was of opinion that though a Hindu father can appoint a testamentary guardian to the person of his minor sons, he was incompetent to appoint a guardian to the joint family properties which on his death survived to his minor sons. The learned Judge, after referring to Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2) and distinguishing Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma (1) as only deciding that it was competent to a Hindu father to appoint testamentary guardian [though the decision followed without reservation the broader rule laid down in the case of Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2)] preferred and followed the decision in Kanakasabai Mudaliar v. Ponnusami Mudaliar (8).

In Second Appeal No. 73 of 1916 [Chidambaram Pillai v. Verrappa Chettiar (11)] the question again came up for consideration before Justices Sadasiva Aiyar and Spencer, and they differed as to the testamentary capacity of the father to appoint a guardian to the properties of his minor sons. Sadasiva

Aiyar, J., after distinguishing the cases reported as Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2) and Itaj Lukhee Dubea v. Gokul Chunder Chowdhry (7) as being cases under Dayabhaga Law and Ramchandra v. Krishnarao (5) as being a case deciding the power of Courts to appoint, dissented from the decision of the Bombay High Court in Mahableshwar Krishnappa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6). Spencer, J., after referring to the conflict between the Bombay and Madras views, was inclined to follow Ramchandra v. Krishnarao (5) and Mahableshwar Krishnappa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6). He observed that there might be exceptional cases where a Hindu father may validly and properly appoint by Will a guardian to manage the joint family property during the minority of his sons where he was the only adult male member of the co-parcenary at the time of his death, such an act being "a natural act on the part of a prudent Hindu father dying without grown up sons or agnates."

I can find nothing either in the Mitakshara or the Smritis which prohibits a father from providing for the care and management of property during the minority of his sons. The only possible ground for negating the power of a Hindu father governed by the Mitakshara to exercise his natural right (conferred by every civilized system of jurisprudence) to make provision for the care and custody of properties of his minor children on his death is that under the Mitakshara he cannot dispose of property by Will to the prejudice of his co-parceners, but I do not think that arrangements made for the protection of property for the benefit of minors amount to a disposition of property or a disturbance of the rights of the minor co-parceners to take the property by survivorship. Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2), which as I have already pointed out is a case under the Mitakshara, clearly points out and recognises the distinction between a disposition of property contrary to the provisions of Hindu Law and an arrangement for its preservation and management. The limitation to the power of the testamentary guardian to the period when any one of the minors comes of age and so becomes competent to exercise his right of management, which as an adult co-parcener

(9) 25 Ind. Cas. 475.

(10) 31 B. 417; 3 Bom. L. R. 553.

(11) 43 Ind. Cas. 865; 6 L. W. 640; (1917, M. W. N. 744; 22 M. L. T. 380.

CHIDAMBARAM PILLAI v. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

he would have in a Mitakshara family so far as the other minor co-parceners are concerned, would effectually remove any conflict. The decision of the Privy Council in Gharib-ullah v. Khalak Singh (12) only prevents a Court and by a parity of reasoning a father or other adult co-parcener from appointing a guardian to the property of minor members of a joint family where there is an adult co-parcener. Bindaji v. Mathurabai (4) and Mahableshwar Krishnapa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6) distinguish Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh (12) on this ground and are clear authorities for the view that the decision in Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh (12) has no application when all the co-parceners are minors.

As observed by Scott, C.J., in Mahableshwar Krishnapa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6) and by Spencer, J., in his judgment in Second Appeal No. 73 of 1916 [Chidambaram Pillai v. Veerappa Chettiar (11)] it is a matter of practical convenience and necessity that a dying adult member of a co-parcenary, where all the other co-parceners are minors, should be able to make arrangements for the guardianship of the minors and the management of the co-parcenary property, and I am of opinion that unless there is any express prohibition in the Hindu Smritis or commentaries recognised as authorities in this Presidency, there is no reason why the rulings of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts should not be followed. In view of the conflict of authorities referred to by me between the Madras and other High Courts, I think it desirable that the question should be settled by a Full Bench and would refer the following question for determination:—

Whether it is competent to the only adult co-parcener of a Mitakshara family consisting of himself and his minor co-parceners to appoint a testamentary guardian to the co-parcenary properties of the minor co-parceners?

WALLIS, C. J.—I agree to this reference.

This appeal came on for hearing in pursuance of the above Order of Reference before the Full Bench on the 12th February 1918.

Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar (with him Messrs. O. Krishnamachariar and S. Venugopala Chetty), for the Appellants.—The right to appoint a guardian of a minor's property is based on the absolute ownership of the appointor. Where the person making the appointment cannot control the property, authority to direct the disposal of it after his death must necessarily be wanting. Under Hindu Law, joint family property is not at the absolute disposal of the father or manager and the latter can have no right to make in effect, by Will, a disposal of the right of management.
(12) 25 A. 407; 80 I. A. 185; 5 Bom. L. R. 478; 7 C. W. N. 681; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 483 (P. C.)

Guardianship of the person of a minor may be a natural right; the King should manage the properties of infants. There can be no natural right to appoint a guardian for minors' properties.

The following cases were cited: Kanakasabai Mudaliar v. Ionnusami Mudaliar (8), Krishna Aiyar v. Chakrapani (9), Alegappa Iyengar v. Mangathai Amangar (3), Chidambaram Pillai v. Veerappa Chettiar (11).

In Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2) the facts are not clear. There the guardian was appointed ad litem and there is no indication of the nature of the properties, the subject of the compromise. Raj Lukhee Dubea v. Gokool Chunder Chowdhry (7) is a decision under the Dayabhaga school of law.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar (with him Mr. T. R. Krishnaswami Aiyar), for Respondents Nos. 3, 30, 34 and 37.—The power of a Hindu father to appoint a testamentary guardian for his minor son is a natural right. The giving away of a boy in adoption is an interference with his rights in the co-parcenary property as the adoptee loses his rights therein. The King can control the properties of infants who have neither parents nor kinsmen, but not of those for whom a manager has been appointed. This power of the father has also the sanction of Statute Law, for example, the Court of Wards Regulation, Hindu Widows' Re marriage Act, Regulation V of 1804. Reference was made to Raj Lukhee Dubea v. Gokool Chunder Chowdhry (7), Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2), Bindaji v. Mathurabai (4), Mahableshwar Krishnapa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6), Gharib-ullah v. Khalak Singh (12) and Sami Row v. Eliavatha Row (13).

(13) 16 M. L. J. 357

CHIDAMBARAM PILLAI V. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

Mr. S. T. Srinivasagopalachari, for Respondent No. 17.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Rangachariar and Mr. N. M. Malim Sahib, for Respondents Nos. 3, 22, 26 and 30.

Mr. G. S. Ramachandra Aiyar, for Respondents Nos. 1 to 3, 5 to 7, 22 to 26, 30 and 31.

Mr. V. Narasimha Aiyangar, for Respondents No. 33.

OPINION.

AYLING, J.—I have had the advantage of perusing the judgment which my learned brother, Seshagiri Aiyar, J., is about to pronounce; and I agree in the conclusion arrived at by him. It is impossible to contend that the power of appointing a testamentary guardian is supported by anything in the ancient texts; and the attractive doctrine that anything which is not expressly forbidden should be held lawful, if expedient, seems to me one which has its dangers and requires careful consideration before application. In the present case, the power claimed seems to run counter to the conception of a Hindu joint family in which every member obtains an interest at birth. I can only agree with Sadasiva Aiyar, J.'s remark in Chidambaram Pillai v. Veerappa Chettiar (11) in which that learned Judge says,

"On principle I find it difficult to hold that a man who cannot deal with a particular species of property by Will can make arrangement for the management of that property by Will after his death or can appoint guardians to manage that property for minor owners who obtain it by survivorship after his death."

This seems to me to sum up the whole matter.

I am not even clear that considerations of general expediency support respondents' contention. The reference covers the case, not only of the adult co-parcener's own minor sons, but of his minor nephews, and even minor brother regarding whom the natural right of a father discussed by Kumaraswami Sastri, J., in his order of reference can have no application. Even as regards sons, I think the interests of the minors are sufficiently protected by the power of the Court to appoint a guardian; and while the expressed wishes of the father are sure to receive attention at the Court's hands, nothing further is required.

I would answer the question in the negative.

COUTTS TROTTER, J.—I also have had the advantage of perusing my learned brother Seshagiri Aiyar's judgment. I only abstain from simply expressing my own concurrence in it, because my doing so might seem to be associating myself with a familiarity with the ancient authorities which I cannot pretend to possess. I, therefore, put what I have to say in my own words.

To speak of natural rights has always been recognized as a slippery path for the political thinker to tread from the days of Hobbes and Rousseau. It is an even greater pitfall to a lawyer. To appoint a guardian to the person of his infant children may be, a 'natural' right vested in the father. To clothe him with authority over property which belongs to so complex an institution as a Hindu joint family may be, seems to me to be something which cannot be derived from nature, but must be founded on some legal warrant. In England the warrant is statutory, and it is not pretended that there is any statutory authority in force in India. The citations from Manu seem to show that the original conception was that the custody of properties of the joint family where there was no adult member should be the care of the King, which in modern language means the Courts of the country. No case has been cited which can be said to recognize the suggested right. The case in Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2) contains expressions which tend to show that the learned Judges supposed that such a power would be possible; but they do not definitely so decide. Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar supported that judgment on the ground that as the properties dealt with were the properties of the father absolutely and were not joint properties, his right to appoint a guardian for them might be considered as an inherent part of his total right of ownership. That again seems to me to be lapsing into abstract speculation, and it may be that Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar's attack on this theory—which not insignificantly formed almost the whole of his argument—was well-founded. Beyond that his argument seemed to me to come merely to this. The thing is convenient; it is consonant with all right notions of what a father ought to be able to do for his children; it is nowhere expressly prohibited; therefore, it can be done. To me on the contrary it seems that to put a person in a definite legal relation to property of which he is not the owner, is a step which cannot be taken unless there is legal authority for taking it. Its convenience and justice may be admirable reasons for the Legislature to take action. They cannot, in my opinion, suffice to set in motion a Court of law.

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RANGANAMI NAICKER.

SESHAGIRI AIYAR, J.—The question referred for our consideration is whether it is competent to the only adult co-parcener of a Mitakshara family consisting of himself and his minor co-parceners to appoint a testamentary guardian to the co-parcenary properties of the minor co-parceners.

It was argued before us that the real point for decision is whether the manager of a Hindu family, be he the father, the uncle or an elder brother, can appoint a testamentary guardian for the property of his minor co-parceners. In the Hindu Law there is no provision for the appointment of a testamentary guardian. That may be due to the fact that the idea of making a Will is of recent origin. The only texts of Hindu Law which relate to this subject are all collected in Colebrooke's Digest, Volume II, pages 574 to 577. These authorities cast upon the King the duty of protecting the property of a minor.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar for the respondents drew our attention to the commentary of Kullookha Bhatta on Manu's text and argued that the protection of the King should be invoked only where the infant was otherwise unprotected. I do not understand the commentator to indicate by the use of the expression 'Anadha' that the deceased father or manager is competent to appoint a guardian and that it is only in default of such an appointment the King can step in. On the other hand it is clear from Manu's verses that the primary right of guardianship is in the King, and it is only by reflection that the father during his life-time exercises that right (as if by delegation by the Sovereign).

On principle, it appears to me that a person who is not capable of making a gift of his property or to dispose of it by testament cannot be in a position to control that property after his death. However convenient it may be, and however consonant with natural justice, that a father or manager should indicate his preference of an individual as guardian by a testament, in my opinion it would be inconsistent with the theory of survivorship that he should have the power to dictate to the King or to the Judges appointed by him as to who should be the guardian of his minor co-parceners. In the majority of cases the wishes of the father or manager would be acted upon by the Courts. But to that his directions should be regarded as amounting to a legal appointment is opposed to the principle underlying the Mitakshara system of law.

In the order of reference Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastriar refers to the natural right of a father to appoint a guardian and says that such a power is conferred by every civilised system of jurisprudence. Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar in a very learned argument has drawn our attention to the theories of guardianship enunciated in the ancient and modern systems of jurisprudence. An examination of the citations shows that whereas the right of appointing a guardian for the person of an infant has been in some systems regarded as the natural or the natural right of the parent, in none of them has it been stated that the right to appoint a guardian of property is a Common Law right. In Roman Law just as in the Hindu Law, the protection of property was enjoined upon the State. In English Law the power to appoint a testamentary guardian was first given by 12 Carl. II, Cap. 24. (See Simpson on Infants, page 105.) It is stated in the textbook that the right of appointing a testamentary guardian is not a Common Law right. In America where the Civil Law of Rome and the English Law have been further developed, it is clear that the right of appointing a testamentary guardian is not regarded as an inherent right in the parent. (See 21 American Cyclopædia, page 12.) Therefore, I am unable to accept the statement of the learned Judge that in other systems of jurisprudence the right of appointing a testamentary guardian exists as a Common Law right in the parent.

I shall now discuss the cases. The earliest decision upon the subject, barring the decision of the Sudder Adawlat of the High Court of the N. W. Provinces, is Soobah Pirthae Lal Jha v. Soobah Dorgah Lal Jha (2). There are undoubtedly observations in that judgment which show that the learned Judge believed that he had the authority of the Hindu Law in holding that a testamentary guardian can be appointed for a Mitakshara minor. The actual decision itself is supportable upon other grounds. There were two classes of property in respect of which a person purporting to act on behalf of the minor had entered into a compromise on behalf of the minor. This person was appointed guardian by the father in his Will; he was also recognised by the Civil Court as the guardian ad litem of the minor. The compromise in the suit related to ancestral property. It was upheld. It is well settled that where a guardian is appointed by the Court and an honest compromise is come to in the presence of the Court, it is prima facie binding upon the minor unless the latter can show that his guardian was guilty of fraud or other invalidating circumstances. There was another species of property in regard to which the guardian appointed by the Will had entered into a compromise outside the Court. That property was the self-acquisition of the father. In respect of such property, it can hardly be disputed that it is open to the testator to appoint a guardian to manage it. Therefore, the conclusion come to in the case is right. The observations of the learned Judge that Hindu Law sanctions the appointment of a guardian receive no support from any citation made by him or from any authority to which we have been referred in the course of the argument in this case. I am, therefore, not prepared to follow the obiter dicta contained in that judgment.

CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RANGASAMI NAICKER.

The next case very strongly relied upon by Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar is the decision of the Judicial Committee in Raj Lukhee Dabee v. Gokool Chunder Chowdhry (7). It was a case under the Dayabhaga Law, under which it was competent to a father to dispose of property notwithstanding the existence of sons. The suit was brought to set aside the alienation made by the widows of one Guruprasad Sarma. The latter had executed a document in favour of the widows under which the alienees claimed that the widows had ample power of disposition. The Judicial Committee came to the conclusion that the document conferred no rights of property on the widows. They regarded it as providing only "a species of trust for management and that it did not interfere with the devolution of the estate according to the ordinary law of succession under the Hindu Law." Following this view, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee considered whether the disposition by the widows as managers of the property of Guruprasad's sons was impeachable. It is clear from the facts that the question before the Committee did not relate to co-parcenary property or to the power of a Mitakshara father to appoint a testamentary guardian. Notwithstanding the argument of the learned Vakil for the respondents, I am unable to see why a person who is competent to devise his property, whether to his own children or to strangers, should not deal in his testament only with the right of management of that property. It is not necessary to validate such an appointment of a guardian or manager that the testament should make a gift of the property as well. The right over property involves two definite rights, the right of management and the right of enjoyment. A person may devise the right of management only by providing that his legal heirs shall have the benefit and advice of a person in whom the testator had confidence. That was really what happened in the Bengal case. Sir James Colville in delivering the judgment points out that the right of succession under the Hindu Law was not interfered with by the testator. I see nothing in the judgment of the Board in that case to warrant the contention that a person who cannot deal with a species of property by a testamentary document can devise the right of management over such property. Mahableshwar Krishnapa v. Ramchandra Mangesh Kulkarni (6) was the next case referred to. I cannot help saying that the learned Judges have not correctly understood Raj Lukhee Dabee v. Gokool Chunder Chowdhry (7) on which they base their conclusion; I feel constrained to differ from that decision. These are all the cases in the other High Courts. So far as Madras is concerned, the preponderance of authority is in favour of holding that a Mitakshara father has no power to appoint a testamentary guardian to his son's property, a fortiori a Mitakshara manager has no power to appoint such a guardian. The first decision is Kanakasabai Mudaliar v. Ponnusami Mudaliar (5), to which Mr. Justice Spencer was a party. Krishna Aiyar v. Chakrapani (9) is to the same effect. In Alagappa Iyengar v. Mangat'ai Amangar (3) Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and Mr. Justice Moore came to the same conclusion. In Chidambaram Pillai v. Veerappa Chettiar (11) Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar once again expressed the same view. Mr. Justice Spencer seems to think that the matter requires further consideration. The learned Judge does not give any definite opinion on the point at issue. Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar attacked the view of Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar on two points. I do not think that the criticism really affects the main conclusion at which the learned Judge has arrived. It is true that his reference to Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Soobah Doorgah Lal Jha (2), as a Dayabhaga case is not quite accurate, and something may be said also against his reference to the Privy Council decision, but the principle enunciated by him has my entire approval.

AMBIKA CHARAN CHAKRAVARTY v. SARAT CHANDRA BASU.

Some other cases were referred to by Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, viz., Sami Row v. Eliarutha Row (13) and Gharib-Ullah v. Khalak Singh (12). In the first of these cases the property dealt with was the self-acquired property of the testator. The second case has really no bearing upon the point. The learned Vakil referred to the enactments dealing with guardianship, viz., the Court of Wards Regulation, the Guardians and Wards Act and the Widows' Re-marriage Act, and contended that these legislative provisions preserve the right of a Hindu father to appoint a guardian. I do not think these Acts give any statutory authority for the appointment of a testamentary guardian in respect of co-parcenary property. They only refer to cases in which such power of appointment is permissible under the law, for example, cases of self-acquired property in Madras or Dayabhaga property in Bengal.

The case has been very fully argued by the two learned Vakils, and my answer to the question referred to us is in the negative.

M. C. P.

Reference answered in the negative.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1728 OF 1915.

January 30, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice Sir Shamsul Huda, Kr.

AMBIKA CHARAN CHAKRAVARTY

AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SARAT CHANDRA BASU AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit, leave for—Judgment, statement in, concerning point not raised, desirability of.

A suit brought to recover a jote on the footing that it was a kaemi jote was dismissed by the trial Court as well as by the Appellate Court on the ground that the jote was not kaemi. The question whether the plaintiffs had acquired an occupancy right was left open by the trial Court but the Appellate Court, while affirming the decision of the trial Court, stated in its judgment that if the question of occupancy right had been before it the plaintiff's suit would be barred by limitation:

Held, that the question of limitation as well as of the right of occupancy should be left open, as the plaintiffs might be prejudiced by the statement in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court in case they brought a suit to enforce the right of occupancy. [p. 14, col. 2.]

Held, also, that the plaintiffs could not be allowed to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. [p. 9-4, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Dacca, dated the 19th of April 1915, affirming the decree of the Munsif, 1st Court, Manickganj, dated the 6th of February 1914.

FACTS will appear from the judgment.

Babu Dwarka Nath Chuckerburty (with him Babu Trailokhya Nath Ghose), for the Appellants.—All the defendants except one admitted the plaintiffs as kaemi jotedar, only the defendant No. 1 says that the plaintiffs' right is a non-transferable occupancy right. I submit under the circumstances the plaintiffs are entitled to get a decree as against the defendants who admit the kaemi right claimed by the plaintiffs.

MA THIN KYU v. MG. BA THAIN.

[FLETCHER, J.—You can't get that.]

CANNOT a co-sharer landlord grant a separate lease of his own share conferring a kaemi right upon the tenant, though the other co sharers may not be willing to grant that right but may be willing to grant a non-kaemi right? In this case those co-sharer landlords who admit the plaintiffs' kaemi right cannot be compelled to treat the plaintiffs as mere occupancy *raiya*s, so as against them the plaintiffs are entitled to get a decree, though their suit might be dismissed as against the defendant No. 1 who denied the plaintiffs' kaemi interest. Furthermore I beg to submit that the lower Appellate Court was quite wrong in making the observation in the judgment that if my clients had any occupancy right that right was barred by limitation. This point was not in issue before that Court and no opinion ought to have been expressed on it, as such an opinion will seriously prejudice the plaintiffs in case they bring a suit to enforce their occupancy rights. Under the circumstances of this case I would at any rate ask your Lordships to grant permission to the plaintiffs to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit.

Babu Jogesh Chunder Roy (with him Babu Upendra Lal Roy), for the Respondents. —The plaintiffs failed to prove the title on which they based their claim and the suit was rightly dismissed. There was no formal defect in the suit as it was framed, so they cannot ask for permission to withdraw the suit. The tenancy was one and indivisible, so it cannot be split up by decreeing the suit against the defendants who admit the plaintiffs' kaemi right and dismissing it against the others who do not make such an admission.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This appeal is preferred by the plaintiffs against the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge of Dacca affirming the decision of the Munsif at Manickganj. The suit was brought to recover a jote on the footing that it was a kaemi jote. The defendant No. 1 who is the landlord of 1.6th of the jote opposed the plaintiffs' claim. He denied that the plaintiffs had a kaemi interest and he stated that their predecessor had a temporary ordinary occupancy *raiya*i jote. The first Court held that the jote was not kaemi and left the question as to whether the plaintiffs had an occupancy right by recognition open. The lower Appellate Court agreed with the primary Court and stated that the question of occupancy right was not before the Court and then proceeded to state that, if it had been before the Court, the plaintiffs' suit was barred by limitation. Only two questions are urged in this appeal. First of all, that the plaintiffs should have liberty to withdraw the whole suit. That clearly cannot be assented to. The second point is that, if the plaintiffs think fit to attempt to enforce in any subsequent proceeding this right of occupancy which was left open by the primary Court, they will be seriously prejudiced by the statement made by the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court that, if that question had been before the Court, the learned Judge would have held that the plaintiffs' claim was barred by limitation. I think that this contention is sound. The plaintiffs, whether their rights are well founded or not on that claim, ought not to be prejudiced by a statement in this suit that, if that case had been before the Court, the Judge would have decided it against them on the ground of limitation. That would depend on a variety of circumstances. It is not necessary for us to express any opinion one way or the other. That question of limitation just as much as the question of the right of occupancy by recognition will be left open between the parties. The present appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 6 OF 1917.

May 16, 1918.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, Kt., Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Ormond and Mr. Justice Pratt.

MA THIN KYU—APPLICANT

versus

MG. BA THAIN alias JOHNNY CAREW—

RESPONDENT.

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), s. 10—Divorce—Judicial separation—Adultery and cruelty after separation, effect of.

MA THIN KYU V. MG. BA THAIN.

A wife who has obtained judicial separation on the ground of her husband's adultery alone, is entitled to a dissolution of marriage on proof that her husband has again committed adultery after the separation and has in addition been guilty of cruelty to her after the separation. [p. 916, col. 1.]

Civil Reference made by the Divisional Judge, Mandalay, in Civil Suit No. 2 of 1917.

Mr. Shaw, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.

TWOMEY, C. J., AND ORMOND, J.—The petitioner and the respondent are both American Baptist Christians. The petitioner Ma Thin Kyu applied in 1914 for dissolution of her marriage with the respondent Mg. Ba Thain alias Johnny Carew on the ground of his adultery and desertion. Desertion was not proved, and the Court, therefore, granted only a decree for judicial separation. Subsequently the petitioner applied to the Magistrate for a maintenance order under the Criminal Procedure Code and the respondent was ordered to pay her Rs. 25 a month. She has received only Rs. 59 in all under that order. The petitioner's attempts to recover the amount due to her were thwarted by the respondent, who resigned the salaried post that he held. Not content with this, the respondent went repeatedly to the petitioner's house and abused her and threatened to kill her, his object being to prevent her from enforcing the maintenance order. The evidence shows that the respondent's conduct has seriously affected the petitioner's health and caused a nervous breakdown. In consequence of the respondent's conduct the petitioner applied again for a dissolution of her marriage on the ground of his continued adultery coupled with cruelty. It is shown that the respondent has continued to live in adultery with another woman since the time of the judicial separation, and as regards the alleged cruelty subsequent to the separation the learned Judge's finding is that although no physical violence was used the respondent's behaviour amounted to legal cruelty. The Divisional Judge, therefore, has granted a decree for dissolution of the marriage and this decree now comes before us for consideration.

The respondent did not oppose the petition in the Divisional Court and he does not appear in this Court, though he has been served with notice. There is no reason to suspect collusion.

We see no reason to differ from the conclusion of the Divisional Judge as regards the facts of the case. The continued adultery and the cruelty subsequent to the separation are well established. The only question that arises is one of law, namely, whether a wife who has obtained judicial separation on the ground of her husband's adultery alone, is entitled to a dissolution of marriage on proof that her husband has again committed adultery after the separation and has in addition been guilty of cruelty to her after the separation. The nearest English case that we can find is that of Green v. Green (1), in which a wife who had obtained a judicial separation on the ground of her husband's adultery obtained a decree nisi five years later on proof of further adultery subsequent to the judicial separation coupled with cruelty before the separation. The wife in her first petition in that case had not pleaded the cruelty and she asked only for a judicial separation in the first instance because she hoped that her husband would reform. Afterwards she abandoned the hope of his reformation, and asked for a dissolution of the marriage, and the Court then allowed her to revive the cruelty which she condoned in the first instance. Sir James Hannen remarked: "The husband by his adultery subsequent to the former decree has committed a fresh matrimonial offence, (for the decree of judicial separation is not to be considered as a license to commit adultery for the future), and for this offence, aggravated by the previous cruelty, the wife has had no redress. If the failure of the petitioner to charge her husband with cruelty be regarded as equivalent to a forgiveness of it, still cruelty condoned is revived by subsequent adultery, and I can see no reason why the husband should be in a better position because he has already been guilty of a wrong which entitled the wife to relief."

The present case differs from the above inasmuch as there was no cruelty before the decree for judicial separation and it is open to argument that the cruelty contemplated in the Divorce Law is cruelty committed while the wife is actually living with the husband and that cruelty cannot be regarded as a matrimonial offence when they are living apart from one another under a decree of judicial separation. There is, however, no express authority to this effect, and we are at liberty as in the English case above cited to treat the cruelty of the husband after the judicial separation as an aggravation of the fresh matrimonial offence involved in the husband's continued adultery. We, therefore, confirm the decree of the Divisional Court under section 17, Indian Divorce Act, 1869.

(1) (1874) 43 L. J. Mat. 6; 3 P. 121; 29 L. T. 251; 21 W. R. 824.

DURGA PRASAD V. HARIHAR PRASAD.

PRATT, J.—I agree that the decree should be confirmed. It seems to me that the facts of the present case are even stronger than in Green v. Green (1). Here there is not merely continued adultery after judicial separation, but subsequent cruelty as well.

I do not consider that adultery or cruelty on the part of the husband, when living away from his wife under judicial separation, can be held not to be a matrimonial offence.

To take this view would be practically to place the wife in a worse position, after she had obtained a decree of judicial separation on the ground of her husband's misconduct, than she was before.

Decree confirmed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 766 OF 1917.

April 15, 1918.

Present:—Justice Sir Ali Imam, Kt.

DURGA PRASAD—DEFENDANT

APPELLANT

versus

Raja HARIHAR PRASAD AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Record of Rights, entry in. value of—Presumption—Evidence in rebuttal of presumption, consideration of—Court, duty of.

An entry in the Record of Rights merely raises a presumption as to its correctness, and where this presumption is sought to be rebutted the Court must show by its judgment that it has considered the evidence on the record and then come to a distinct finding whether the evidence has or has not rebutted that presumption. [p. 917, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Patna, dated the 23rd March 1917, confirming that of the Munsif, Bihar.

Messrs. Kulwant Sahay, Purnendu Narain Singh, Sureswurdyal and Jugannath Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Ganesht Dutt Singh and Gangadhar Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs instituted this suit for recovery of rent in respect of 60 bighas of land situated in Mauza Singthu. The defendant resisted the claim on the ground that the land in question was "aima lakhraji" and that he had never paid any rent to the maliks and that no such rent was payable for this land. The learned Munsif of Bihar, who tried the suit, decided it in favour of the plaintiffs and gave them a decree at the rate of the jama claimed in the plaint. The defendant appealed to the learned District Judge of Patna, who dismissed it with costs. The present appeal is from the decision of the learned District Judge.

It is contended on behalf of the defendant-appellant that the learned Judge did not apply his mind judicially to the evidence adduced on his behalf in rebuttal of the presumption arising from the Record of Rights.

It appears that the land in question was recorded in the Record of Rights in the column which runs thus: "darmiani haqlar ke taraf se adai honeke laek lagan". The lower Appellate Court has correctly construed this heading and has rightly come to the conclusion that the amount mentioned under this heading, namely, Rs. 37-8-0, is the amount which is the actual rental of the land in question. The learned Judge has also correctly construed Exhibit 3, which is a mokurrari deed, executed by defendant No. 1 in favour of defendant No. 2. An examination of this deed clearly points out that there was some Government revenue payable on account of the 60 bighas of land. I am, therefore, of opinion that on the construction of Exhibit 3 and on the construction of the Record of Rights the lower Appellate Court has come to correct findings. The difficulty in this appeal, however, is that there is nothing in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court to show that the presumption that arises from the Record of Rights has been considered in the light of the evidence adduced by the defendants.

KALAMUA KHADIM v. AMIR ALI KHALIFA.

The learned Vakil, Mr. Kulwant Sahay, appearing on behalf of the defendant-appellant urges that it was necessary for the lower Appellate Court to have considered that evidence and then come to a distinct finding as to whether or not that evidence had or had not rebutted the presumption that arises from the Record of Rights. The contention of the learned Vakil is supported by the decision given in Laloo Singh v. Tahbal Gope (1) and Dilan Singh v. Choa Singh (2).

I accept the contention of the learned Vakil. The result is that the judgment and the decree of the lower Appellate Court are set aside and the case is remanded to the learned Judge for re-hearing and disposing of the appeal on arriving at a distinct finding on the question as to whether the presumption arising from the Record of Rights has or has not been rebutted in the light of the evidence produced by the defendants. Costs will follow the result.

Case remanded.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 814; 1 P. L. W. 193.

(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 397; 2 P. L. W. 183.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1101
OF 1916.

March 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice
Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, Kt.

KALAMUA KHADIM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT²

VERSUS

AMIR ALI KHALIFA—DEFENDANT, AND MAHMAD SAYAD—PLAINTIFF, No. 2
—RESPONDENTS.

Ejectment, suit for—Notice sent through registered post—Proof of service of notice—Evidence necessary.

A notice to quit was sent through registered post. The posting was duly proved and the registered envelope was produced in Court with an endorsement purporting to have been made by the postal peon stating that the addressee refused to accept it.

Held, that though the evidence adduced as to the service of the notice was not legally sufficient, the plaintiff's suit for ejectment on notice to quit should not have been dismissed on the ground that the service of notice was not proved, but that the plaintiff should have been given an opportunity to prove the actual service of notice on the defendant. [p. 918, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge of Assam Valley Districts, dated the 10th February 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, Gauhati, dated the 15th February 1915.

FACTS material to the report will appear from the following judgment of the lower Appellate Court:—

"This appeal arises out of a suit for ejectment. The lower Court has passed a decree. It is assailed on several grounds. The first ground is that the service of notice to quit was not properly proved. It was proved by the production of the registered cover containing a notice to quit, with an endorsement on it of the postal peon that the addressee refused to receive it. It is argued that the mere production of this cover without calling the peon is not sufficient evidence of service as laid down in the High Court decision reported as Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patita (1). It is, however, contended for the respondent, that this decision of the Calcutta High Court came out in the Weekly Notes of 15th March 1915, while the case under appeal had been decided on 15th February 1915 and the procedure then followed in serving notice was in accordance with the law laid down in the previous decision of the same High Court referred to in the judgment of the lower Court [Jogendra Chunder Ghose v. Dwarka Nath Karmokar (2)] and that the case should under the circumstances be sent on remand in order to give the plaintiff an opportunity to prove the service of notice in accordance with the law as laid down in the more recent decision of the High Court. Neither party could cite before me any decision of the High Court as to what course should be followed in a case like this. I am inclined to think that the subsequent decision is a legal adjudication that the prior one was not law at the time it was made and that it was a mere mistake upon which the plaintiffs acted at their peril. I find, however, that the case of Jogendra Chunder Ghose v. Dwarka Nath Karmokar

(1) 26 Ind. Cas. 962; 19 C. W. N. 489; 20 C. L. J. 455

(2) 15 C. 681; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1038.

BADRI DAS v. CHETTY FIRM OF O. A. M. K.

(2) does not lay down the broad proposition that the mere production of a registered cover containing a notice with an endorsement on it that the addressee refused to receive it is sufficient service of notice, without proving the truth of the endorsement in any way. Then there is the evidence of defendant in this case that no registered cover was tendered to him. Under the circumstances I think that the plaintiff's suit must fail. It is not necessary to consider the other grounds of appeal. The appeal is accordingly decreed with costs and the plaintiff's suit will stand dismissed with costs."

Babu Prakas Chandra Majumdar, for the Appellant.—The appeal arises out of a suit for ejectment which has been dismissed by the lower Appellate Court on the ground that service of 'notice to quit' sent through registered post has not been proved according to the procedure laid down in the case of Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patita (1). The first Court relying on the case of Jogendro Chunder Ghose v. Dwarka Nath Karmokar (2), which has been followed in several other subsequent cases, held that notice to quit was duly served on the defendant. The ruling of Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patita (1) came out in the Weekly Notes after the decision of the case by the first Court; so the Court of Appeal below ought, under the circumstances, to have allowed the plaintiff an opportunity to prove the endorsement of the postal peon on the cover. The correct procedure which the lower Appellate Court should have followed was either to allow the postal peon to be examined before it or to remand the case to the first Court for the said purpose.

Maulvi Nur-ud-din Ahmad, for the Respondents, submitted that when the lower Appellate Court has, by following the latest decision of this Court, held that the requisite notice has not been duly served, its decision is not liable to be set aside in second appeal.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal must be allowed. The learned Subordinate Judge disagreeing with the Munsif has found that the plaintiff has failed to prove service of notice which was sent through registered post. The proof of the posting was duly given. The registered envelope was produced in Court with an endorsement said to have been made by the postal peon, stating that the addressee refused to accept the letter. On that, the learned Judge purporting to act on a decision of this Court came to the conclusion that the service of the notice was not duly proved. Even assuming that the decision on which the learned Judge has relied says that, it is quite clear that on a point like this, when the appellant has got an earlier decision, of this Court in his favour which has been acted on on more than one occasion, he ought to have an opportunity of proving the service of the notice by producing other evidence. The case must go back to the Court of first instance to be re heard as regards the actual service of the notice on the defendant. Cost will abide the result of the re-hearing by the Court of first instance.

Case remanded.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 156 OF 1916.

March 19, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ormond and

Mr. Justice Pratt.

D. BADRI DAS—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

THE CHETTY FIRM OF O. A. M. K. AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Mortgage, equitable—Memorandum of securities handed over to mortgagee—Registration, whether necessary—Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 17—Secured creditor, suit by, to realise security—Leave of Court, whether necessary.

A document merely reciting what securities are handed over to an equitable mortgagee is a memorandum and not a mortgage and does not require registration. [p. 919, col. 1.]

A secured creditor of an insolvent can bring a suit to realise his securities without the leave of the Court under section 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. [p. 919, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Court, Toungoo, in Civil Regular No. 14 of 1915.

Mr. Bilimoria, for the Appellant.

Mr. Connell, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff Chetty Firm O.A.M.K. of Rangoon sued Badri Dass of

BADRI DAS V. CHETTY FIRM OF O. A. M. K.

Toungoo and the Official Assignee as representing the firm mark S.V.A.R. on an equitable sub-mortgage of the 24th September 1914. The plaintiff obtained a decree in the District Court and Badri Dass now appeals.

The District Judge has carefully considered all the facts. The defence raised one or two legal points which we will now deal with: First, the equitable sub-mortgage was by the deposit of a mortgage-deed made by Badri Dass in favour of the S.V.A.R. Firm and the deposit was made by the mortgagee with the plaintiff in Rangoon. It was accompanied by a document Exhibit B and the question is whether that document is merely a memorandum or whether it should be construed as a mortgage. That document merely recites what securities were handed over at that time to the plaintiff. We are satisfied that it is a memorandum and not a mortgage and, therefore, it does not require registration; secondly, it is contended that the suit is not maintainable because no leave has been obtained under section 17 of the Presidency Insolvency Act. The case of B. N. Ling v. Heptullabhai Ismailjee (1) is an authority to show that a secured creditor can bring a suit to realise his securities without the leave of the Official Assignee. The defence of Badri Dass on the facts is that he had paid up the balance due on this mortgage to S.V.A.R. and that he had not received notice of the equitable sub-mortgage. Rs. 10,000 was due on the mortgage by Badri Dass when this equitable sub-mortgage was made, i.e. on 24th September 1914. He alleges that on the 4th April 1915 he paid to Oodayappa, the agent of the S.V.A.R. Firm in Rangoon, Rs. 4,500 in cash and handed him over a promissory note on which Rs. 5,500 was due which had been executed by S.V.A.R. in favour of Lalchand Kukmull, who in turn had sold the note to Badri Dass' uncle Hardyal and liability under it was taken over by Badri Dass. Beyond the entries in the book of Badri Dass and Hardyal there is no documentary evidence to support this settlement or payment to S.V.A.R. On previous occasions when Badri Dass had made payments in respect of this mortgage such payments were endorsed on the mortgage. On this occasion he took no receipt and he did not get back the mortgage-bond. His explanation of that is that when the mortgage was made in favour of S.V.A.R. the title-deeds of the property were also handed to that firm and when this settlement was made in Rangoon the title-deeds were handed back but the mortgage-deed was in Toungoo; that Oodayappa gave him (Badri Dass) a letter to Vellasami, the agent of the S.V.A.R. Firm in Toungoo, directing him to hand over the mortgage-deed to Badri Dass. Badri Dass says he went to Tongoo and showed the letter to Vellasami, that Vellasami said he would give him the mortgage-deed and Badri Dass thereupon handed him the letter and Vellasami subsequently said he had lost the mortgage-deed. Badri Dass, therefore, parted with the letter without receiving the mortgage-deed. Vellasami and S.V.A.R. deny the whole of this story and it is almost impossible to believe that Badri Dass would have parted with that letter without receiving the mortgage-deed. No written demand was made for the mortgage-deed until the 10th May, more than a month later. The plaintiff alleges that he gave notice to Badri Dass a day or two after the 24th September and that Badri Dass paid three instalments of interest to the plaintiff through one Perianan, the agent at Toungoo of the firm of C.R.V.V.C.T. The plaintiff had no branch at Toungoo and Perianan must have been known to Badri Dass as having no business connection with the S.V.A.R. Firm. Badri Dass alleges that he made these payments to Vellasami. Perianan alleges that they were made direct to him by Badri Dass on behalf of the plaintiff. Perianan has entered two of these payments in a temporary loan account book and two letters are put in, Exhibits J and K, written by Perianan to the plaintiff explaining what arrangements Perianan had made with Badri Dass for the repayment of this mortgage. The District Judge has disbelieved the case set up by Badri Dass and has believed the plaintiff's case as to notice having been given to Badri Dass. We agree with the view the District Judge has taken of the case. The appeal is dismissed and the plaintiff will have his costs against the appellant of this appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 714; 33 B. 359; 15 Bom. L. R. 939.

RAGHU SINGH v. USUF AIL.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL REVISION No. 258 OF 1917.
March 22, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chapman and Mr. Justice Atkinson.

RAGHU SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS —PETITIONERS

versus

USUF AIL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s. 21 (a)—Suit valued at more than Rs. 5,000—Appeal preferred to District Judge—Jurisdiction—Consent of parties, whether confers jurisdiction—Objection, when to be taken.

A suit for recovery of money on the basis of a mortgage valued at more than Rs. 5,000 was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge who decreed it ex parte and dismissed an application by the defendant for re-hearing under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code. The defendant preferred an appeal to the District Judge against the order dismissing his application under Order IX, rule 13. The parties did not raise any objection as to the jurisdiction of the District Judge, who decreed the appeal.

Held, (1) that under section 21, clause (a) of the Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act, the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal and his order was a nullity; [p. 920, col. 2.]

(2) that the fact that the plaintiff did not raise any objection as to jurisdiction in the appeal did not estop him from raising it before the High Court, inasmuch as where there is an inherent want of jurisdiction, the consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction and objection can be taken at any time. [p. 921, col. 1.]

Where a Court has no inherent jurisdiction to try a case it cannot pronounce any decree and if it does pronounce a decree that decree is null and void. On the other hand, if a Court has jurisdiction and the law requires some preliminary conditions to be observed ancillary to such jurisdiction being exercised, the parties may waive these conditions and in that event the jurisdiction cannot be impeached on the ground of irregularity in the exercise of the Court's jurisdiction. [p. 920, col. 2.]

Application against an order of the District Judge, Monghyr, dated the 25th June 1917, setting aside that of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Monghyr, dated the 14th April 1917.

Mr. Purnendu Narain Singh, R. B., for the Petitioners.

Mr. Abani Bhushan Mukerji for Mr. Muhammad Mustafa Khan, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

ATKINSON, J.—This application comes before us in revision seeking to set aside the order of the District Judge of Monghyr, dated the 25th of June 1917. The facts out of which this application arises are that the plaintiffs, the petitioners before us, instituted a suit for recovery of money due on foot of a mortgage-bond, dated the 13th of September 1904; and for the purposes of Court-fee the suit was valued by the plaintiffs at Rs. 5,992-3-5. The case came on for hearing and was decreed ex parte. An application was then made by the defendants to set aside the ex parte decree under Order IX, rule 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The learned Subordinate Judge declined to set aside the ex parte decree and from that order there was an appeal to the District Judge. It is contended before us that the learned District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal by virtue of the provisions of section 21, clause (a) of the Civil Courts Act of 1887. That section provides that a District Judge shall have jurisdiction in first appeal where the value of the suit appealed from does not exceed Rs. 5,000. Here, it is conceded that the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 5,000 and is nearly Rs. 6,000. Thus it is contended that the order of the learned District Judge is a nullity and is void. With that view we agree; and that view is amply supported by authority. The authorities may shortly be summarized to be that where a Court has no inherent jurisdiction to try a case it cannot pronounce any decree and if it does pronounce a decree that decree is null and void. On the other hand, if a Court has jurisdiction and the law requires some preliminary conditions to be observed ancillary to such jurisdiction being exercised, the parties may waive these conditions and in that event the jurisdiction cannot be impeached on the ground of irregularity in the exercise of the Court's jurisdiction. The learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the petitioners has referred us to the case of Ledgard v. Bull (1) and at page 203 their Lordships of the Privy Council say: "When the Judge has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject matter of a suit, the parties cannot by mutual consent convert it into a proper judicial process although they may constitute the Judge their arbiter and be bound by his decision on the merits when these are submitted to him." I think that what their Lordships mean to lay down is

(1) 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 741; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561.

KHETRA NATH MANDAL v. MAHOMED ALLA RAKHA.

that where the parties agree to submit their differences to a particular person who has no jurisdiction as a Judge that then they are bound by the decision of that arbiter to whom they submit for determination the matter in dispute between them. But where a Court has no inherent jurisdiction the consent of parties cannot give jurisdiction. That proposition has never been denied. The learned Vakil for the defendants has endeavoured to argue that the plaintiffs, not having raised the question of jurisdiction before the learned District Judge when the application was before him, are estopped from doing so at this stage. In my opinion, there is no foundation for, or substance in, this argument. I think that at page 384 of the latest edition of Woodroffe's Code of Civil Procedure a correct summary of the law is to be found, where it is stated as follows:—

"A party can only appeal when so allowed by Statute; and it is only the Court to which jurisdiction is given to entertain an appeal in a particular matter which can determine it. And where there is inherent incompetency in a Court, it has been held that objection can be taken at any time and that consent cannot confer jurisdiction".

Two cases have been referred to by the learned Vakil for the defendant. One is Jose Antonio Barreto v. Francisco Antonio Rodrigues (2). That case is clearly distinguishable on its facts, because in that case the learned Judges were not dealing with the general proposition of law with which we are concerned. The only question in that case was as to the determination of the market value of a certain property for the purposes of establishing jurisdiction and it was held that as neither party raised any question as to want of jurisdiction on the part of the Court which tried the case, they must be taken to have admitted that the market value of the property in suit was below Rs. 5,000. That case was essentially different from the present case. The second case relied upon by the learned Vakil for the defendant is Dayaram Jagjivan v. Govardhandas Dayaram (3). That case seems to be a very strong case because the learned Judges there admitted that the Court had no jurisdiction; but they declined to interfere on the ground that the plaintiff to whom relief was granted by the lower Appellate Court would, if the application was allowed, be obliged to bring a suit to establish the right which he claimed to the property in dispute after the expiry of the period of limitation within which he was entitled to bring that suit. I cannot follow the reasoning of the judgment of the learned Judges in that case. It seems to me to be quite inconsistent with the principles laid down in the Civil Procedure Code. In my opinion, the learned District Judge in the case with which we are dealing had no inherent jurisdiction to hear the appeal and that his judgment is, therefore, illegal and must be set aside. I would, therefore, allow this application and set aside the order of the learned Judge, dated the 25th of June 1917. There will be no order as to costs.

CHAPMAN, J.—I agree.

Application allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1929
OF 1915.

February 13, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr.
Justice Walmsley.

KHETRA NATH MANDAL AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

MAHOMED ALLA RAKHA AND OTHERS
—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 35. - Evidence, admissibility of—Certified copies of papers of partition under Regulation XIX of 1814, whether admissible.

Certified copies of the papers in the Collectorate, which prima facie appear to be the record of a partition made in a proceeding under Regulation XIX of 1814 between the predecessors of the parties to a suit, are good and admissible evidence, quite apart from anything contained in section 35 of the Evidence Act. [p. 923, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Birbhum, dated the 28th

(2) 7 Ind. Cas. 950; 35 B. 24; 12 Bom. L. R. 712.

(3) 28 B. 458; 6 Bom. L. R. 462.

KHETRA NATH MANDAL v. MAHOMED ALLA RAKHA.

April 1915, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Court at Rampurhat, dated the 26th March 1914.

Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter and Babu Debendra Nath Mandal, for the Appellants.

Babus Ram Chandra Majumdar and Nagendra Nath Ghosh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—This second appeal is preferred by the defendants in a suit in ejectment. The suit relates to a tank claimed by the plaintiffs as appertaining to an estate No. 718 of the Birbhum Collectorate, their title to which as patnidars has now been conclusively established. As to the question of limitation, there are materials on the record to support the District Judge's finding that the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-interest was in possession of the tank within 12 years of the institution of the suit. That finding, therefore, is also conclusive.

The only question for our consideration is whether the learned District Judge's further finding that this disputed tank does in fact appertain to Estate No. 718 does or does not rest on evidence which is admissible in law.

It is common ground that in the year 1852 there was a partition of the lands common to four revenue paying estates of which the present Estate No. 718 was one. The partition was carried out, as the parties also agree, under Regulation XIX of 1814. That Regulation related to the partition of estates paying revenue to Government. The law on the subject is now contained in the Estates Partition Act of 1897 (Bengal Act V of 1897) which superseded and repealed a previous Act of the year 1876.

In dealing with this part of the case, the District Judge has founded himself mainly, if not entirely, on certified copies of certain chittas and a map produced by the plaintiffs. The learned Pleader for the defendants contends that those papers are not evidence and are not within section 35 of the Evidence Act. In support of that contention he has cited the cases of Perma Roy v. Kishen Roy (1) and Nanda Lal Pathak v. Chanurp t Das (2).

The latter of these two cases rests on the former and that case again rests on the earlier case of Mohi Chowdhry v. Dhiro Misra (3).

In all three cases the papers were apparently papers prepared by a Government official in the course of proceedings taken under the Act of 1876. In none of the cases, however, did the question arise in a contest between rival claimants to the Zemindari or proprietary title.

In Mohi Chaudhry's case (3) the question was the amount of rent payable by a tenant whose name appeared in the batwara papers. In Perma Roy's case (1) the contesting parties were rival tenants and in Nanda Lal Pathak's case (2) they were landlords and persons claiming possession under a rent-free title.

The distinction to which I have adverted between cases in which the parties to the dispute are parties claiming under the partition and other cases is clearly vital. Reference may be made to Gopal Chunder Shaha v. Madhub Chunder Saha (4) which was decided in 1873. There again the contest was between persons claiming as tenants and it was said: "The batwara was between the Zemindars: it is not binding in any way upon the raiyats, and any statements made in the batwara chittas are no evidence as against the parties to this suit."

It may be observed in passing that the law has been differently and more broadly laid down under the Act of 1897. In Janki Dobey v. Kirtarath Roy (5) it was held that batwara papers were admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the amount of rent payable by a tenant. No express reference is made to section 35 of the Evidence Act, but stress is laid on the similarity of the procedure prescribed by Chapter VI to the procedure laid down in the Bengal Tenancy Act for the preparation of a Record of Rights.

In the present case the controversy arises between persons claiming as proprietors or standing in the shoes of the

(1) 25 C. 90; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 61.

(2) 18 Ind. Cas. 143; 17 C. L. J. 482; 17 C. W. N. 776.

(3) 6 C. L. R. 139.

(4) 21 W. R. 29.

(5) 4 Ind. Cas. 316; 13 C. W. N. 93.

U AWBATHA v. U THU DATHANA.

propriators. The proceedings under the Regulation were proceedings to which admittedly the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-interest and the defendants' predecessor-in-interest were parties. The chittas are not signed, but the map to which they relate purports to be signed by a Deputy Collector and the words which follow his name imply that he was attached to the western Survey Division. According to the procedure laid down in the Regulation, the division of the common lands among the different estates was first to be made by an Amin on the spot. The Amin was to prepare certain papers and transmit them to the Collector under section 18. Under section 19, the Collector was required to examine the papers submitted by the Amin and after hearing the parties to draw out a paper of partition. He was then to give the parties 5 days within which to make objections. If no objections were made (and there is no suggestion that any were made in this case) the next step was to put the parties in provisional possession of the lands attached to them respectively. The paper of partition was then to be forwarded to the Board of Revenue or to the Board of Commissioners for confirmation.

It is said that the documents produced may be merely the chittas and map prepared by the Amin on the spot, but that is hardly consistent with the signature of the Deputy Collector on the map, to which the chittas are an index. Then it is said that it is not shown that the partition was confirmed by any superior Revenue Authority. Lapse of time, however, and the absence of any dispute at the time requiring settlement by such authority may account for the order of confirmation not being forthcoming.

The copies produced are copies of papers in the Collectorate. The map is authenticated by a Deputy Collector. Prima facie the papers appear to me to be the record of the partition which was in fact made and made in a proceeding between the predecessors-in-interest of the present parties. If so the certified copies produced are good and admissible evidence, quite apart from anything in section 35 of the Evidence Act.

The Commissioner appointed to make a local enquiry reported that according to the map in question the tank was included within Estate No. 718 and that report has been adopted by the learned District Judge.

In my opinion the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 25 OF 1916.

March 13, 1918.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Maung Kin.

U AWBATHA—APPELLANT

versus

U THU DATHANA AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law, questions of, decision of—Vinayn—Atthagatha.

Questions of Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law which come before the Civil Courts must be determined not merely by the canonical text of the Vinaya, i. e., the Palidaw, but the Atthagatha and other commentaries must also be considered and the provisions of the Dhammathats should also be taken into account as throwing a valuable light on the established custom of the country. [p. 923, col. 2.]

Mr. Wiltshire, for the Appellant.

Mr. May Oung, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—It is agreed in this case that the decrees of the lower Courts must be set aside and that the case must be remanded to the District Court in view of the decision of the Full Bench in Civil Reference No. 1 of 1916. According to that decision it is clear that questions of Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law which come before the Civil Courts must be determined not merely by the canonical text of the Vinaya, i. e., the Palidaw, but that the Atthagatha and other commentaries must also be considered and the provisions of the Dhammathats should also be taken into account as throwing a valuable light on the established custom of the country. The Upper Burma ruling Nga Fo Thin v. U Thi Hla (1), (1) 23 Ind. Cas. 157; U. B. R. (1910-13) 1, 183; 7 Bur. L. T. 27.

MUHAMMAD YAR v. UMAR HAYAT KHAN.

on which the judgments of the lower Courts are based, proceeded entirely on the canonical texts, and the decision of the learned Additional Judicial Commissioner as to a gift by a monk of a monastery and site requires re-consideration in the light of Civil Reference No. 1 of 1916.

The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside and the suit is remanded to the District Court for disposal in accordance with the above remarks under Order XLI, rule 23. The District Judge will re-determine the preliminary issue and any other questions of Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law that arise in this case, paying regard to the commentaries and Dhammathats as well as the canonical text of the Vinaya.

A certificate will be granted for the refund of the Court-fee on the memorandum of appeal under section 13, Court Fees Act.

Costs of this appeal will follow the final result.

Case remanded.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 186 OF 1915.

January 30, 1918.

Present:—Sir Henry Rattigan, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

MUHAMMAD YAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—APPELLANTS

versus

Malik UMAR HAYAT KHAN AND OTHERS
—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Sister and sister's son—Gondals of Deowal, Tahsil Bhera, District Shahpur.

Among Gondals of Mauza Deowal, Tehsil Bhera, District Shahpur, a sister succeeds to the property left by her brother in the absence of his collaterals. [p. 925, col. 2.]

It is too broad and sweeping a proposition that a sister and a sister's son cannot under any circumstances be regarded as heirs to property in cases governed by the general customary law of the province. The onus is on them to prove their right of succession as against near and possibly even remote collaterals, but in the absence of any agnatic heirs, their right to succeed is preferable to the rights of the proprietary body or Government, especially in villages which are not homogeneous and are composed of proprietors belonging to different religions, different castes and different tribes. [p. 925, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Shahpur, at Sargodha, dated the 23rd of November 1914, decreeing the claim on payment of Rs. 10,830-8-0.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Appellants.

Mr. Nanak Chand and Lala Madan Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 1st May 1913. Ziada Gondal sold 439 kanals of land, together with the site of a dilapidated house situated in Mouza Deowal, Tahsil Bhera, to Malik Muhammad Umar Hayat Khan for Rs. 12,000, the sale-deed being duly registered on 13th May 1913. On the 5th May 1914 one Palhu, a proprietor of Mauza Deowal, brought a suit against the vendor and the vendee for pre-emption of the property sold, basing his claim on his being a co-sharer in a joint holding and a proprietor in the village. He alleged that the price entered in the sale-deed had been entered mala fide and that the real market value was approximately Rs. 5,500.

On the 12th May 1914 Musammatt Wallan, the sister of Ziada, and her son, Salehon, brought another suit for pre-emption and claimed that their right of pre-emption was superior to that of Palhu, inasmuch as their claim fell within section 15 (a) and (b) "thirdly" of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1913. They expressed their readiness to pay the full amount entered in the sale-deed. Palhu was impleaded as a defendant in the second suit and Salehon and Musammatt Wallan were impleaded as defendants in Palhu's suit. Ziada admitted that he had received full consideration for the sale and the vendee acknowledged the rights of pre-emption both of Palhu and of Salehon and Musammatt Wallan and he claimed that the full consideration for the sale had been paid to the vendor in good faith.

Palhu in his plaint, and in his written statement in answer to the suit by the rival pre-emptors, based his claim simply on the facts that he was a co-sharer and a proprietor in the village and he himself never alleged that he was collateral of the vendor. At a later stage of the proceedings, however, his Pleader on his behalf vaguely stated that he was a collateral though he could not state in what degree.

The Subordinate Judge by his order passed on the 5th November 1914 dismissed both suits on the ground that Musammatt Wallan and Salehon had failed to prove that they were by custom entitled to inherit the vendor's property and, therefore, could not claim the right to pre-empt the land in suit, while Palhu's claim was dismissed on the ground that he had failed to prove that he was a collateral. Immediately after pronouncing judgment the Subordinate Judge appended a "note" to the effect that he had omitted to consider Palhu's claim as a co-sharer. He, therefore, issued notice to the parties to show cause why the mistake made by him in his judgment should not be rectified. After hearing the parties the Subordinate Judge reviewed his previous judgment and on the 23rd November 1914 decided that Palhu had a right to pre-empt the land on the ground claimed by him. He thereafter found on issue No. 4 that Rs. 11,360 out of the total consideration of Rs. 12,000 had been duly proved to have been paid to the vendor but that as the whole amount had not been paid, it was necessary to consider the market value of the property. For this purpose he appointed a Pleader who lived near the village as local Commissioner, and the latter after inspecting the land and recording evidence reported that the market value of the land was Rs. 98 per higha. Accepting this valuation and allowing Rs. 75 for the site of the house, the learned Subordinate Judge held the total amount payable by Palhu was Rs. 10,830-8-0. He accordingly dismissed the suit of Musammât Wallan and Salehon with costs and granted Palhu a decree for possession of the property conditional on his paying Rs. 10,830-8-0 to the vendor within one month, failing such payment the suit to stand dismissed with costs. He further directed that Palhu's costs should be borne by the vendor and the vendee equally and that the Rs. 140, which according to the sale-deed had to be paid to a previous mortgagee and which had not in fact been paid up to date, should be paid by Palhu. From this decree both the vendee and Salehon and Musammât Wallan have preferred appeals to this Court, making Palhu respondent in each case.

MUHAMMAD YAR V. UMAR HAYAT KHAN.

After hearing arguments by Messrs. Nanak Chand, Mukand Lal Puri and Madan Chand, we find ourselves unable to agree with the view taken by the Subordinate Judge as regards the claim of Musammât Wallan and her son, Salehon. It has been asserted, and is not denied, that with the possible exception of Palhu, there is no other collateral of Ziada in existence and Palhu's claim to be a collateral has in no sense been established. The pedigree table set out at page 4 of the printed paper-book in First Appeal No. 186 of 1915 makes it quite clear that Palhu's family is entirely distinct from Ziada's and that Palhu's father acquired property in the village by purchase after the settlement. We cannot assent to the broad and sweeping proposition that a sister and a sister's son cannot under any circumstances be regarded as heirs to property in cases governed by the general customary law of this province. No doubt the onus is on a sister or a sister's son to prove their right of succession as against near and possibly even remote collaterals, but in the absence of any agnatic heirs their rights to succeed appears to us to be preferable to the rights of the proprietary body or Government, especially in villages which are not homogeneous and are composed, as Mauza Deowal is, of proprietors belonging to different religions, different castes and different tribes. Our conclusions are supported by the remarks of Robertson and Maude, JJ., in Sheran v. Musammât Sharman (1) and of Chatterjee and Johnstone, JJ., in Ballu v. Gur Dyal (2). We accordingly hold in the peculiar circumstances of the present case that Musammât Wallan and her son would be entitled to inherit Ziada's property in the event of his decease and that they are consequently entitled to a right of pre-emption superior to that of Palhu. We, therefore, accept their appeal and reversing the decree of the Subordinate Judge we grant Musammât Wallan and Salehon a decree for possession of the property in suit on payment within three months from this date of the full consideration entered in the sale-deed, viz., Rs. 12,000, they having expressed their willingness to pay that amount in full. In default of Musammât Wallan and Salehon paying the said amount within the time specified, Palhu will be entitled to pre-empt the land on payment of the said amount within six months from this date. We have directed that Palhu shall pay the full amount of Rs. 12,000, because we are satisfied that the vendee actually paid the full consideration to the extent of Rs. 11,860 and that he undertook liability for the Rs. 140 due to the previous mortgagee. It is quite possible that by some arrangement between Ziada and the defendant's servants or agents the sum of Rs. 500 was allowed by Ziada to be retained by such servants or agents, but this fact cannot affect the question whether the vendee himself actually paid the vendor the full amount. Having regard to all the circumstances of the case we are of opinion that the parties may well be left to pay their own costs in this Court and we direct accordingly.

(1) 117 P. R. 1901; 182 P. L. R. 1901.

(2) 95 P. R. 1905; 47 P. L. R. 1906.

U ZAYANTA v. U NAGA

The result is that we accept the appeal of Musammat Wallan and Salehon and also the appeal of Malik Muhammad Umar Hayat Khan.

Appeal accepted.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 153 OF 1916.

February 12, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ormond.

U ZAYANTA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

U NAGA—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 123—(Gift—Registration—Buddhist Law, Burmese—Religious gift, whether requires registration.

Burmese Buddhist religious gifts are not exempted from the operation of section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act. Therefore, a gift or dedication of a Kyaung is not valid unless registered. [p. 927, col. 2; p. 928, col. 1.]

Mr. May Oung, for the Appellant.

Mr. Villa, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

TWOMEY, C. J.—This was a suit for possession of a certain pucca Kyaung and site forming part of a Kyaungtaik at Moulmein. In paragraph No. 1 of the plaint the plaintiff claimed that the whole Kyaungtaik within the specified boundaries, known as Dammayon Kyaungtaik, belonged to him according to the Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law, in other words, he claimed the property as presiding Pongyi Taik-ok or Kyaung-ding in succession to the former Pongyi U Eindasara who is referred to in the proceedings as the leper Pongyi. U Eindasara died from 7 to 12 years before the suit, which was filed in July 1915. The plaintiff was a pupil of Eindasara and states that in 1263 B. E., that is about 1901, U Eindasara went through the ceremony known as dwithantaka with him. The effect of this ceremony was to admit the plaintiff to joint ownership of the Kyaungtaik with U Eindasara, so that on U Eindasara's death the plaintiff would become the sole Taik-ok. The plaintiff states that after he had succeeded U Eindasara on the latter's death he in turn admitted another Pongyi U Wunna to joint ownership with him by the dawithantaka method. He afterwards left U Wunna in sole charge and went to Rangoon to study. During his absence the pucca Kyaung building which had been begun in Eindasara's time was completed by the lay donors and these laymen dedicated it to U Wunna in the plaintiff's absence. Subsequently while the plaintiff was still absent from Moulmein, U Wunna discarded the yellow robe and went into the world, but just before doing so he made over the newly built Pucca Kyaung to another Pongyi, namely, his uncle U Naga the defendant. When the plaintiff came back and tried to eject U Naga, the latter instituted proceedings under the Criminal Procedure Code and successfully resisted the plaintiff, who thereupon brought this suit against him for possession of the brick Kyaung.

Plaintiff's first witness U Athaba gives evidence as to the dwithantaka ceremony between Eindasara and the plaintiff Zayanta. The 2nd and 3rd witnesses give evidence as to the latter dwithantaka ceremony between Zayanta and Wunna.

The evidence shows that Eindasara presided over the Kyaungtaik up to his death. The actual Kyaung that he occupied, first by himself and afterwards with Zayanta, was a wooden building on the site of the Pucca building now in dispute and this wooden building has been removed and re-erected at another spot within the Kyaungdaik. The plaintiff says that this wooden building had been given to Eindasara by another Pongyi by a document, but there is no other evidence on this point. Ma Hlaing, P. W. No. 4, an aged woman who was one of the supporters of the Kyaungtaik, states that when Eindasara died, the supporters telegraphed to Zayanta the plaintiff, who was then absent in Mandalay; that Zayanta then came and presided over the Kyaungtaik in succession to Eindasara and that no one raised any objection, but as Zayanta wanted to go away temporarily to continue his studies he invited another Pongyi Wunna to take charge of the Kyaungtaik in his absence. The defendant Naga's witness U Zarita also says that Eindasara was head Pongyi, i. e., Taik-ok, and that afterwards the plaintiff "invited Wunna to come to the small Kyaung, i. e. the old wooden Kyaung and then went away." Subsequently when the brick Kyaung was about to be dedicated "U Wunna went to Rangoon to call the plaintiff, i. e., presumably for the purpose of receiving the dedication, but he refused to come." This witness admits having heard that Eindasara and the plaintiff had performed the dwithantaka ceremony and the defendant's witness No. 3 Mg. Po Te also states that Eindasara presided in the Kyaungtaik and that plaintiff presided after Eindasara's death.

C ZAYANTA V. U NAGA.

The evidence as to the dwithantaka ceremony between Eindasara and Zayanta is not rebutted and there is no reason to disbelieve it, except that it was not relied upon by Zayanta or mentioned by him in the criminal proceedings under section 145, Code of Civil Procedure. But even apart from that alleged ceremony the fact that Zayanta succeeded Eindasara as presiding Pongyi of the Kyaungtaik appears even from the evidence of the defendant's own witnesses. It is shown by this evidence also that the defendant Naga's donor Wunna had originally come to the Kyaungtaik on the invitation of the plaintiff Zayanta and there is, therefore, all the more reason for believing the statements of the plaintiff and his witnesses as to the dwithantaka ceremony between Zayanta and Wunna.

It is proved that the brick building was dedicated to Wunna during Zayanta's absence without a registered document. The defendant Naga's claim rests on an unregistered document of transfer written by Wunna on the day he discarded the yellow robe. The transfer was invalid for want of a registered document. But though Naga's title is defective he is in possession and cannot be ejected unless the plaintiff is held to have proved his title. It is clear, however, that the plaintiff has proved it. Whatever may have been the effect of the two dwithantaka ceremonies, the evidence establishes that Zayanta became presiding Pongyi or Taik-ok in succession to Eindasara and in that capacity he obtained control over the whole Kyaungtaik. The brick Kyaung built within the Kyaungtaik was dedicated to Wunna but Wunna was either subordinate to Zayanta as Taik-ok or else he was joint owner with Zayanta by virtue of the dwithantaka ceremony. Wunna on discarding the yellow robe disappeared and his evidence was not forthcoming. Even if we assume that Wunna himself in whose name the brick Kyaung was dedicated could have resisted a claim by Zayanta for possession, it must be held that the defendant Naga who merely claims under an invalid transfer from this ex-Pongyi has no title to oppose to the plaintiff's claim as presiding Pongyi of the whole Kyaungtaik. But it must be observed that the gift of the brick Kyaung to Wunna by the lay builders also appears to have been inoperative for want of a registered instrument under section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act, which was in force in Moulmein at the time of the dedication.

The District Judge confused dwithantaka with withathagaha which have nothing in common except that they are both Pali words. He also lost sight of the fact that the plaintiff was claiming as presiding Pongyi of the whole Kyaungtaik and he, therefore, attached undue importance to the fact that neither the plaintiff nor his predecessor Eindasara had ever lived in the new brick building in suit. He treated the gift of the brick Kyaung to Wunna and the transfer by Wunna to the defendant Naga as valid transfers overlooking the absence in each case of a registered instrument. The District Court's decision is clearly wrong and I will set it aside and grant the plaintiff a decree for possession as prayed, with costs in both Courts.

BIBI KULSUM v. SYED MUHAMMAD HAMID.

The defendant should be ordered to pay to Government Rs. 630, namely, the amount of Court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff-appellant if he had not been permitted to sue and to appeal as a pauper.

ORMOND, J.—The evidence shows that the plaintiff was the head monk of the monastery after U Eindasara's death in 1907 or 1908. The Kyaung in dispute was completed in 1908 or 1909, after the death of Eindasara, and was dedicated to U Wunna who was then acting as head monk during the plaintiff's absence in Rangoon, and who was joint head monk with the plaintiff.

The plaintiff claims possession of the Kyaung by virtue of being the head monk and also under a dwithantaka made between himself and U Wunna. The defendant's title rests upon a gift of the Kyaung made to him by U Wunna in 1911 or 1912.

No gift of the Kyaung could be made until the Kyaung had been built. It was not completed until 1908 or 1909, i. e., after section 123 of the Transfer of Property had been extended to Moulmein. Burmese Buddhist religious gifts are not excepted from the operation of that section and as none of the alleged gifts of this Kyaung were effected by a registered document, each of these gifts was void; namely, the gift or dedication of the Kyaung in favour of U Wunna by the lay donors, the gift of a joint share in the Kyaung by U Wunna to the plaintiff under dwithantaka and the gift of the Kyaung by U Wunna to the defendant.

U Wunna, therefore, acquired no title to the Kyaung, except as joint head monk with the plaintiff; and U Wunna had no right to hand over the Kyaung to the defendant without the plaintiff's consent.

The Kyaung, having been built on monastery land, must be taken to be an addition to the monastery property and the plaintiff as head monk of the monastery is entitled to possession. I concur in the order passed by the learned Chief Judge.

(Order set aside.)

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 159 OF 1918.

February 4, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe.

Musammat BIBI KULSUM—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

SYED MUHAMMAD HAMID AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7, cl. (v) (a)—Suit for possession on basis of mokarrari deed—Court-fee payable—Mokarrari lease, whether land

A suit for possession of immoveable property on the basis of a mokarrari lease is purely one for possession of immoveable property within the meaning of section 7, clause (v) of the Court Fees Act. [p. 929, col. 1.]

A mokarrari lease of a definite share in a revenue-paying estate is land within the meaning of section 7, clause 5 of the Court Fees Act. [p. 929, col. 2.]

FACTS.—One Nurul Hasan was the proprietor of the entire 16 annas of Mouza Badrabad. He was the husband of Musammat Walihan, the mother of the plaintiff and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3. To satisfy a mortgage decree held by one Gonhar Ali against Badrabad, Nurul Hasan executed a perpetual Mokarrari deed on 22nd August 1892 in favour of Musammat Walihan in respect of the entire 16 annas of Badrabad and a share in another village and put her in possession of the property. In execution of a money decree against Nurul Hasan, the village Badrabad was subsequently sold and was purchased by Gonhar Ali. Gonhar Ali in his own turn sold the village to defendant No. 2, who mortgaged it to defendant No. 1. Defendant No. 1 having obtained a decree on the basis of his mortgage put Badrabad to sale and purchased it and got delivery of possession on 22nd December 1914. The plaintiff, who was one of the heirs of Musammat Walihan, brought the present suit claiming the following reliefs:—

1. It may be declared that out of the entire 16 annas of Mouza Badrabad detailed at the foot of the plaint 5 annas 4 pies is the permanent Mokarrari interest of the plaintiff and that her possession over the said Mokarrari may be confirmed.

2. If in any way the plaintiff be considered or proved to be out of possession of the Mokarrari and defendant No. 1 be proved or considered to be in possession or if the plaintiff be dispossessed after the institution of the suit the plaintiff may be put in possession of the subject-matter in dispute and defendant No. 1 or any other contesting defendant may be dispossessed and mesne profits may be awarded to the plaintiff.

GOBINDA HOTA v. KRISTAPADA SINGHA BABU.

The plaintiff valued the subject-matter in dispute at Rs. 1,025 for jurisdiction but paid Court-fees on ten times the Government Revenue. The trial Court as well as the District Judge dismissed the suit. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal in the High Court and paid the Court fees on ten times the Government Revenue as she had done in the Courts below.

The Stamp Reporter submitted that the suit was for a declaratory decree with a consequential relief and, therefore, ad valorem Court-fee should have been paid under section 7 (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act. He relied on Dinobundhoo Chordhry v. Raj Mohinee Chowdhraia (1), Bohuroonissa Bube v. Kuremoonissa Khaton (2), Pirya Dos v. Vilayat Khan (3). Besides, he submitted that the suit was one for possession of lease-hold property. Lease-hold property was not an estate within the meaning of section 7 (v). Therefore, the Court-fee payable was on the value of the subject-matter and not on ten times the Government Revenue. He relied on Ram Ekbal Singh v. Baldeo Singh (4).

The Taxing Officer agreed with the submission of the Stamp Reporter and referred the case to the Taxing Judge for decision.

Mr. Muhammad Ishfaq, for the Appellant.

ORDER.—I do not think any declaratory decree was necessary in this case. The suit is purely one for possession of immovable property. The Mokarrari deed relied upon is merely the document of title on which the suit is based.

With regard to the second part of the reference the decision in Ram Ekbal Singh v. Baldeo Singh (4) and the two cases quoted in that decision, Fursand Ali v. Mohan Lal Suri (5) and Ram Raj Tewari v.

Girnanadan Bhagat (6), are authority for the proposition that suits for occupancy rights and rights of Ryots holding at fixed rates do not come within the first clause of section 7, clause (v) of the Court Fees Act. Habibul Hossain v. Mahomed Reza (7) is authority for the proposition that a Mokarrari lease of a definite share in a revenue-paying estate is land within the meaning of this clause. With the latter decision I agree. The appeal may, therefore, be admitted as correctly stamped.

(Order accordingly.)

(6) 15 A. 63; A. W. N. (1892) 240; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 757.

(7) 8 C. 192; 10 C. L. R. 355; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 123.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1099 OF 1916.

April 19, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice Sir Shamsul Huda, Kt.

GOBINDA HOTA AND ON HIS DEATH HIS HEIRS AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES—PRINCIPAL DEFENDANT NO. 1—APPELLANTS
versus

KRISTAPADA SINGHA BABU AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Accretion to tenancy by formation of chur in river—Tenant, rights of—Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation (XI of 1825, s. 4, sub-s. (4)—Alluvion and diluvion.

Lands which have gradually accreted to a mukarrari holding, forming a chur in a small shallow river cannot be claimed by the Zemindar as a portion of his khas patil but belong to the tenant subject to the payment of additional rent in respect thereof. [p. 930, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Bankura, dated the 23rd of December 1915, modifying that of the Munsif, Khatra, dated the 7th of September 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Narendra Nath Chowdhury, on behalf of the Appellant—The Court of first instance relied upon a decision in Ramjan Ali v. Maharaj Ali Khondkar (1) and it was discussed by the learned District Judge in the Court of Appeal. But there is a Full Bench case in Gourhari Kaiburto v. Bhola Kaiburto (2), the facts in which are

(1) 26 Ind. Cas. 406.

(2) 21 C. 233; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 787 (F. B.).

(1) 8 B. L. R. App. 32; 16 W. R. 213.

(2) 19 W. R. 17.

(3) 22 A. 384 at p. 386; A. W. N. (1900) 119; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1291.

(4) 25 Ind. Cas. 507; 19 C. L. J. 418.

(5) 32 C. 268.

GOBINDA HOTA v. KRISTAPADA SINGHA BABU.

exactly the same as here and the decision is in my favour. In Regulation XI of 1825, section 4, clause (4), in case of shallow rivers the bed is the property of individual proprietors and where churs are formed in the beds of such rivers, those can be occupied by proprietors of lands adjacent to them but in case of navigable rivers the bed belongs to the Government. Many conflicting rulings are set at rest by this Full Bench ruling. Referred to Rajendra Nath Roy v. Nanda Lal Guha (3).

Babu Jogesh Chunder Roy (with him Babu Kshitish Chunder Neogy), for the Respondents, contended that the preamble of the Regulation XI of 1825 says that this Regulation applies only to navigable rivers. All the cases which support the other side are not exactly to the point. The river always is the property of the landlord.

[FLETCHER, J.—Yes, but he will only get additional rent for the land thus formed.]

The question is where the river itself is admittedly the property of the landlord, whether section 4, clause (4), of Regulation XI of 1825 will apply in this case. I submit in such cases it does not apply. It is only in cases of navigable rivers where the bed belongs to the Government and not to private individuals that section 4, clause (4), of Regulation XI of 1825 applies and Mr. Justice Holmwood's view in Ramjan Ali v. Maharam Ali Khondkar (1) applies, but not to the present case where the river is shallow and admittedly the property of the owner. None of the cases referred to by my friend refer to non-navigable rivers.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant No. 1 against the decision of the learned District Judge of Bankura, reversing the decision of the Munsif of Khatra. The plaintiff sued for possession of certain chur lands. The defence of the tenant, the defendant No. 1, was that these lands were gradual accretions to his holding and, therefore, although he might be liable to pay additional rent, the plaintiff was not entitled to eject him. The case in the lower Appellate Court quite clearly proceeded on the footing that the defendant

No. 1 had got a Mukarrari holding. That is quite clear from the judgment of the learned District Judge. It is much too late now for the plaintiff to raise the case that the holding is not a Mukarrari one. He ought to have raised it when the case was decided in the Courts below. The real point is this: The learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court has found that these lands are gradual accretions to the lands of the defendant No. 1 forming a chur in a small and shallow river and, therefore, according to the learned Judge's view on the words of section 4, sub-section (4) of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation (Regulation XI of 1825), the defendant No. 1 was not entitled to the accreted lands, but the same formed a portion of the khas patit of the Zemindar. In support of that view the learned Judge relied on the decision of the Court of Holmwood and Chapman, JJ., in the case of Ramjan Ali v. Maharam Ali Khondkar (1). That case, in my opinion, is clearly opposed to the decision of the Full Bench of this Court in the case of Gourhari Kaiburto v. Bhola Kaiburto (2). We notice in the case decided by Holmwood and Chapman, JJ., that the Full Bench decision was not cited to them. It seems to be quite clear that the view that the learned Judges took of sub-section (4) of section 4 of Regulation XI of 1825, where it mentions that the chur thrown up in a small and shallow river should belong to the proprietor of the bed of the river subject to the provisions stated in the first clause of section 4, was that what was intended was not a protection only of the Government revenue, but that the Zemindar or the proprietor acquired the chur subject to the rights of the tenure-holders and the subordinate tenure-holders as mentioned in the first sub-section to section 4. I am unable to agree with the conclusion arrived at by the learned District Judge in this case. The appeal must, therefore, be allowed, the decree of the learned District Judge set aside and the decrees passed by the Munsif restored with costs both here and in the Court of Appeal below.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

HARDUM SINGH v. MG. PO HTU.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 36 OF 1917.

January 30, 1918.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Ormond.

HARDUM SINGH AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MG. PO HTU AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Construction of document—Sale or mortgage—Consideration, non-payment of, effect of.

Where a document is in the form of an outright sale, the executant is precluded from showing that it is in fact a mortgage but he is entitled to show that the consideration has not been paid, and he is entitled to retain possession until the consideration is paid.

Mr. Anklesaria, for the Appellants.

Mr. Doctor, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—By a registered deed of the 8th December 1915 the defendant conveyed to the plaintiff the land in suit for Rs. 5,450. The land was let out to tenants. The plaintiff sued for possession and for a declaration that he was the absolute owner. The defence was that the transaction of 8th December 1915 was a benami transaction entered into in order to defeat creditors of the defendant and that the defendant was entitled to rely upon that defence inasmuch as the fraud was not carried out.

Plaintiff in his plaint states that the consideration for this sale consisted of an undertaking to redeem a certain mortgage of Rs. 2,000 on this land, a payment of Rs. 1,620 made to the defendant personally on the 14th November 1915, two payments of Rs. 900, Rs. 630 respectively both made on the 2nd December 1915 at the request of the defendant to two judgment-creditors of his, and a payment of Rs. 300 on the 7th December in respect of interest due on the above mortgage, making in all Rs. 5,450. The payments of Rs. 900, Rs. 650 and Rs. 300 are admitted but the defendant states that he re-paid the Rs. 900 in the following Tabodwe through his tenants, one of whom says he gave 600 baskets to the plaintiff's son and the other 300 baskets. An issue was raised as to whether these items forming the consideration for the purchase were actually paid by the plaintiff. The District Judge found that Rs. 1,620 had not been paid. He also found that the defendant had not re-paid the Rs. 900. We agree with the District Judge in those findings. The evidence as to the re-payment of the Rs. 900 is extremely scanty and if the transaction of 8th December 1915 was in fact a mortgage, as the District Judge seems to think, it is improbable that the defendant would re-pay so soon after the mortgage was taken. On the other hand, if it was an outright sale there would be no debt to be re-paid. The document being in the form of an outright sale, the defendant is precluded from showing that it was in fact a mortgage, but he is entitled to show that the consideration has not been paid. The plaintiff states that the Rs. 1,620 was paid on the 14th November at a time when the defendant appears to have been under arrest for a debt, in which case the money could not have been paid at the plaintiff's house. The plaintiff says that on the 14th November the price of the land was arranged; he was to redeem the mortgage and to pay only the balance to the defendant and he paid this curious sum of Rs. 1,620 on that date, i. e., long before he could possibly know the amounts that would be due under the decrees that he subsequently paid off for the defendant. The plaintiff took no receipt from the defendant for this alleged payment of Rs. 1,620 but he took the trouble to call three witnesses to testify to the payment. We think it very improbable that the plaintiff would have paid so large a sum without taking a receipt so long before the document was executed, and we agree with the District Judge in his comment as to the absence of the Thugyi and other respectable witnesses at the time of the alleged payment. We find as a fact that that payment was not made. The question then arises, should we in this appeal grant the plaintiff a decree postponing possession until he has paid the balance of the consideration.

Two cases have been cited as authorities to show that the seller is entitled to retain possession until the consideration is paid. These are Umedmal Motiram v. Davu bin Dhondiba (1) and Subrahmanya Ayyar v.

(1) 2 B. 547; 3 Ind. Jur. 119; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 787.

FIRM, RAM GOPAL-KANHIA LAL V. NARAIN DAS.

Poovan (2). It is true that defendant did not raise this question as an alternative defence but he does so in the memorandum of appeal. An issue was raised and determined as to whether these items forming the consideration had been paid, and seeing that those facts have been fully gone into and determined we think we should give such relief as is warranted by the facts proved.

The decree of the lower Court is modified and there will be a decree for the plaintiff for possession upon his paying Rs. 1,620 to the credit of the defendant into Court (District Court) within three months from this date.

The defendant did not raise the point in the lower Court on which his appeal has succeeded and, therefore, he is not entitled to costs on that amount. On the other hand the respondent has been successful in this appeal on the question of the transaction being benami. The respondent is, therefore, entitled to his costs to that extent in this appeal, i.e., the difference between the value of the appeal and Rs. 1,620. The order as to the costs in the District Court will stand good.

Decree modified.

(2) 27 M. 28.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 488 OF 1916.

April 26, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

FIRM, RAM GOPAL-KANHIA LAL—

PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

NARAIN DAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. V, r. 15, O. XXX, r. 3—Munim, whether a member of family—Direction by Court to issue notice to party and his P leader—Service on party's munim, whether sufficient.

A munim is not a member of the family of his employer within the meaning of Order V, rule 15, Civil Procedure Code [p. 932, col. 2; p. 933, col. 1.]

In a suit for recovery of money the Court directed that notice should issue to the parties and their P leaders that they should attend on a certain date. It appeared that no notice was served on the plaintiff's P leader, but one was served upon the munim of the plaintiff's firm. The plaintiff not having appeared on the date fixed the suit was dismissed in default.

Held, that inasmuch as the Court actually directed that the notices should be served upon the plaintiffs themselves as well as upon their P leaders, the service on the munim, even if he was the person having the control or management of the plaintiff's business, was not sufficient and that the Court had no power to dismiss the suit for default. [p. 933, col. 1.]

Petition, for revision of the order of the Additional District Judge, Delhi, dated the 25th February 1916, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Class, Delhi, dated the 15th December 1915, rejecting application for restoration of the case dismissed in default on 5th October 1915.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., for the Petitioners.

Lala Rama Nand, for Mr. Haq Nawaz, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs-petitioners' suit was dismissed in default on the 5th October 1915 in the presence of the defendants' Counsel. An application for restoration of the case to the pending file was rejected and an appeal to the District Judge from this order of rejection having been dismissed, the plaintiffs have come up to this Court on the revision side.

It is urged on their behalf that when the case was transferred from the Court of the Munsif to that of the Subordinate Judge, they received no intimation of the date fixed by the Subordinate Judge for proceeding with it. It appears that on the 11th August 1915 the Court directed that notice should issue to the parties and their P leaders that they should attend on the 5th of October. No notice was served on plaintiffs' P leader but one was served upon the munim of plaintiffs' firm. It is contended on behalf of the petitioners that a munim is not a recognised agent within the meaning of Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. Even if he was a manager of the plaintiffs' business, he would not be his recognised agent within the meaning of clause (b) of rule (2), because the plaintiffs themselves reside in Delhi, i.e., within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. Order V, which deals with the issue and service of summons, is also referred to and it is pointed out that a summons directed to a person cannot be served upon his munim and that a munim is not a member of the family within the meaning of Order V, rule 15. This contention is correct. But on behalf of the respondents it is contended that the plaintiffs are a firm and that the provisions of Order XXX, rule 3, Civil Procedure Code, as to the service of summons apply. Rule 3 provides that where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, the summons shall be served either:—

JAGAN NATH MARWARI v. EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

(a) Upon any one or more of the partners, or (b) at the principal place at which the partnership business is carried on within British India upon any person having, at the time of service, the control or management of the partnership business there, as the Court may direct.

In my opinion the service on the munim, even if he was the person having the control or management of the partnership business in Delhi, was not sufficient, because the Court actually directed that the notices should be served upon the plaintiffs themselves as well as upon their Pleader. The lower Appellate Court says: "It is extraordinary that an application should have been made next day to restore the case if plaintiffs had no notice." The reason why an application was made on the next day has been satisfactorily explained in an affidavit filed in this Court by the plaintiffs' Pleader. I must hold that plaintiffs were never served in accordance with law with notice that the case would be heard on the 5th of October 1915.

I, therefore, allow the revision, and set aside the order of the lower Courts, rejecting plaintiffs' application and also the order of dismissal of the 5th of October 1915, and direct that the first Court shall proceed with the trial of the case in accordance with law. Costs in this Court and the lower Appellate Court will be costs in the case.

Revision allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1354 OF 1916.

April 19, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice Sir Shamsul Huda, Kt.

JAGAN NATH MARWARI AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Carriage of goods—Railway Company, whether bound to re-weigh goods and give certificate of shortage—Consignee's refusal to take delivery—Damage to goods after refusal, liability for.

A Railway Company is not bound to re-weigh the goods and give a certificate of shortage on the demand of the consignee. If the consignee refuses to take delivery on the Company declining to re-weigh the goods and give a certificate of shortage, the goods remain at his risk so that any deterioration or damage caused to the goods after the date of his refusal to take delivery falls on him. [p. 934, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Burdwan, dated the 18th of March 1916, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court of that District, dated the 7th of December 1914.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Surendra Nath Ghosal, on behalf of the Appellants.—The goods having been booked at railway risk the Company is bound to recoup me, the consignee, for the loss caused by its wilful negligence on account of the damage for shortage in weight caused by the delay of the Company's servant in weighing the goods and giving delivery. And all these have been found by the trial Court. The question is, can the Company give me less than the price that I am entitled to get. Plaintiffs claimed re-weighing on their own scales but this was refused. The Railway Company was bound to re-weigh the goods under these circumstances as has been held in several cases of this Court, or at least they must give us a certificate of shortage. Janki Das v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Company (1) and Ramjash Agarwala v. Indian General Navigation and Ry. Co., Ltd. (2) were cited.

Mr. Lingford James (with him Babu Ambica Pado Chowdhury), for the Respondent, urged that under those decisions the Company could not be called upon to re-weigh (1) 13 Ind. Cas. 509; 16 C. W. N. 356; 15 C. L. J. 211.

(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 387; 22 C. W. N. 810.

JAGAN NATH MARWARI v. EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

the goods. Those two cases cited rather go against my friend instead of helping him. Even in cases of railway risk, the Company is not bound to re-weigh. The plaintiff refused to take delivery in proper time and as such he was in default and the case being so, the goods were at his risk and he and he alone is liable for any loss or damage to the goods after that date. The Company cannot be liable for the loss or damage.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff against the decision of the learned District Judge of Burdwan, dated the 18th March 1916, reversing the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge of the same place. The plaintiff sued to recover damages for breach by the defendant Railway Company of a contract to carry and deliver to him certain bags of grain. The goods were admittedly consigned to the Company and they arrived at the destination and apparently five bags were found in a sack in a torn condition. Thereupon, the plaintiff set up the case that he was entitled to have the goods re-weighed and to receive a certificate of shortage, and apparently he set up the case that he was entitled to have the goods re-weighed on his scales and not on the weighbridge of the defendant Company. The defendant Company through their servants refused to assent to the demands of the plaintiff. Thereupon, the plaintiff refused to take delivery and the goods were left in the custody of the Railway Company. After sometime, having served proper notices, the Railway Company sold the goods by auction and having deducted their charges paid the balance into Court to the credit of the plaintiff. The first point that the plaintiff must establish in a case like this is that the Railway Company committed a breach of their contract by refusing to have the goods re-weighed and to give a certificate of shortage in the manner demanded by the plaintiff. No authority has been given to us by the plaintiff showing that the Railway Company were under a liability to re-weigh the goods or to give a certificate of shortage. On the other hand, two cases have been cited to us that are exactly in point, namely, the case of Janki Das v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Com- pany (1) and the case of Ramjash Agarwala v. Indian General Navigation and Railway Co. Ltd. (2), a very recent decision of Chatterjee and Newbould, JJ. Both these cases decide that the Railway Company is not under a liability to re-weigh the goods or to give a certificate of shortage. If that is so, then, when the plaintiff refused to take delivery except these conditions were complied with, he was in default and both under the terms of the contract and under the terms of the general law, the plaintiff being in default, the goods were at his risk and any deterioration or damage suffered to the goods after that date fell on the plaintiff. That being so, it is quite clear that the plaintiff cannot sue to recover damages for that loss. The case, to my mind, is clearly covered by authority.

It has been suggested by the Railway Company in their cross-appeal that the evidence does not support a partial award of damages that has been made by the learned Judge and that the only amount that the plaintiff can recover on the facts established in this case is the actual amount for which the goods were sold less the Company's charges for warehousing, and costs of sale and other similar matters. The Railway Company, however, at our suggestion, have not pressed their cross-appeal and we, therefore, need not consider whether the award made by the learned District Judge can or ought to be reduced. The plaintiff, in my opinion, having regard to the decisions of this Court, has not been able to establish that the railway administration is liable for any larger amount than that awarded by the lower Appellate Court. The present appeal, therefore, fails and must be dismissed. The cross-appeal is also dismissed. We make no order as to costs either in the appeal or in the cross-appeal.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

SHWE YIN v. MA ON.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 24 OF 1917.

January 21, 1918.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, Kt., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Ormond.

SHWE YIN—APPELLANT

versus

MA ON AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1891), s. 23
—Letters of Administration, grant of—Rival applicants
—Procedure.

Where rival applicants apply for Letters of Administration one of whom is admittedly entitled to a share in the estate under section 23 of the Probate and Administration Act and the status of the others is disputed, the Court should grant Letters of Administration to the heir whose status is admitted.

Mr. J. R. Das, for the Appellant.

Mr. N. N. Burjorjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Ma Shwe Yin, applied for Letters of Administration to the estate of Maung Win Pan deceased, on the ground that she was his widow. The respondents Ma On and Maung Tin also applied for Letters of Administration—jointly—as the legal representatives of Ma Me who was the second wife of the deceased Win Pan, and who had survived him but had since died. Ma On is the mother and Maung Ba Tin is the brother of Ma Me. The status of Ma Shwe Yin was disputed but the status of Ma Me was admitted. The learned Judge of the original side found that the appellant had not proved that she was the wife of the deceased Win Pan and he granted Letters of Administration to Ma On under section 41 of the Probate and Administration Act.

Mr. Das for the appellant asks us to go into the evidence and to grant Letters of Administration to Ma Shwe Yin as the widow of the deceased Win Pan. The case of Ma Tok v. Ma Thi (1) lays down that where two rival applicants apply for Letters of Administration one of whom is admittedly entitled to a share in the estate under section 23 of the Probate and Administration Act and the status of the other is disputed, the Court should grant Letters of Administration to the heir whose status is admitted. In the present case Ma Me was admittedly entitled to a share in the estate as a lesser wife. If Ma Me's legal representatives as such apply for Letters of Administration to the estate of the person to whom Ma Me was an heir, we see no reason why they should not stand in the shoes of Ma Me. This is the rule adopted under English Law, on the ground that the grant of Letters should follow the interest. See Williams on Executor, 10th Edition, page 322 and Gill, In re (2) Ma Me lived in her husband's house and, therefore, lived separately from, and was not dependent on, her mother Ma On. Ma On and Maung Ba Tin in their application stated that they were the sole heirs of Ma Me and that fact was not denied. But under the Privy Council ruling in Ma Nhin Bwin v. U Shwe Gons (3) Maung Ba Tin, the 2nd respondent, would be Ma Me's sole heir and he alone, therefore, represents her estate. We see no reason why the principle enunciated in Ma Tok's case should not be applied in the present case and Letters of Administration granted to the 2nd respondent as standing in the shoes of Ma Me and as her legal representative.

JESA RAM v. MEHR CHAND.

The learned Judge on the original side does not explain why he thought it necessary or convenient to proceed under section 41 of the Act. No reason appears for not granting Letters to the person entitled under section 23, namely, Ba Tin.

We vary the order by cancelling the grant of Letters of Administration to Ma On and grant them to the 2nd respondent Ba Tin. There will be no order as to costs.

Order varied.

(2) (1829) 1 Hagg. Ecc 341; 162 E. R. 606.

(3) 23 Ind. Cas. 433; 8 L. B. R. 1; 16 Bom. L. R. 377; (1914) M. W. N. 449; 27 M. L. J. 41; 18 C. W. N. 1121; 16 M. L. T. 142; 7 Bur. L. T. 105; 20 C. L. J. 264; 41 C. 887; 1 L. W. 914; 41 I. A. 121 (P. C.).

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 701 OF 1917.

May 8, 1918.

Present:—Sir Henry Rattigan, Kt., Chief Judge.

JESA RAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

MEHR CHAND—PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), ss. 19, 20—

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 719; 5 L. B. R. 78.

JESA RAM v. MEHR CHAND.

Notice to pre-emptor not specifying property to be sold or its price, whether valid—Omission of pre-emptor to reply to notice—Suit, whether maintainable.

In a suit for possession by pre-emption, it appeared that the vendor on the 12th June 1913 applied to the Court stating that he proposed to sell certain property and praying that action be taken under section 19 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act and notices issued to the persons entitled to pre-empt. The Court issued the notices, but in those notices there was no mention of the actual property to be sold or of the price at which it was to be sold. The notices were served on the 16th June 1913 and the 1st of July was fixed for the appearance in Court of the persons to whom they were issued. On that date plaintiff appeared and protested that the notice had not given him all the requisite information. Thereupon the Court handed over to him for perusal the original application of the vendor and on the same day he filed certain pleas with regard to the price, etc. The hearing was adjourned to the 21st of July and on that date to the 11th of August, when a further postponement to the 12th of November was ordered. On that date the Court recorded an order to the effect that none of the parties was present, that the three months' limitation had expired and that the proceedings should, therefore, be filed. On the 9th June 1914 the vendor sold the land and the plaintiff instituted his suit on the 8th June 1915:

Held, (1) that under the circumstances there was sufficient notice of the sale given to the plaintiff within the meaning and for the purposes of section 19 of the Pre-emption Act but that on the other hand the plaintiff had failed to prove that he had complied with the provisions of section 20; [p. 937, col. 1.]

(2) that the right of pre-emption had been extinguished before the suit was instituted and the plaintiff was, therefore, not entitled to any relief. [p. 937, col. 1.]

Miscellaneous second appeal from the order of the Additional District Judge, Multan at Dera Ghazi Khan, dated the 30th/31st January 1917, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Muzaffargarh, dated the 12th January 1916, and remanding the case to the first Court for re-trial.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Lalas Hargopal and Rajindar Parshad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 12th June 1913 Mr. Van Milder applied to the Court under section 19 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, stating that he proposed to sell certain specified property for a sum of Rs. 5,000 and that there were some seven persons entitled to a right of pre-emption in respect of such sale. In this application he prayed the Court to take action under section 19 of the Act and issue notice to the said persons. The Court issued notices accordingly, but in those notices there was no mention of the actual property to be sold or of the price at which it was to be sold.

The notices were served on the 16th June 1913, and the 1st of July was fixed for the appearance in the Court of the persons to whom the notices were addressed. On the 1st July the present plaintiff, Mehr Chand, who is admittedly one of the persons having a right of pre-emption, appeared in Court and protested that the notice had not given him information either as to the property to be sold or as to the price, and it would appear from the record that the Court thereupon must have handed over to him for perusal the application filed by Mr. Van Milder, as on the same day the plaintiff filed certain pleas in which reference is made to the property, the price and other details set forth in the application. In these pleas the plaintiff asserted that the price fixed, namely, Rs. 5,000 was excessive and that the true market value was Rs. 1,000. The Court adjourned further proceedings to the 21st July and on the latter date to the 11th August, when further postponement to the 12th November was ordered. On the last mentioned date the Court recorded an order to the effect that none of the parties was present and that the three months' limitation had expired and that the proceedings should, therefore, be filed. On the 9th June 1914 Mr. Van Milder sold the land in question to Seth Jesa Ram and Seth Lurind Chand for Rs. 3,500 and on the 8th June 1915 plaintiff instituted the present suit for pre-emption.

It is contended by the vendee that plaintiff has lost his right of pre-emption by failure to comply with the provisions of section 20 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act. This contention was upheld by the Subordinate Judge, but was overruled on appeal by the District Judge on the ground that plaintiff had substantially complied with the provisions of section 20, inasmuch as on the 1st July 1913 he had announced in Court and in the vendor's presence his intention to assert his pre-emptive right. He accordingly remanded the case for trial on the remaining issues. The vendee has appealed from this decision and I have heard Mr. Tek Chand on his behalf and Mr. Hargopal on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent. The first objection urged by Mr. Tek Chand was that the plaint had not been sufficiently stamped for the purposes of the Court Fees Act, but I overruled this objection as it appears to me that the Court-fee stamp is sufficient under the provisions of section 7 (v) of the Court Fees Act, 1870.

GIRISH CHANDRA MITRA v. GIRIBALA DEBI.

There can be no doubt that the decision of the District Judge under appeal is erroneous, inasmuch as there is nothing on the record to shew that on the 1st July 1913 plaintiff announced in Court and in the presence of the vendor his intention to exercise his rights of pre-emption. All that we know from the record is that the plaintiff sometime that day filed his written pleas in the Court, but there is nothing to shew that the vendor had those pleas brought to his notice or even that he was present when they were filed. Such being the facts it is not necessary for me to decide whether, had the facts been as stated by the District Judge, there would have been a sufficient compliance with the provisions of section 20. On behalf of the respondent, however, it is contended that the notices issued through the Court at the instance of the vendor were themselves materially defective, inasmuch as they did not mention the property to be sold or the price at which it was proposed to sell it and in this connection reliance is placed on Amir Chand v. Amar Singh (1). Mr. Tek Chand for the vendee admits that the notices in themselves were defective, but points out that the plaintiff pre-emptor was duly notified on the 1st July 1913 of all the necessary facts when he appeared in Court on that date and was shewn the copy of the application filed by the plaintiff. As I have already stated, it is obvious that the plaintiff must have been shewn this application on the 1st July and that it must have been the Court which shewed it to him. In the circumstances I think there was sufficient notice given to the plaintiff within the meaning and for the purposes of section 19 of the Act, but that, on the other hand, plaintiff-respondent has failed to prove that he duly complied with the provisions of section 20. The right of pre-emption had, therefore, been extinguished before the present suit was instituted.

I accordingly accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the District Judge I dismiss plaintiff's suit with costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1181 OF 1916.

April 16, 1913.

Present : — Mr. Justice Fletcher and Justice Sir Syed Shamsul Hada, Kt.

GIRISH CHANDRA MITRA—PLAINTIFF

—APPELLANT

versus

GIRIBALA DEBI, WIDOW OF ADYA CHARAN MUKHOPADHYA, AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885 B.C.), Sch. III, Art. 8—Dispossession of tenant by landlord—Limitation for suit to recover possession of holding—Recognition of ryot's interest in holding, effect of.

After the dispossession of a ryot by some of the co-sharer landlords, his right to redeem the holding was recognised by the Court in a mortgage suit by another of the co-sharer landlords:

Held, that such recognition by the Court did not extend the period of two years' limitation which the ryot had under Article 3, Schedule III, of the Bengal Tenancy Act for bringing a suit for recovery of possession of the holding. [p. 938, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Birbhoom, dated the 16th of February 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, Suri, dated the 18th of January 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Samatul Ohunder Dutt (with him Babu Jyotish Ohunder Sirkari, for the Appellant.—It is laid down in Sheikh Sarfuddin Mandul v. Chandra Mani Gupta (1) that where the landlord recognises the tenant's interest within two years of the suit limitation is saved.

I rely upon the recognition in the mortgage suit by Rajubala who is a 4 annas landlord. There was a previous mortgage suit by Giribala with which I am not concerned.

[FLETCHER, J.—You were dispossessed by defendants Nos. 2 and 3 more than two years ago as landlords. Then where do you get recognition?]]

(1) 41 Ind. Cas. 266; 53 P. R. 1917; 115 P. W. R. 1917.

(1) 5 C. W. N. 405.

HAYAT MUHAMMAD v. MAHMUD.

I get it from the recognition of my right to redeem the mortgage in the mortgage suit of Rajubala, a co-sharer landlord. The redemption suit is an acknowledgment of my title and hence limitation is saved under Schedule III, Article 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Babu Biraj Mohan Mozumdar and Babu Bankim Chunder Mukherjee for Babu Manmatha Nath Mukherjee and Babu Debendra Nath Mandal for Babu Sarat Chunder De, for the Respondents, were not called upon.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff against the decision of the learned District Judge of Birbhum dated the 16th February 1916 reversing the decision of the Munsif at Suri. The plaintiff sued to recover possession on the ground that he had the right as a tenant. The story of the title is a complicated one. Amongst the defendants-landlords are the defendants Nos. 2 and 3, and it has been found as a fact in this case that the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 dispossessed the plaintiff more than two years prior to the institution of the suit. Therefore, the suit is barred by limitation under Article 3 of Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act. It is said that that is not so, because in this case the landlords recognized the interest of the plaintiff as being a subsisting interest, and the manner in which it is said that the landlords recognized the interest of the plaintiff is this: That, in a mortgage suit by one Rajubala, another of the co-sharer landlords, the Court recognized that the plaintiff had a right to redeem the property. That is not a recognition by the landlord. You may call it a recognition by the Judge. It is not suggested that a recognition by the Judge extends the period of limitation under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The case is clearly concluded by the finding of fact that the plaintiff, even if he had the right as a tenant, was out of time in bringing the present action. The present appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs. The two sets of respondents who have appeared are entitled each to a separate set of costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 902 OF 1917.

May 3, 1918.

Present :—Mr. Justice Scott Smith.

HAYAT MUHAMMAD—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

MAHMUD - PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 59—(Occupancy rights, succession to—Burden of proof—Settlement record, entry in—Presumption of correctness.

M, son of K, claimed possession of certain occupancy land on the ground that he was the heir of one S. It appeared that in the Summary Settlement of 1853 one K. was entered as an asami of certain land in the same village, but K's name did not appear in the Regular Settlement of 1860 and S, the uncle of the plaintiff, was found to be in possession of certain land which he stated he had reclaimed from banjar within the previous 15 years and was granted occupancy rights therein. On the death of S, the land was mutated in the name of his widow, the landlord allowing her to remain in possession for her lifetime:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as it was not proved that the land entered in the name of S, was the same as that entered in the name of K, it could not be presumed to be the same; [p. 939, col. 1.]

(2) that a presumption of correctness attached to the entry in the Regular Settlement of 1860 and that S, having at that time been declared as having personally acquired occupancy rights in the land in suit, K, having had no part or share in bringing the land under cultivation, the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable; [p. 939, col. 2.]

(3) that presumption could not take the place of positive proof. [p. 939, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jhelum, dated the 24th February 1917, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Jhelum, dated the 17th January 1917, dismissing the claim with costs.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Devi Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In the suit out of which the present appeal arises Mahmud, son of Khwaja, claimed possession of certain occupancy land on the ground that he was the heir of Sharfu deceased. The main question at issue was whether the father of Mahmud occupied the land. The first Court found that he had not proved this and dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court on the contrary held that the presumption was that Khwaja did occupy the land and decreed the plaintiff's claim. Hayat Muhammad, one of the defendants-landlords, has filed a second appeal in this Court and it is urged on his behalf that the lower Appellate Court was not justified in the presumption that Khwaja occupied the land and that there is no evidence on the record in support of the view that he did occupy it. It appears that in the Summary Settlement of 1853 one Khwaja son of Kamman was entered as an asami of 7 bighas 3 kanals 7 marlas of land in village Monau where the land in suit is situate. In the Regular Settlement of 1860 Khwaja's name does not appear at all, but Sharfu, the uncle of Mahmud plaintiff, was found to be in possession of 4 ghumaons 1 kanal 10 marlas of land, and he stated that he had re-claimed it from banjar within the previous 15 years. He was accordingly granted occupancy rights in this land. In 1886 upon Sharfu's death the land was mutated in the name of his widow, Musammat Afzal Bibi. A copy of the mutation on the record shows that the landlord did not admit that she was entitled to the occupancy rights but allowed her to remain in possession for her lifetime. It is not proved that the land which was entered in the name of Sharfu in the Regular Settlement of 1860 is the same as that which was entered in the name of Khwaja, son of Kamman, in the Summary Settlement. The District Judge presumed that it must have been the same. Now, granting for the sake of argument that the Khwaja, son of Kamman, whose name appears in the Summary Settlement, was the father of Mahmud, it cannot, in my opinion, be presumed that the land then occupied by him was the same land which we find to have been in Sharfu's possession at the time of the Regular Settlement in 1860. It is not proved to be the same, and presumption cannot take the place of positive proof, see Atar Singh v. Thakar Singh (1). It is quite possible that Khwaja may have abandoned the land of which he was in possession in 1853 and that Sharfu his brother was in possession of other land which was omitted to be entered in his name in the Summary Settlement. Moula Baksh v. Gulsher Khan (2) is referred to as authority for the proposition that the entries made at the Summary Settlement should be presumed to be true in the absence of any evidence or reason to discredit them, but all that was held in that case was that the evidence which the papers of the Summary Settlement supply is worth something and that the person who desires to upset an entry in the Summary Settlement records should be called upon to prove the entry wrong. Now, all that the entry in the Summary Settlement in the present case shows is that one Khwaja, son of Kamman, occupied a certain amount of land in 1853 but the entry did not show that the land was the same as that now in suit. On the other hand a presumption of correctness does attach to the entry in the Regular Settlement of 1860. At that time Sharfu was declared to be an occupancy tenant of the land now in suit, because he had himself re-claimed it from banjar during the previous 15 years. I must hold then that Sharfu actually brought the land under cultivation and acquired the occupancy rights therein and that it is not proved that Khwaja had any part or share in doing so. Upon these findings the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed.

SECRETARY OF STATE v. DIGAMBAR NANDA.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court, restore that of the first Court, dismissing the plaintiff's suit, and direct that he pay costs in all Courts.

Appeal accepted.

(2) 3 P. R. 1875.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 56
OF 1915.

August 27, 1917.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

DIGAMBAR NANDA AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), Sch. I, Art. 1—Cross.

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 721; 42 P. R. 1910; 128 P. W. R. 1908; 35 C. 1089; 8 C. L. J. 359; 12 C. W. N. 1049; 10 Bom. L. R. 790; 18 M. L. J. 379; 4 M. L. T. 207; 35 I. A. 206 (P. C.).

SECRETARY OF STATE v. DIGAMBAR NANDA.

objections, memorandum of—Court-fee payable—Lease, construction of—Covenant for renewal.

A memorandum of cross-objections filed by a respondent must be properly valued and bear Court fees ad valorem. [p. 941, col. 1.]

A respondent who files a memorandum of cross-objections is not excused from the payment of Court-fees thereon, merely because the appellant has paid more than adequate Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal. [p. 941, col. 1.]

Where a lease granted by Government contained a clause to the following effect: "If you agree to pay the enhanced rent which will be fixed at the time of re-settlement in future, the Government will have the right to settle with you, and if you decline, with some other person:"

Held, that the clause in the lease embodied in essence a covenant for renewal under which the lessee became entitled to a fresh lease on the same terms as before, except as to the amount of rent and the covenant for renewal. [p. 940, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Midnapore, dated the 13th November 1914.

Babu Ram Charan Mitra, for the Appellant.
Babus Sib Chunder Palit and Kshirod Narayan Bhuiya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the Secretary of State for India in Council from the decree in a suit instituted by the respondents to obtain a lease from Government in respect of an area of 18,510 bighas of land. The facts material for the determination of the questions raised before us are not in controversy. On the 13th May 1872 a settlement was made with Bholanath Nanda (predecessor of the plaintiffs), which was to continue from 1278 till the next measurement and settlement of rent. The settlement proceedings were completed about the year 1878, and on the 5th August 1878 a patta was granted to Bholantah Nanda for a term of (22) twenty two years from 1265 to 1305 at a progressive rate of rent. This lease contained a covenant in the following terms:—

"If you agree to pay the enhanced rent which will be fixed at the time of re-settlement in future, the Government will have the right to settle with you, and if you decline, with some other person."

The evidence shows that when the term of the lease came to an end in the year 1306 (1899-1900), settlement operations were still in progress, and, as a result, the lease was renewed for a term of one year only on the 28th May 1900; this lease contained a covenant in the same terms as the lease of the 5th August 1878. The tenancy was subsequently renewed from year to year, and the last of the series of annual leases was granted on the 6th January 1908. By the time that the term of this lease expired, the settlement operations had been concluded, and, on the 19th March 1909, the plaintiffs, (representatives of the original grantee) presented a petition to the Collector praying that the original lease might be renewed. On the 23rd March 1909 this application was rejected by the Collector, and his order was confirmed by the Commissioner on appeal. On the 15th December 1909 the Board of Revenue, however, reversed the order of the Commissioner, and directed that the petitioners should be offered a renewal of the lease, at enhanced rent, for one year only with effect from the 1st April 1910, the new lease not to contain a clause for renewal. The plaintiffs refused to accept a renewal of the tenancy on these terms, and instituted the present suit on the 30th May 1912. In the plaint, they prayed that the defendant might be directed to renew the lease of 1878 with a covenant for renewal or to execute a permanent lease. The Subordinate Judge has decreed the suit in part and has held that the plaintiffs are entitled to a lease for the period extending from the last Settlement up to the completion of the next periodical Settlement on the same terms as the lease of 1878 and at the rent assessed at the last Settlement minus a profit of 20 per cent., but that there will be no clause about renewal in the new lease. The Secretary of State for India in Council has appealed against the decree on the ground that the plaintiffs cannot claim a renewal of the lease as a matter of right and that the suit should have been entirely dismissed. The plaintiffs have, on the other hand, presented a memorandum of cross objections and have contended that they were entitled to a lease for twenty two years with a covenant for renewal, if not to a permanent lease. The memorandum of appeal by the Secretary of State was valued at Rs. 10,280 (that is, at the same figure as the original suit) and Court fees were paid ad valorem thereon; this could be justified only on the hypothesis that the relief granted to the plaintiffs was all that they sought in their plaint. The memorandum of cross-objections also was valued by the plaintiffs-respondents.

SECRETARY OF STATE V. DIGAMBAR NANDA.

at Rs. 10,280 (apparently on the assumption that the relief granted to them by the decree was entirely valueless) but no Court-fee was paid on the memorandum, on the ground that the Court-fee paid by the appellant fully covered the value of the suit. We ruled at the hearing of this appeal that the memorandum of cross-objections must be properly valued and Court fees paid thereon ad valorem. Order XLI, rule 22 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, shows that a memorandum of cross-objections must conform to the requirements of Order XLI, rule 1, so far as they relate to the forms and contents of a memorandum of appeal, and Article 1 of Schedule I to the Indian Court Fees Act, 1870, as amended in 1908, indicates that Court-fees must be paid on a memorandum of cross-objections precisely in the same manner as on a plaint in a suit or on a memorandum of appeal. It is thus impossible to sustain the view that a respondent who has presented a memorandum of cross-objections is excused from the payment of Court-fees thereon, merely because the appellant may have paid more than adequate Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal. In our opinion, it is incumbent upon the respondent to value the relief claimed by way of cross-objection and to pay Court-fees accordingly. This view is confirmed by the fact that under Order XLI, rule 22 (4), the cross-objection may be heard, even though the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default, which indicates that, under the present Code, the memorandum of cross-objections stands, for some purposes at least, in the same position as the memorandum of appeal. In conformity with this expression of our opinion, the respondents have valued their cross-objections at Rs. 5,000 and have paid the deficit Court-fees due. The appeal and cross-objections must consequently now be considered on the merits.

There can be no room for reasonable doubt that the clause in the lease set out above embodied in essence a covenant for renewal. In the absence of such a clause, the grantor would have been at liberty, on the expiry of the term of the lease, to settle the land on any terms with any person he might choose; hence, if the construction were accepted that the clause was intended merely to reserve liberty to the Government to make a re-settlement with the lessee at enhanced rent, it would be obviously superfluous. It is not necessary for our present purpose to determine, whether, notwithstanding this clause in the lease, the Government might not, on the expiry of the term, decide not to settle the lands with anybody. This much is plain that if the Government did decide to re-settle the lands, the first offer would have to be made to the settlement holder whose term had expired and a settlement would have to be made with him if he should agree to pay the enhanced rent; in other words, he had the option of refusal. In the case before us, the Revenue Authorities did actually decide that the land should be re settled, and, in this contingency, the plaintiff was entitled to have the land settled with him at the enhanced rent. The decisions of this Court in the cases of Secretary of State v. Forbes (1) and Lani Mia v. Muhammad Easin Mia (2) show that where there is a covenant for renewal, if the option does not state the terms of renewal, the new lease would be for the same period and on the same terms as the original lease in respect of all the essential conditions thereof, except as to the covenant for renewal itself. This view is in conformity with what is recognised as well-settled doctrine in England. Consequently in the case before us, immediately on the expiry of the lease of the 5th August 1878, the lessee became entitled to a fresh lease on the same terms as before, except as to the amount of rent and the covenant for renewal. No fresh grant, however, was made as we have seen, and the tenancy was renewed from year to year during a period of nine years. If nothing were known as to the reasons which moved the parties to adopt such a course, the inference might, perhaps, have been legitimately drawn that the lessee abandoned the right of the renewal which he possessed under the lease of the 5th August 1878. It is indisputable, however, that the tenancy was renewed from year to year, because the Settlement operations had not been completed and the amount of rent payable under the new arrangement had not yet been ascertained. The parties plainly intended that the grant of the new lease should be postponed till the fresh settlement then in progress, had been completed. This is clear from the decision of the Board of Revenue given on the 15th December 1909; but the lease which was then offered to the plaintiffs was a lease for a term of one year only. In our opinion, the plaintiffs were not bound to accept the offer thus made. They were entitled to a renewal for the same period and on the same conditions as were to be found in the lease of the 5th August 1878, subject to the reservation that they were liable to pay the enhanced rent and could not claim the insertion of covenant for renewal in the new lease. This in substance is all that they are entitled to have in the present suit, and the Subordinate Judge has made a decree accordingly. But the plaintiffs and the defendant have both attacked this decree. The plaintiffs contend that they are entitled to a lease for 22 years with a covenant for renewal, that is, in substance, a lease in perpetuity though not at fixed rent. The defendant, on the other hand, contends that the suit should be dismissed as the plaintiffs are not entitled, as a matter of right, to a fresh lease at all. For the reasons already assigned, neither of these extreme views can be sustained on principle. On a true construction of the lease of the 5th August 1878, we hold that it was a grant to continue till the next Survey and Settlement proceedings which happened to follow the previous one at an interval of 22 years. In this view the plaintiffs are entitled now to a lease to continue till the completion of the next periodical Settlement, as the trial Court has decreed.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 180; 16 C. L. J. 217.

(2) 33 Ind. Cas. 448; 20 C. W. N. 948.

ISMAIL SAIT & SONS v. WILSON & CO.

The result is that the appeal as well as the cross-objections must stand dismissed, and there will be no order for costs in this Court.

Appeal and cross-objections dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 32 OF 1917.

January 31, 1918.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

Hajee ISMAIL SAIT AND SONS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

WILSON & Co — DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 73, illus (a)—Contract for delivery of goods—Breach—Market, absence of, at place of delivery—Goods not for sale but for use—Damages, measure of.

The measure of damages in case of breach of a contract for delivery of goods, where there is no market at the place of delivery and where the goods are not to be re-sold but are intended only for the buyer's use, is that contained in illustration (a) to section 73 of the Contract Act, i. e., the sum by which the contract price falls short of the price for which the purchaser might have obtained goods of like quality at the time when the goods ought to have been delivered. [p. 945, col. 1.]

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Section 73 of the Contract Act mentions two alternatives, the latter alternative being an additional right to be availed of at the plaintiff's option. [p. 945, col. 2.]

Illustration (a) to the section authoritatively interprets what the Legislature meant by the phrase 'loss or damage which naturally arose in the usual course of things from a breach of the contract' in a 'no-market' case also. The language of the illustration is absolutely general and wide and it makes no exception on account of special circumstances, such as (a) where the party complaining of the breach could get some other substitute for the goods ordered, (b) where he was made a gift of the articles as substitute on the day fixed for delivery and (c) where there was no market at all for the goods at the place of delivery. [p. 947, col. 2; p. 948, col. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment and decree of Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri, dated the 21st March 1917, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court in Civil Suit No. 89 of 1916.

Mr. D. Chamier and Dr. K. Pandalai instructed by Messrs. Short, Bewes & Co., for the Appellants.

Mr. Nugent Grant instructed by Messrs. King and Partridge, for the Respondents.

This Original Side Appeal coming on for hearing on the 5th and 6th December 1917, and having stood over for consideration till this day, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

Wallis, C. J.—The plaintiffs in this case are a well-known firm carrying on business in Mysore and Madras. In 1913 they obtained from the Mysore Government the Abkari contract for Mysore and arranged with the defendants, who carry on business in Madras, that they should go on importing molasses for them in the same way as they had done for the previous holders of the contract. Admittedly the goods contracted for were intended for use by the plaintiffs in their factories at Bangalore. Owing to the disorganization of shipping consequent on the outbreak of the war at the beginning of August 1914, the defendants were unable to ship 800 tons from Java in the month of October 1914 as they were bound to do under their contract. This was a breach of contract for which admittedly they are bound to compensate the plaintiffs in damages, and the main question argued before the learned Judge and before us is as to the measure of damages. The learned Judge awarded the plaintiffs only nominal damages on the ground that they had failed to put before him the proper materials for estimating the damages, and the plaintiffs have appealed.

ISMAIL SAIT AND SONS v. WILSON & CO.

The law as to this subject is to be found in section 73 of the Indian Contract Act and the explanation thereto. Under the body of the section the damages are to be those which naturally arise in the usual course of things from the breach which the parties knew when they made the contract to be likely to result from the breach. By the explanation, the means which existed of remedying the inconvenience caused by the non-performance of the contract must be taken into account. The explanation is in accordance with the decisions in Dunkirk Colliery Co. v. Lever (1) and the decision of the House of Lords in British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company v. Underground Electric Railways (2). In that case Lord Haldane, L. C., observed: "The fundamental basis is thus compensation for pecuniary loss naturally flowing from the breach; but this first principle is qualified by a second, which imposes on a plaintiff the duty of taking all reasonable steps to mitigate the loss consequent on the breach and debars him from claiming any part of the damage which is due to his neglect to take such steps."

The law was recently laid down to the same effect by the Judicial Committee in Jamal v.

Mcolla Dawood Sons and Co. (3). The rule that, where there is a market at the place of delivery, the damages are the difference between the contract price and the market price at the date of delivery may be regarded as an application of the principle embodied in the explanation that the buyer must take the necessary steps to minimize the damage. Where there is a market and the seller has no notice of any contract entered into by the buyer, the market price in the case of failure to deliver is the test by which to estimate the value of the goods, independently of any circumstances peculiar to the buyer and so independently of any contract made by him for sale of the goods. This is the rule in Rodocanachi v. Milburn (4), approved by the House of Lords in Williams v. Agius (5) and applied by the Judicial Committee under the Indian Contract Act in Jamal v. Mcolla Dawood Sons and Co. (3). This is the rule in cases of non-delivery. It has recently been stated in the House of Lords that there is a difference where delivery is only delayed, but that is not the case here, and, also, we are bound by the terms of the Indian Contract Act.

When there is no market for the goods at the place of delivery, the buyer may procure a substitute at a higher cost if it is a reasonable and business-like thing to do and calculated to diminish the loss, and may recover the difference in price as damages from the seller. It has not yet been decided that he is bound to do so and apparently he may refrain from doing so and rely on his claim for damages. See the observations of Lord Atkinson in Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Company v. Carroll (6). Where there is no market, Mr. Mayne says, "the principle upon which the damages are to be assessed is exactly the same. They are to be taken at the value of the article at the date of breach. But the mode of estimating this value is different, for there is no market price which can be quoted." Where the

(3) 31 Ind. Cas. 949, 43 C. 493; 20 C. W. N. 105; 80 M. L. J. 73; 14 A. L. J. 59; 19 M. L. T. 80; 3 L. W. 181; 28 C. L. J. 137; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 70; 18 Bom. L. R. 315; 9 Bur. L. T. 8 (P. C.).

(4) (1887) 18 Q. B. D. 67 at p. 77; 56 L. J. Q. B. 202; 56 L. T. 594; 35 W. R. 241; 6 Asp. M. C. 100.

(5) (1914) A. C. 510; 83 L. J. K. B. 715; 110 L. T. 865; 19 Com. Cas. 200; 58 S. J. 377; 30 T. L. R. 351.

(6) (1911) A. C. 105; 80 L. J. P. C. 59; 103 L. T. 678.

(1) (1878) 9 Ch. D. 20 at p. 25; 39 L. T. 239; 26 W. R. 541.

(2) (1912) A. C. 673 at p. 689; 81 L. J. K. B. 1132; 107 L. T. 325; 56 S. J. 734.

ISMAIL SAIT & SONS t. WILSON & CO.

buyer was under a contract to re-sell, as in Burries v. Hutchinson (7) and Hinde v. Liddell (8), the re sale price is evidence of the value of the goods at the place and time of delivery as observed by Mr. Mayne, and as recently held in Stroms, Bruks, Aktie Bolag v. Hutchinson (9), which approved the judgment of Blackburn, J., as he then was, in O'Hanlan v. Great Western Railway Co. (10), that the natural and fair measure of damages is the value of the goods at the time and place at which they ought to have been delivered to the owner, which I read as meaning the value of the goods to the owner of such goods at the time and place they ought to have been delivered. In that case also, the goods were intended for re-sale by the buyer.

Where, as in the present case, the article is purchased not for sale but for use to the knowledge of the sellers, Mr. Mayne observes, "damages will also be assessed with reference to its value to the purchaser. But its value will be determined by other considerations, that is to say, by the use for which it was intended, the loss which followed from its not being supplied, and the profit which would have been made out of it if it had been delivered in time." In Portman v. Middleton (11), where the defendant failed to deliver a fire box, the plaintiff recovered the price and the extra cost of procuring a substitute but not the special damages of which the defendant had no notice. In Smeed v. Ford (12) the defendant who had failed to supply on the due date a threshing machine was held liable for the deterioration of the wheat owing to its being stacked and injured by rain, as that was a natural consequence of the delay in supplying the machine according to the contract. In Gre v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Co. (13), as I read it, all that was ruled was that it could not be held as a matter of law that the stoppage of the buyer's mills was a natural consequence of the seller's delay in delivering cotton under his contract. In Elbinger Actien Gesellschaft v. Armstrong (14) Blackburn, J., as he then was, delivering the judgment of the Court of Queen Bench observed that "where, from the nature of the article, there is no market in which it can be obtained, the rule as to the difference of contract and market prices is inapplicable," and the plaintiffs were allowed to retain the damages awarded them as to the reasonable results of the delay in delivery. We have not been referred to any case in which a different test was applied in the case of non-delivery as distinguished from late delivery of goods intended for use.

As regards goods intended for re-sale where there is no market price at the place of delivery, in O'Hanlan v. Great Western Railway Co. (10) (which was a case of non-delivery by a carrier, but that appears to make no difference), the value of the goods was arrived at by taking into account the wholesale price at the place of manufacture and adding to it the cost of carriage to the place of delivery and the profit which a hypothetical importer at the place of delivery might be expected to charge. This hypothetical market price is by no means so satisfactory a measure of damages as the real market price where it exists, and is only applicable in the absence of other evidence of value such as the price at which the buyer had contracted to re-sell. It is especially unsatisfactory in cases like the present, where it takes nearly a month from the date of order to procure the goods at the place of delivery. Logically, the price at the date when the goods would have had to be ordered so as to reach the place of delivery on the contract date would seem to be the price to be regarded, rather than the price at the contract date which the

(7) (1865) 18 C. B. (N. s.) 445; 34 L. J. C. P. 169; 11 L. T. 771; 11 Jur. (N. s.) 267; 13 W. R. 386; 144 E. R. 518; 144 R. B. 563.

(8) (1875) 10 Q. B. 265; 44 L. J. Q. B. 105; 32 L. T. 449; 23 W. R. 65.

(9) (1905) A. C. 515; 74 L. J. P. C. 180; 93 L. T. 562; 10 Asp. M. C. 138; 11 Com. Cas. 13; 21 T. L. R. 718.

(10) (1865) 6 B. & S. 484 at p. 491; 34 L. J. Q. B. 154; 12 L. T. 400; 11 Jur. (N. s.) 797; 13 W. R. 741; 122 E. R. 1274; 141 R. B. 482.

(11) (1858) 4 C. B. (N. s.) 322; 27 L. J. C. P. 231; 4 Jur. (N. s.) 689; 6 W. R. 598; 140 E. R. 1108; 31 L. T. (O. s.) 152; 114 R. B. 743.

(12) (1869) 1 E. & E. 602; 28 L. J. Q. B. 178; 5 Jur. (N. s.) 291; 7 W. R. 266; 120 E. R. 1035; 32 L. T. (O. s.) 314; 117 R. B. 365.

(13) (1860) 6 H. & N. 211; 30 L. J. Ex. 11; 6 Jur. (N. s.) 1118; 3 L. T. 328; 9 W. R. 108; 123 R. B. 465; 158 E. R. 87.

(14) (1874) 9 Q. B. 478; 43 L. J. Q. B. 211; 30 L. T. 871; 23 W. R. 127.

ISMAIL SAIT AND SONS v. WILSON & CO.

learned Judge has adopted; but, in the case of goods purchased for use, whichever date be taken, and whether in the present case the price be taken at Calcutta, or at Java, damages assessed on this basis bear no real relation to the buyer's actual loss, and as in the present case, give him heavy damages where he has sustained no real loss. I think, therefore, there is much to be said in favour of adopting Mr. Mayne's rule, and have felt considerable doubt on the question. In this Court, however, we are governed by the Indian Contract Act and illustration (a) to section 73 says that the measure of damages in this case is the sum by which the contract price falls short of the price for which the purchaser might have obtained goods of like quality at the time when they ought to be delivered.

On a careful consideration of the question, I have not found sufficient reason for refusing to follow the rule laid down in the illustration, which also appears from the latest edition of Sidgwick on Damages to be the accepted rule in America.

In the present case the learned Judge finds, and I entirely agree with him, that the plaintiffs sustained no actual loss from the defendants' failure to ship the October consignment, as they were admittedly well stocked. They might, therefore, without any prejudice to themselves have accepted the defendants' offers to ship the October consignment along with the November consignment, or their subsequent offer about the 29th November to forward it by an early shipment in December. These considerations, however, are inapplicable if the rule in illustration (a) is to be strictly applied, as I think it should be.

In arriving at the price for which the goods might have been obtained on the date of delivery, I entirely agree with the learned Judge that we should look prima facie at the cost of obtaining them from Java, and not from Calcutta which gets its supplies from Java, especially as the evidence is that the goods can be obtained as quickly from Java as from Calcutta. Obviously, the market price at Java would ordinarily be less than at Calcutta. It is quite clear that the shipping and insurance difficulties consequent on the outbreak of war in August 1914 must have caused an advance of the prices ruling in Java and Calcutta over those at which the plaintiffs purchased before the war. Exhibit G shows that the defendants were asking Rs. 2-9-0 per cwt., ex-war risk on the 29th October 1914, about the time when the hypothetical dealer in Madras might be expected to purchase the goods in Java to have them ready in Madras on the 29th November, which the learned Judge has fixed as the date of delivery in Madras. Though the plaintiffs have only tendered evidence as to the prices ruling in Calcutta, and the defendants have abstained from tendering any evidence on the subject, Mr. Chamier for the plaintiffs has put before us certain calculations from which he estimates the c.i.f. Java Madras price on November 29th at Rs. 2-8-7 per cwt. This figure he arrived at by deducting the freight to Calcutta, as spoken to in evidence, and adding the freight from Java to Madras, but these are not proved to have been the prevailing freights either at the end of October or of November 1914, and I agree with the learned Judge that the c.i.f. prices from Java are not accurately proved. I think, therefore, that Mr. Chamier is not entitled to judgment as claimed by him for Rs. 8,800 as the difference on 80 tons between Rs. 2-8-7 per cwt., his estimated c.i.f. price from Java on the 29th November, and the c.i.f. contract price of Rs. 1-15-6 plus Rs. 250 importer's profit and Rs. 33 lading charges, in all Rs. 9,033. On the other hand, looking at the evidence as a whole, and especially at Exhibit G-1, I think there is evidence from which I am justified in concluding that the hypothetical value of 800 tons in Madras at the end of November must have exceeded the c.i.f. contract price by not less than Rs. 5,000. It is very likely that the figure would be higher if all the evidence were before us, but we are agreed that that sum may safely be awarded on the evidence before us. I would accordingly allow the appeal and increase the damages to Rs. 5,000. The respondents will pay the costs of the appeal. The memorandum of objections is dismissed with costs.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—Plaintiffs are the appellants. The defendants under two contracts with the plaintiffs were bound to ship 300 tons of solid Java molasses in October 1914 at Java to arrive in Madras in November 1914, the plaintiffs to take delivery at Madras paying Rs. 1-15-6 per cwt. The defendants failed to make the October shipment and thus committed breach of the contract. The plaintiffs sue for recovery of (a) Rs. 23,000, alleged to be the difference "between the contract price and the market price" of the 800 tons of molasses in November 1914 when the molasses ought to have been delivered at Madras by the defendants, and (b) Rs. 2,725-15-6, being the sum paid under protest by the plaintiffs to the defendants owing to the illegal detention by the defendants of some other shipments under the contract till that sum was paid to the defendants.

ISMAIL SAIT & SONS v. WILSON & CO.

The learned Judge on the Original Side gave a decree for the Rs. 2,725-15-6 claimed under the heading (b) on account of the sum paid under protest, but gave only Rs. 100 as nominal damages in respect of the Rs. 23,000, damages claimed under heading (a). Hence the plaintiffs have appealed under the Letters Patent, the appeal being valued at Rs. 21,000 evidently because the plaintiffs' contention in appeal is that the learned Judge on the Original Side ought to have given them Rs. 21,100 as damages instead of only Rs. 100 under the heading (a).

As stated by my Lord in his judgment, the law as to this subject is to be found in the Indian Contract Act, section 73 and in the illustrations thereto. The plaintiffs are by the section entitled to have "compensation for the loss or damage caused" to them "by the breach, the loss or damage being such as naturally arose in the usual course of things from such breach or which the parties knew when they made the contract to be likely to result from the breach of it." Though there are 18 illustrations (a) to (r) appended to section 73, none of them refers in terms to a case where there is no market for the goods at the place of delivery mentioned in the contract. [Three of the illustrations namely (e), (o) and (q) expressly refer to "market price" as one of the essential ingredients to be considered in arriving at the damages.] If there was no illustration at all which could be reasonably held to govern the facts of this case and if the body of the section alone remained for consideration on the question of the amount of damages which the plaintiffs are entitled to, there seems much to be said in favour of the view that, as there is no market for the goods at the place of delivery, and as the pecuniary loss naturally flowing from such a breach cannot, therefore, be estimated with reference to the market price, the plaintiffs ought to prove that "damage" capable of calculation in some other reasonable manner naturally flowed and was sustained by them from such breach, or prove (the second alternative mentioned in section 73) that both themselves and the defendants knew that some other damage was likely to result from the breach of the contract and the amount of such damage. This latter alternative right is, in my opinion, given by the section only as an additional right to that given by the clause which gives compensation for "the loss or damage which naturally arose in the usual course of things" from such breach, such additional right to be availed of at the plaintiffs' option.

Assuming, as I said before, that none of the illustrations to the section throws any light on the dispute in this case in which there is no market for the goods at the place of delivery, I agree with my Lord that the plaintiffs have not proved that any loss or damage naturally arising in the usual course of things from the breach of the plaintiffs' contract has been caused to them, nor (in the alternative) any loss or damage which both parties knew when they made the contract to be likely to result from its breach.

The English cases [see Hinde v. Liddell (8) and Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v. Armstrong (14)] no doubt decide that in such a case (which we might shortly call "no-market case") the damages must be calculated on the basis of the value fixed by the price which would actually have to be paid for the best and nearest available substitute. Some of the English cases, if I may say so with respect, use the expression "market-value" in a loose manner and lay down that the market-value for the calculation of damages must be ascertained in particular modes where there is no market at all for the goods at the place of delivery. [See Wertheim v. Chicoutimi Pulp Company (15).]

(15) (1911) A. C. 301; 80 L. J. P. C. 91; 104 L. T. 226; 16 Com. Cas. 297.

ISMAIL SAIT & SONS v. WILSON & CO.

I agree with Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri that the English and Indian cases do not lay down any inflexible rule that in estimating damages in "no-market" cases that "one has to go to the place which is nearest to the place where the breach occurred" and where there is a market. I agree with him that "it is not the nearest market that always governs but the place where, having regard to all the facts of a particular case, the plaintiff would without any material inconvenience to himself procure the goods in a manner that would throw the least amount of hardship on the other party." In the present case, it was to Java and not to Calcutta that the plaintiffs should have turned to, if they really wanted to procure molasses as a substitute for the molasses contracted for.

I further agree with Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri that the fact that the plaintiffs did not make any purchase of molasses as a substitute for the molasses contracted for or that they have not proved that they suffered a pie of actual damages through the breach of contract does not disentitle them, if the English and American Law applies to this case, from recovering the difference between the Java price in October 1914 plus the cost of carriage to Madras and the contract price. As I said already, it may be a question whether, if the body of the section 73 stood alone, such a difference in a "no-market" case could be treated as loss or damages arising naturally from the breach. I shall take an extreme case, to illustrate what is in my mind, as extreme cases sometimes bring out clearly the principle in dispute. Suppose A at Madras wishes to bring up a wild animal found in Australia as a household pet; there being no market for such an animal at Madras, he enters into a contract with B of Australia through B's agent at Madras in March 1917 for delivery to him at Madras of the animal, the price to be Rs. 300 payable to B's agent at Madras on delivery in September 1917. B illegally repudiates the contract in July 1917 and thus commits a breach. If A had taken other steps in July or August 1917, he could have obtained a similar wild animal from Australia delivered at Madras in September at a cost of Rs. 500. A does not take any such steps but makes a demand for Rs. 200 as damages payable to him and he dies (say) 3 days after the date fixed for the delivery of the animal to him at Madras under the contract. A's son and heir C does not himself care to have any such animal as a pet. Is C entitled to recover Rs. 200 as damages from B for breach of the contract according to section 73 of the Contract Act? Section 73, as I said before, speaks of loss or damage which naturally arose from such breach, using the word 'arose' in the past tense. Can we say that Rs. 200 was the damage which had naturally arisen to A by his not having had a pet wild animal by him during the three days between the date fixed for delivery of the same under the contract and A's death or to A's son and heir by not having inherited a wild animal which he does not want? If, of course, he had tried to obtain a substitute and had obtained it at a cost of Rs. 500, the loss of Rs. 200 might be said to have naturally arisen. Apart from authority therefore and on the language of the body of the section 73 alone, I would be inclined to think that no damages at all can be claimed.

But I think illustration (a) to section 73 authoritatively interprets what the Legislature meant by the phrase "loss or damage which naturally arose in the usual course of things from a breach of the contract" in a "no-market" case also. That illustration is as follows: "(a) A contracts to sell and deliver 50 maunds of saltpetre to B, at a certain price to be paid on delivery. A breaks his promise. Is B entitled to receive from A, by way of compensation, the sum, if any, by which the contract price falls short of the price for which B might have obtained 50 maunds of saltpetre of like quality at the time when the saltpetre ought to have been delivered?" It will be seen that the language of the illustration is absolutely general and wide and it makes no exception on account of special circumstances like the following: (a) a case where B could have used some other substitute for the saltpetre, (b) a case where B was made a gift of 50 maunds of saltpetre as substitute on the date fixed for delivery by A, (c) where there was no market at all for the saltpetre at the place of delivery. The law as stated in the illustration gives an unconditional right to B to get the difference between the contract price and the cost which he would have had to incur to obtain the like quantity of saltpetre with, of course, the least amount of hardship to A. I think this illustration is fully consistent with the English Law as laid down in the House of Lords case of Wertheim v. Chicoutimi Pulp Co. (15), though that case was a case of breach by late delivery and not a case of no delivery at all. So also in Jugmohandas v. Nusserwanji (16) Jenkins, C. J., and Chandavarkar, J., construe section 73 of the Contract Act similarly: "There was no ready market rate. We, therefore, must have recourse to some other test." And then the learned Judges consider all the facts including a statement prepared by the plaintiff himself in that case as to what he considered reasonable compensation from another party who committed a similar breach of contract with plaintiff. Where there are absolutely no materials put forward by the plaintiff to indicate what it would have cost him to obtain similar goods in the cheapest manner, it may be that only nominal damages would have to be allowed. But where there are some materials, the Court should, I think, as a Jury try to arrive at the cost at which the plaintiff could have got other similar goods for the contracted date of delivery and give him the difference, if any, between that and the contracted price. In the present case, we have got the facts that the defendants themselves wrote the letter Exhibit G in October 1914, wherein they offer to deliver molasses at Rs. 2-9-3 per cwt. in November. If we take that rate as the rate at which the plaintiffs would have been obliged to pay if they had attempted to obtain 800 tons or 16,000 cwt., as substitute for the molasses contracted for, then the damages which they would be entitled to would be 16,000 into Rs. 2-9-3 minus Rs. 1-15-6 (9 annas 9 pies) or Rs. 9,750. But it appears that the plaintiffs themselves considered the price Rs. 2-9-3 as too high a quotation and that the price of molasses was probably rising even between the beginning of October and the end of October at Java.

FAZAL NUR O. MUHAMMAD HASSAN.

I might here remark that the plaintiffs might have let in evidence as to why they considered Rs. 2-9-3 as too high or what they considered as a fair price, and the defendants might also have let in evidence as to how they arrived at the figure Rs. 2-9-3 and what the real price was of molasses at Java and what, with the freight and reasonable commission to importers, the costs per cwt. would have come to when delivered at Madras. I, therefore, agree with my Lord that under the circumstances Rs. 5,000 must be taken as a reasonable amount to be awarded to the plaintiffs as damages in this case.

I would, in the result, allow the appeal to the extent of this amount of Rs. 5,000 minus Rs. 100, nominal damages allowed under this head by the learned trial Judge, with the costs of the appeal. The memorandum of objections is dismissed with costs.

M. C. P.

Appeal allowed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1245 OF 1917.

April 16, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din.Musammatt FAZAL NUR AND ANOTHER

—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUHAMMAD HASSAN—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Costs—Court exercising discretion in arbitrary manner—Appeal, second, whether maintainable.

Where a lower Appellate Court exercises its discretion as to the award of costs in an arbitrary manner and not according to judicial principles, a second appeal lies from its decree. [p. 949, col. 1.]

Plaintiff, a minor, sued through her brother as next friend for a declaration that she was not the lawfully wedded wife of the defendant and obtained a decree with costs, the Court holding that no valid marriage had taken place between the plaintiff and the defendant as alleged by the latter and that the plaintiff had never lived with the defendant as his wife. On appeal the District Judge, while agreeing with the lower Court on all points, held that the defendant had been badly treated as the customary reparation for the abduction of his sister by plaintiff's brother had been denied to him and that therefore the plaintiff's next friend must pay the defendant's costs:

VENKITASAMI NAIKCR v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI.

Held, that inasmuch as the defendant's allegations as to the alleged marriage had been found to be false, the District Judge's order as to costs was wholly unjustifiable and must be set aside.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jhelum, dated the 16th January 1917, varying as to costs only that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Jhelum, dated the 20th October 1916 decreeing the claim.

Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Badr-ud-Din Kureshi, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal relates only to costs; and it is urged by the appellants' Counsel that since the District Judge has exercised his discretion as to the award of costs in an arbitrary manner and not according to judicial principles, a second appeal lies from his decree [Daulat Ram v. Durga Prasad (1), Bhugobati Pal v. Mahomed Ali (2) and Ranchordas Vithaldas v. Bai Kasi (3)]. The facts which are relevant to the question of costs are briefly these. The appellant, who is a minor, brought a suit through her brother as next friend for a declaration that she was not the lawfully married wife of the respondent. The Subordinate Judge who tried the suit gave her a decree with costs, holding that no valid marriage had taken place between the appellant and the respondent in 1902, as alleged by the latter, that the appellant had never lived with the respondent as his wife, and that the agreement of 1902 between the appellant's step-brother and the respondent by which the appellant, who was then only two years of age, was to be married to the respondent, a boy of eighteen years, was opposed to public policy and as such invalid. The District Judge while agreeing with the Subordinate Judge, on all points, has held that the respondent has been badly treated as the customary reparation for the abduction of his sister by the appellant's step-brother has been denied to him by the appellant's family, and that, therefore, the appellants' next friend must pay his costs. This is an entirely erroneous view of the situation. It is clear that the appellant was never married to the respondent, and yet in this litigation the respondent has set up a false claim to the effect that he is the husband of the appellant, that the appellant had lived with him as his wife for a great many years, and that she having attained puberty some years ago had ratified the marriage. These allegations have been found to be false; and yet the District Judge has awarded costs to the respondent simply and solely because the appellant's step-brother did not give full reparation to the respondent for having abducted his sister in 1902.

It is clear that the District Judge's order as to costs is wholly unjustified and arbitrary. I accordingly accept this appeal and setting aside his decree as to costs restore that of the first Court.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1135 OF 1916.

October 25, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Napier.

TIRUMALAI MUTHUVEERA
PARAMASIVA VENKITASAMI NAIKCR
—DEFENDANT No. 1—APPELLANT

versus

MUTHUSAMI PILLAI AND ANOTHER—
PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT No. 2—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 72—Mortgage, usufructuary—Expenses of criminal litigation conducted by mortgagee to support title, whether chargeable on property—Suit for re-imbursement, maintainability of—Hindu Law—Guardianship—Step-mother, right of, to act as guardian of her step-son—Contract by guardian, whether chargeable on minor's estate.

It is open to doubt whether an expensive criminal litigation, conducted by a usufructuary mortgagee for the purpose of securing the conviction of persons who have reaped and carried away the crops on the mortgaged land, can be regarded as a proceeding necessary to support the mortgagor's title. [p. 950, col. 2.]

Where, however, the mortgagee acts as a prudent owner and at the request of the mortgagor and the proceedings are rendered necessary, he is entitled to be indemnified in respect of such expenses. [p. 951, col. 1.]

(1) 15 A. 333; A. W. N. (1893) 110; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 980.

(2) 7 C. W. N. 647.

(3) 16 B. 676; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 929.

VENKITASAMI NAICKER v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI.

In such an event the mortgagee has the right to add the amount so expended to the principal money and insist on its payment before redemption or sue separately for its recovery. [p. 951, col. 1.]

Section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act does not restrict the mortgagee's remedy to what is stated there. There is an independent cause of action for expenses incurred under any of the clauses of the section. [p. 952, col. 1.]

Bavanna v. Balagurivi, 9 M. L. J. 177, dissented from.

McEwan v. Crombie, (1884) 25 Ch. D. 175 at p. 177; 53 L. J. Ch. 24; 49 L. T. 499; 32 W. R. 115, explained and distinguished.

In the absence of nearer relations, a step-mother is, under the Hindu Law, entitled to act as the guardian of her step-son. [p. 952, col. 1.]

Maharane Ram Bunsee Koonwaree v. Maharane Soobh Koonwaree, 7 W. R. 321, not approved.

A Hindu guardian cannot enter into a transaction so as to charge the minor on attaining age with personal liability. [p. 952, col. 2.]

Waghela Rajsanji v. Shekh Masludin, 11 B. 551; 14 L. A. 89; 11 Ind. Jur. 315; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 16; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 364, followed.

Where a decree makes the minor personally liable on a contract by his guardian the Appellate Court has jurisdiction to amend and rectify it even in the absence of a memorandum of objections or cross-appeal on behalf of the minor. [p. 952, col. 2.]

The minor's liability, however, for debts properly incurred on his behalf by his guardian can be charged against his estate. [p. 953, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Madura, in Appeal Suit No. 10 of 1916, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Additional District Munsif, Dindigul, in Original Suit No. 324 of 1913.

Messrs. K. Jagannadha Aiyar and K. Balamukunda Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. Krishnasami Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

SESHAGIRI AIYAR, J.—The plaintiff obtained a usufructuary mortgage from the father of the 1st defendant in 1906. He was in possession for three years. After that period, the tenants whom he had let into possession colluded with one Sekhomoni Ammal, a neighbouring Zemindarini, and carried away the crops on the land without paying the landlord's share. Thereupon, the plaintiff instituted criminal proceedings against the tenants and they were convicted. For the expenses incurred in conducting the criminal proceedings, the 2nd defendant, who is the step-mother of the 1st defendant, executed a document, which is styled a Varthamanam, in December 1909. The present suit is brought against both the defendants on that document. The 1st defendant denied the right of the 2nd defendant to be his guardian and contended that the criminal litigation was not conducted bona fide and that he is not liable for the expenses incurred. The District Munsif came to the conclusion that the criminal prosecution was not necessary for protecting the interest of either the mortgagor or the mortgagee, that the expenses incurred were not covered by any of the provisions of section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that, under any circumstances, the plaintiff is not entitled to any decree against the 1st defendant who was a minor at the time of Exhibit A. He dismissed the suit. In appeal the Subordinate Judge differed from the District Munsif upon the question whether the criminal proceedings were necessary to protect the estate. His finding is that as Sekhomoni Ammal disputed the ownership of the defendants it was necessary to have conducted criminal proceedings in order to protect the estate. He also held that the document executed by the 2nd defendant was binding upon the 1st defendant. He gave a decree to the plaintiff for Rs. 800. The decree is personal and does not charge the property of the 1st defendant.

No serious attempt was made before us to impeach the finding of the Subordinate Judge that the expenses of the criminal prosecution were necessary. If we heard the case on the facts, we may not have come to the same conclusion as the lower Appellate Court has done. Under section 72, clause (c), of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagee in possession may add any moneys spent in supporting the mortgagor's title to the property. It is open to doubt whether an expensive criminal litigation carried on for the purpose of getting convicted certain persons who had reaped and carried away the crops on the land can be regarded as a proceeding necessary to support the title of the mortgagor. But, apparently the accused were set up by a rival claimant, and it appears from the evidence that the 2nd defendant requested the plaintiff to take criminal proceedings to protect the 1st defendant's title to the property. As we said before, the matter has not been seriously argued before us, and we are not prepared to differ from the Subordinate Judge on this point.

VENKITASAMI NAICKER v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI.

The further question is whether the expenses incurred were reasonable. The mortgagee in possession must act as a prudent owner. That is a question of fact, on which the Subordinate Judge has given a finding which has not been seriously attacked in this Court. We are bound by that finding. On these two findings there can be no doubt that the mortgagee is entitled to be indemnified in respect of the expenses incurred by him. The cases of Godfrey v. Watson (1), Sandon v. Hooper (2) and Fenton v. Blackwood (3) lay down this proposition in clear terms.

The next question is whether a separate suit is maintainable in respect of the expenses. Mr. Jagannatha Ayyar contended that the only remedy open to the mortgagee, who has spent money, under clauses (a) to (e) of section 72, is to add them to the moneys due under the mortgage and to insist upon being paid those sums before redemption, and not bring a separate suit. The language of section 72 is against this contention. The words are, "the mortgagee may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, add such money to the principal money". It is a permissive provision and not an obligation imposed upon the mortgagee. As we read the section, it seems to us that the Legislature intended to give larger rights to the mortgagee than he would otherwise have. Every person who spends money for the benefit of another is entitled to sue for that money. The ordinary rules of contract would secure him that right. In the case of a mortgagee, the Legislature apparently intended to put him on a higher footing. He is given the liberty of adding the expended moneys to the amount of the mortgage, thereby securing to the moneys a charge upon the property. The use of the word may shows that it is an additional remedy conferred upon the mortgagee and that it is not the sole remedy. The learned Vakil for the appellant has been able to find a case which certainly supports him in his contention.

In Bavanna v. Bulagurivi (4) it was held by Justice Subramania Aiyar and Justice Boddam that the only right secured under section 72 is to add the amount to the mortgage money. This judgment has not been referred to or followed in any of the subsequent cases in this or any other High Court. With all respect to the learned Judges, we are unable to agree with their conclusions. There is no discussion of the section of the Act nor is there any citation of authorities in support of the proposition laid down by the learned Judges. Mr. Jagannatha Ayyar referred us to McEwan v. Crombie (5). One preliminary observation may be made as regards that case, and that is the learned Lord Justices had not to construe any Act of Parliament as we have to do. Lord Justice Cotton points out that the right of redemption is itself an indulgence granted to the mortgagor, and that he would not be allowed to exercise that right except on condition of paying the mortgagee any expenses which have been properly incurred. He adds that the mortgagee's right to bring actions for the debt is not permissible, because the condition imposed by a Court of Equity is not in the nature of a contract which can be independently enforced. As we understand the learned Lord Justice, he seems to have laid down that the Common Law Courts should not entertain an action for the debt due in a matter which is purely within the jurisdiction of the Chancery Court and which liability the Chancery Court is alone competent to impose as a condition of redemption. This principle can have no application to India. Having regard, as we said before, to the language of section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, we are unable to agree with the contention that the only remedy open to the mortgagee is to insist upon being paid at the time of redemption. Moreover, in the present case, it cannot be said that there was no consideration for the bond given by the 2nd defendant to the plaintiff. Undoubtedly money has been spent on her behalf and apparently at her request, and I see no reason for holding that the bond

(1) (1747) 3 Atk. 517; 26 E. R. 1098.

(2) (1843) 6 Beav. 246; 12 L. J. Ch. 309; 49 E. R. 820; 63 R. R. 72.

(3) (1874) 5 P. C. 167; 22 W. R. 562.

(4) 9 M. L. J. 177.

(5) (1884) 25 Ch. D. 175 at p. 177; 53 L. J. Ch. 24; 49 L. T. 499; 32 W. R. 115.

VENKITASAMI NAICKER v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI.

sued on is not supported by consideration. The decision of the Allahabad High Court in Imdad Hasan Khan v. Badri Prasad (6) impliedly holds that there is an independent cause of action for expenses incurred under any of the clauses of section 72. We must, therefore, overrule this contention.

One other minor contention may be disposed of before dealing with the principal point argued in the case.

The learned Vakil for the appellant argued that, as the 2nd defendant is only the step-mother, she was not the natural guardian of the 1st defendant and, therefore, the bond will not bind him. The question was not very fully argued, and therefore we do not propose to express any definite opinion upon the question whether the step-mother is a guardian under the Hindu Law. There is one case of Lukmee v. Umur Chund Deo Chund (7) and another in the North Western Provinces in Nunkoolal v. Shoodra (8) cited in Trevelyan on Minors, 5th edition, page 51, in which it was held that a step-mother is entitled to be the guardian of her step-son. On the other hand, we have Maharanee Ram Bun-ee Konwaree v. Maharanee Soobh Koonwaree (9), where it was held that she is not. I do not think the fact that she is not the heir to her step-son is conclusive on the question. As at present advised, we are unable to think that in the absence of nearer relations she is not entitled to act as the guardian of her step-son. In Sundar Moni Dai v. Bargsidhar Patnaik (10) Mookerjee and Beactcroft, JJ., appointed the step-mother of the minor to be his guardian. In the present case the step-mother was the sister of the 1st defendant's own mother. We, therefore, think that no valid objection can be raised on the ground that she is not entitled to act as guardian.

The main question is whether, on a contract by the guardian of a Hindu, the minor's person or his property can be charged with liability. We feel no doubt that the decree against the 1st defendant personally is wrong. It was pointed out by the Judicial Committee in Waghela Rajsanji v. Shekh Masludin (11) that a guardian cannot enter into a transaction so as to charge the minor, on attaining majority, with personal liability. Therefore the decree is wrong, in so far as it makes the 1st defendant personally liable. But we have jurisdiction to see that a proper decree is passed, although there is no memorandum of objections or cross-appeal before us. Now the question is whether the property of the minor should be held liable. Mr. Jagannadha Ayyar laid emphasis upon the decision of the Privy Council in Indur Chunder Singh v. Radhakishore Ghose (12) and argued that unless the guardian created a charge upon the property, no decree should be passed against the estate of the minor. It is necessary to examine this decision very carefully to see what it is that was actually decided by the Judicial Committee in that case. In the first place, the contract, although by the guardian of the minor, was not entered into in that capacity. A renewal of a lease was taken in the name of the mother and grandmother of the infant. The description in the document is that they were the mother and grandmother of the boy. The document does not purport to have been executed as guardians. Further it was a fresh contract entered into by the ladies and in the litigation that ensued, the minor was sought to be charged with liability for this contract. Lord Hannen delivering the judgment of the Board points out, in more than one place, that the transaction was not entered into as guardians of the minor. On page 512 it is said: "The lessees (referring to the mother and the grandmother) undertook themselves to pay the rent." on page 513 it is stated that the plaintiff was asking the minor "to fulfil the obligations entered into by the lessees in their own name." Referring to the earlier case of Hanoomanpersaud Panday v. Musammat Babooe Munraj Koonweree (13), His Lordship observes: "Further the

(6) 20 A. 401; A. W. N. (1898) 20; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 617.

(7) 2 Bom. Sud. C. Rep. 144.

(8) (1847) N. W. P. Sud. C. Rep. 115.

(9) 7 W. R. 321.

(10) 16 Ind. Cas. 900; 17 C. L. J. 405.

(11) 11 B. 551; 14 I. A. 89; 11 Ind. Jur. 315; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 16; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 364.

(12) 19 C. 507; 19 I. A. 90; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 185; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 782.

(13) 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81n; Sevestre 253n; 2 Sut. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 562; 19 E. R. 147.

MAUNG HME V. MA SEIN.

managers of an infant's estate were actually dealing by way of mortgage with a portion of that estate." The view taken in Indur Chunder Singh v. Radhakishore Ghose (12), comes to this, that, with reference to transactions entered into personally by the guardian of the minor, his estate, on his attaining age, should not be held liable. We do not think this decision should be extended to cases which are not covered by the facts proved in that case. After Indur Chunder Singh v. Radhakishore Ghose (12) this Court had to deal with the question in a number of cases. In Subramania Ayyar v. Arumuga Chetty (14) it was held that on a bond executed by the guardian the minor's estate can be made liable. Duraisami Reddi v. Muthial Reddi (15) decides the very question we have now to decide. Regulla Jogayya v. Vencatarathnamma (16), though it is not a case of minor, enunciates the same principle. In Nanka Krishnamurthi v. Bank of Burma (17), the present Chief Justice points out that, by applying the principle of subrogation, the estate of the minor can be proceeded against for a proper debt incurred on behalf of the minor. Lastly we have Padma Krishna Chettiar v. Nagamani Ammal (18). It lays down that a minor's estate can be made liable for a debt contracted by the guardian. Although a great deal may be said in favour of the position that the Hindu Law liability should not be extended to cases under the Negotiable Instruments Act, there can be no question that in case of bonds like the present one, the liability of the minor for debts properly incurred on his behalf can be charged against the estate. We see no reason for not following this catena of decisions in this Presidency and for referring the case to a Full Bench. In a very recent case reported as Swaminatha Aiyar v. Srinivasa Aiyar (19) Justice Abdur Rahim and Justice Spencer held that on a personal contract entered into by a trustee the minor's estate should not be held liable. This decision has been dissented from by Kumarasami Sastri, J., in Ammalu Ammal v. Namagiri Ammal (20), but Sadasiva Aiyar, J., is inclined to agree with it. It is not necessary for us to express any opinion one way or the other upon the actual conclusion come to in the case. The learned Judges point out that the case of a guardian of an infant stands on a different footing from the case of a trustee. As Mr. Krishnasami Aiyar suggested, the trustee has a legal estate in him and consequently any contract entered into by him must prima facie be taken to be chargeable only against him personally or against the estate in his hands. The guardian of a minor occupies a different position, for, as he enters into a contract on behalf of the minor who is the legal owner of the property, he must be deemed to have intended to charge the estate of the minor with liability. In this view Swaminatha Aiyar v. Srinivasa Aiyar (19) does not affect the present case. We are, therefore, of opinion that the estate of the minor is liable for the debt sued on. The decree of the Subordinate Judge must be modified by stating that the minor is not personally liable but only his property. With this modification the second appeal must be dismissed with costs.

NAPIER, J.—I agree.

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed;

Decree modified.

(20) 43 Ind. Cas. 760; 33 M. L. J. 631; 22 M. L. T. 391; 6 L. W. 722; (1918) M. W. N. 110.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT. FULL BENCH.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 1 OF 1918.

March 27, 1918.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, Kt., Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Ormond, Mr. Justice Maung Kin and Mr. Justice Rigg.

MAUNG HME—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

MA SEIN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Divorce—Second marriage, without chief wife's consent, whether entitles chief wife to divorce.

(14) 26 M. 330.

(15) 31 M. 458.

(16) 5 Ind. Cas. 271; 53 M. 492; 7 M. L. T. 112; 20 M. L. J. 412; (1910) M. W. N. 142.

(17) 11 Ind. Cas. 79; 14 Ind. Cas. 389; 35 M. 692; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 385; 21 M. L. J. 620; 11 M. L. T. 56.

(18) 30 Ind. Cas. 574; 39 M. 915; 18 M. L. T. 216.

(19) 38 Ind. Cas. 172; 32 M. L. J. 259; 21 M. L. T. 91; 5 L. W. 323; (1917) M. W. N. 278.

MAUNG HME V. MA SEIN.

The chief wife of a Burmese Buddhist may object to her husband taking a second wife, and may claim a divorce if he does so without her consent. Her right, however, is subject to certain exceptions mentioned in sections 219, 232, 265—67 and 311 of the Digest, wherein the husband is allowed to take a second wife when the first wife is barren or has borne only female children, or is suffering from certain diseases. [p. 557, col. 1; p. 958, cols. 1 & 2.]

In the case of such a divorce the property should be partitioned as in the case of divorce by mutual consent. [p. 957, col. 1; p. 958, col. 2; p. 959, col. 1.]

Ma In Than v. Maung Saw Hla, L. B. R. (1872-92) 103; and Ma Ein v. Te Naung, 3 Ind. Cas. 715; 5 L. B. R. 87, dissented from.

JUDGMENT.

RICE, J.—The question referred for decision in this case is whether the chief wife of a Burmese Buddhist is entitled to divorce her husband if he takes a lesser wife without her consent. It will be convenient first to examine the course of decisions on this point or related points. The earliest case is that of Ma In Than v. Maung Saw Hla (1), in which the Special Court held in 1881 that the chief wife had no right of objection. This ruling was declared to be still good law in 1909 in Ma Ein v. Te Naung (2), but doubts as to its correctness had been already expressed in various cases both in Upper and Lower Burma. In Maung Kauk v. Ma Han (3) Mr. Burgess said that before accepting the rule in Ma In Than's case (1) it would be necessary to examine the authorities, as there was much to be said on the other side. In 1893 the same learned Judge said in Ma Shwe Ma v. Ma Hlaing (4): "Polygamy is said to be lawful by Buddhist Law, but it may be doubted whether this conveys a correct impression unless it is understood in a special or limited sense. The leading principle of Buddhism in this respect is monogamy rather than polygamy." He went on to express the opinion that allusions to a plurality of wives in most of the Dhammathats referred to Hindu laws and customs rather than Buddhist Law. The precise point in issue in this reference has, however, never been decided in Upper Burma. The decision in Ma In Than's case (1) has been questioned in three reported cases since the constitution of the Chief Court in 1900. In Ma San Shwe v. Po Thaik (5) Birks, J., discussed this ruling but did not come to any definite conclusion. In Ma Ka U v. Po Saw (6) a Full Bench of this Court held that a chief wife could refuse to live in the same house as a lesser wife. Hartnoll, J., dissented from the opinion expressed in Ma In Than's case (1), and said that a husband who took another wife without his first wife's consent committed a serious matrimonial fault against her; but he did not come to a finding whether this fault would justify a claim to divorce, as it was not necessary to the decision of the matter in issue. In Ma Wun Di v. Ma Kin (7) Adamson, J., said: "The learned Advocate for respondents raised a question of Buddhist Law, as to whether a Burman Buddhist can legally marry a second wife, during the lifetime of his first wife, without her consent. I regret the question does not require a decision in this case. I may say, however, that the arguments of the learned Advocate, which he has embodied in a very interesting printed pamphlet, appear to me rather to throw doubt on the ruling of the Special Court in Ma In Than v. Maung Saw Hla (1)...than to prove the broader proposition that a second marriage under these circumstances is null and void."

There is no doubt that polygamy is legal in Burma. In Ma In Than's case (1), Jardine, J. C., held that in spite of the existence of some texts of the religious law books, the custom of polygamy is so fully established that it lay upon the objector to show that this custom was limited in its application. He further said that even if the religious law was expressed opposed to polygamy, he would hesitate to suppress by judicial decision an institution which is part of the life of the people. He thought that the whole tenor of the Manugye was in accordance with the custom of polygamous marriages, and should not be set aside on account of the existence of isolated texts. There are indications, however, that the learned Judge was

(1) L. B. R. (1872-92) 103.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 715; 5 L. B. R. 87.

(3) U. B. R. (1892-96) Vol. II, 48.

(4) U. B. R. (1892-96) Vol. II, 145 at pp. 149, 150.

(5) 2 Chan. Toon's L. C. 165.

(6) 4 L. B. R. 340; 9 Cr. L. J. 25.

(7) 4 L. B. R. 175; 10 Bom. L. R. 41; 3 M. L. T. 93; 18 M. L. J. 3; 12 C. W. N. 220; 7 C. L. J. 112; 35 C. 232; 5 A. L. J. 63; 14 Bur. L. R. 8; 35 I. A. 41 (P. C.).

MAUNG HME U, MA SEIN.

inclined subsequently to modify the decided opinion he had expressed in Ma In Than's case (1). After that decision the Manu Kunana was translated and at page 30 of his note on Buddhist Law, Mr. Jardine observes that sections 173 and 132 throw some doubt on the right of polygamy. In paragraph 32 of his second note he says: "Throughout the Dhammathat (Manugye) polygamy is treated as lawful but with a feeling that it is a grievance to the first wife." Cap'n Forbes says: "Even if polygamy is indulged in, the general feeling may be said to be against it. The suppression of the first by the second wife is a serious matter." In Queen-Empress v. Nga Ne U (8) Mr. Jardine said:—"I am aware that some Burmans think that a man who has a wife may not marry a second time in her lifetime without her consent. The 173rd section of the Wunnana is in favour of this view, but it was not pointed out to the Special Court who held the contrary in Ma In Than's case (1)." In Ma Hun De's case (7) their Lordships of the Privy Council quoted with approval the following observations of the learned Chief Justice: "It is not forbidden to a Burman Buddhist to have two wives at the same time, but it is universally conceded that the leading principle of Buddhism is monogamy rather than polygamy, that polygamy is rare and...is considered disrespectful." There can be no doubt that in Lower Burma the position is that polygamy is tolerated but regarded with disfavour and that there has always been a body of opinion that it is only allowed if the first wife consents. Assuming that the Dhammathats only allow it under certain conditions or penalties, I am unable to see why the fact that these penalties have never been enforced in practice, or that it is not possible to point to instances of such enforcement, should preclude this Court from declaring that they exist and can be claimed by the wronged wife. The law to be administered is the Burmese Buddhist Law as laid down in the Dhammathats, unless such law has been clearly modified by custom or is repugnant to equity, justice or good conscience. In Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (9) their Lordships of the Privy Council pointed out that the judgment in the Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga Sathupathy (10) gives no countenance to the conclusion that in order to bring a case under the rule of any law, laid down for Hindus generally, evidence must be given of actual events to show that in point of fact the people subject to that general law regulate their lives by it. At page 423 of the same judgment their Lordships said that the general law should be ascertained by reference to the authoritative text books and judicial opinions, and that when the general law has been established any one living where such law prevails and is applicable must be taken to fall under the general law, unless he can show some valid local tribal or family custom to the contrary. The mere fact that the limitations to the license of having more than one wife have not been observed is insufficient to justify the Courts in holding that the law has been abrogated by custom, especially in a country like Burma, where as Sir John Jardine himself observes (notes on Buddhist Law III) the system of compromise based on consent and acquiescence almost supersedes custom. So far had this system of compromise been carried that when British Judges first attempted to ascertain what the Buddhist Law was on any subject, they sometimes found great difficulty in obtaining any information on which a decision could properly be based. It appears to me, therefore, that there is no proof of any custom regarding polygamy which custom overrides the general law laid down in the Dhammathats or precludes us from examining that law with a view to ascertain its scope and provisions. It is true that in Hindu law, to which to some extent the Dhammathats are indebted for their rules, there is no restriction against polygamy and the rules enjoining monogamy have been held to be merely directory and not mandatory (Cowell's Lecture on Hindu Law, part I, page 164, Mayne, Hindu Law, paragraph 92, (9) 21 A. 412 at p. 422; 1 Bom. L. R. 311; 3 C. W. N. 454; 26 I. A. 153; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 474; 9 Ind. Dec (N. S.) 971 (P. C.).

(10) 12 M. I. A. 397; 10 W. R. P. C. 17; 1 B. L. R. P. C. 1; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 135; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 361; 20 E. R. 389.

MAUNG HME v. MA SEIN.

Sarkar's Lectures, page 117). They seem to be of the nature of counsels of perfection rather than absolute prohibitions coupled with a penalty in case of disobedience. But whatever may be the extent to which the Dhammathats are indebted to Hindu Law, there can be no doubt that the Hindu Law regarding marriage and divorce has been profoundly modified by Buddhism, although the compilers of the Dhammathats have in some cases not attempted to distinguish the two systems. Thus the division of the people into castes is recognised by the Dhammathats although a distinction is unknown to Burmans. The Courts have always endeavoured to interpret conflicting passages in the Dhammathats in such a manner as to conform with the existing sentiments and practice of Burmese society, so far as it is possible so to do without usurping the functions of the Legislature. If on examination of the texts, it is found that there is a strong preponderance in favour of restrictions being placed on polygamy, we shall, I think, be taking a proper course in giving effect to those texts in harmony with the prevailing sentiments of the people. I do not attach much importance to the fact that polygamy is recognised in the Dhammathats and that much of their matter is occupied with rules for the division of property between various kinds of wives and their children. Such rules are necessary in view of the structure of society existing then and existing now. They are not necessarily inconsistent with rules tending to discourage polygamy.

In Mu Nhin Bin v. U Shwe Lone (11) their Lordships of the Privy Council said that where the Manugye was not ambiguous it should be followed. There is, however, no clear pronouncement in that Dhammathat on the subject of the chief wife's right to object to her husband taking a second wife without her consent. Section 43, Volume XII, deals with the five kinds of wives who may be put away, but it is explained that by putting away is only meant that the husband had the right to take another wife and his first wife is not entitled to oppose him.

(11) 23 Ind. Cas. 433; 8 L. B. R. 1; 7 Bur. L. T. 105; 16 Bom. L. R. 377; 27 M. L. J. 41; 18 C. W. N. 1321; 16 M. L. T. 142; 20 C. L. J. 264; 4 C. 887; 1 L. W. 914; 41 I. A. 121; (1914) M. W. N. 449 (P. C.).

Section 24, Volume V, refers to a right of separation when the wife has taken a paramour or the husband a lesser wife, the division of property in such cases being made as in the case of divorce by mutual consent. In section 17 of the same chapter a husband whose wife has left him is enjoined to wait for one year before he takes another, under penalty of loss of the property brought to the marriage and the joint property. But the right of the chief wife to demand a divorce is rather a matter of inference than a clear statement of the existence of such a right. Turning now to the Digest of the Kinwan Mingyi, I find that in section 208, three Dhammathats are cited, which laid down fidelity to the first wife as one of the duties of a husband, but these texts are only directory. In the passage from the Dhammathatgyaw cited in section 214 there is a similar admonition to husbands not to be unfaithful. In two of the three Dhammathats cited in section 230, adultery on the part of the husband is placed on the same level as a repugnant disease and gives the wife a right of divorce. The most important section is No. 256, which contains extracts from eight Dhammathats and in no less than six of these a second marriage without the chief wife's consent gives the latter the right to divorce and to retain the whole of the property. These texts seem to me to be very clear and to admit of no doubt as to their construction. In the passage from the Manugye cited in section 303, divorce is permitted if cruelty is coupled with the taking of a lesser wife, but no argument against the right of a chief wife to obtain a divorce on the ground of a second marriage can be founded on this passage, as most of the other Dhammathats quoted in that section give her the right of divorce on the ground of cruelty alone, and this right has been affirmed in Maung Po Han v. Ma Ta Lok (12). In section 397 the penalty imposed on a husband for taking a lesser wife is expulsion from the house after being compelled to leave behind even his clothes. In section 259 an extract is quoted from the Addasan-kepa Vanna of the rule relating to husbands and wives who have been previously married. Here too the wife is said to have the right of divorce if the husband takes a lesser wife and the husband forfeits all claim to the jointly acquired property.

(12) 20 Ind. Cas. 674; 7 L. B. R. 79; 6 Bur. L. T. 134.

MAUNG HME v. MA SEIN.

As against these authorities the learned Advocate for the appellant has been able to cite only section 253, which is headed "A man may marry as many wives as he pleases." But this section does not deal with the case of a man marrying when his first wife objects, and there is no doubt that if she consents, there is no impediment to his taking other wives. The other arguments addressed to us were founded on the existence of the custom of polygamy and its recognition in the Dhammathats in the shape of rules for the division of property between more than one wife. These arguments have already been considered in an earlier portion of this judgment.

I think that it is clear that the general rule is that the chief wife may object to her husband taking a second wife and may claim a divorce if he does so, her right is, however, subject to certain exceptions. These are found in sections 219, 232, 265-267 and 311 of the Digest. The husband is allowed to take a second wife when the first wife is barren or has borne only female children or is suffering from certain diseases. In Burmese society a higher value is attached to the begetting of sons than daughters. There is also nothing unreasonable in the exception based on the first wife becoming insane or a leper, maimed, blind or paralysed and thus becoming unable to fulfil the duties of her position. I would, therefore, answer the reference as follows:—Subject to exceptions of the kind mentioned in sections 219, 232, 265-267 and 311 of the Digest, if a Burmese Buddhist takes a second wife without his first wife's consent, she has a right to divorce him.

I may add that if she decides to claim the right of divorce, I think that the division of property should, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, be made as if the divorce were one by mutual consent. This is the rule if the husband commits adultery (section 230) and is the rule given in Manukye where the husband has not only taken a lesser wife but has been cruel (section 303). In section 256 a severe penalty is to be imposed according to some of the Dhammathats, which are, however, not consistent regarding the penalty.

TWOMEY, C. J.—The question referred does not arise directly in the case which was before our learned colleague. But it does arise indirectly. Under the Special Court ruling in Ma In Than v. Maung Saw Hla (1) a head wife has no remedy if her husband takes a lesser wife without her consent. So long as this ruling is in force, it would be inconsistent to give effect to the provisions of Manukye, V, section 17, and let a deserting wife claim a divorce on her husband re-marrying within a year.

The learned Judges of the Special Court who decided Ma In Than's case (1) apparently considered that the provisions of the Manukye debar the Courts from sanctioning any restriction on polygamy among Burmese Buddhists. The pre-eminent authority of the Dhammathat is still recognised, but its provisions have binding force only where they are free from ambiguity. As Rigg, J., points out, the Manukye in addition to the provisions which seem to contemplate unqualified polygamy contains also various passages from which it may reasonably be inferred that the Buddhist Law recognises a head wife's right to demand a divorce if her husband takes another wife without her consent. We are, therefore, justified in turning for guidance to the other Dhammathats cited in the Kinwun Mingyi's Digest and to the same learned author's Atthathankepa, which is the most recent Dhammathat of all. These other Dhammathats are now shown to leave no room for doubt as to the head wife's right in question. Most of the texts became available only after Ma In Than's case (1) was decided.

The Special Court regarded the restriction on the taking of a lesser wife as a doctrine which was not shown to be "popularly accepted so as to extinguish the custom", i. e., the custom of polygamy. The existence of a custom of unrestricted polygamy was not shown in that case. The fuller investigation of the Dhammathats, which has now been carried out, makes it clear that the restriction in question is an incident of polygamy as established among the Burmese Baddhists and in these circumstances the question of popular acceptance does not appear to arise.

MAUNG HME V. MA SEIN.

The texts of the Buddhist Law on the subject of polygamy are undoubtedly inconsistent. The Manukye contains various provisions cited in Ma In Than's case (1) which take for granted a plurality of wives, while other provisions clearly contemplate that a man should have but one wife at a time. The explanation is that the Burmese Buddhist Law is largely of Hindu origin coming from a country in which polygamy flourished without restriction, the law had to be adapted to a non-Indian race which followed the Buddhist religion and in which the position of the wife was essentially different from that of the Hindu wife. Thus the texts in the Manukye and the other Dhammathats which deal with a plurality of wives are probably imported from the ancient Hindu Law. Mr. Burgess in Ma Shwe Ma v. Ma Hlaing (4) remarked as follows:—"It is a remarkable thing that in the 81 sections of the Chapter on Inheritance, X of Manukye, the only provisions regarding contemporaneous wives and their children should be those in sections 37 and 38 which seem to have special reference to Hindu usages."

Ma In Than's case (1) has been the law in Lower Burma since 1881. But it has not been followed in Upper Burma; and it is doubtful whether in Lower Burma husbands have availed themselves to any large extent of the additional license given to them by the ruling of the Special Court. A plurality of wives is becoming more and more a rarity and is regarded socially with disfavour. The tendency towards monogamy has no doubt been accelerated by the annexation of Upper Burma. Before that event polygamy was encouraged by the example of the Burmese Kings and many of the higher officials.

In expressing our dissent from the ruling in Ma In Than's case (1) and declaring the head wife's right to a divorce if her husband takes another wife without her consent, it is clear that we are only expounding an integral part of the Buddhist Law as laid down in the Dhammathats and we need not fear that we are running counter to any cherished custom of the Burmese people.

I concur in answering the reference in the terms proposed by my learned colleague Mr. Justice Rigg. I agree with him also in holding that the property should be partitioned as in the case of a divorce by mutual consent (in the absence of any contract to the contrary). It would be illogical to exact from the husband who takes a lesser wife a more severe penalty than is provided in the Dhammathats for a husband who commits adultery or who, in addition to taking a lesser wife, treats his head wife with cruelty.

MAUNG KIN, J.—I concur and have very little to add. Unlimited polygamy is expressly allowed only by three Dhammathats, namely, Kaingza, Kandaw and Panam. See section 253 of U Gaing's Digest, Volume II. They are, however, not of much authority. Other Dhammathats speak of polygamy being allowable under certain conditions and penalties and as regards Manukye in particular I agree with Mr. Jardine that, although it treats polygamy as lawful, it does so with a feeling that it is a grievance to the first wife. In addition to the six Dhammathats, cited in section 256 of the above Digest, which lay down the rule that a second marriage without the first wife's consent gives the latter the right to divorce, we have extracts from three other Dhammathats, namely, Vilasa, Dhammathatkyaw and Manuvannana cited in section 397 of the same Digest laying down the same rule. Those six Dhammathats and these three others are well-known legal works. The other Dhammathats cited in section 256 couple the taking of a lesser wife with habitual ill-treatment as ground for a divorce at the instance of the aggrieved first wife. The passage cited from Manukye in section 303 of the Digest would appear to support these Dhammathats. But I do not think that in deciding the points under reference any importance can be attached to the fact that the taking of a lesser wife is thus coupled with cruelty, inasmuch as the Dhammathats agree in allowing a divorce on the ground of habitual cruelty alone. It seems clear that in the passage cited from Manukye in section 303 of the Digest, the stress is on the husband's cruelty rather than on his incontinence. I am, therefore, of opinion that the taking of a lesser wife must be regarded as an additional ground for a divorce at the instance of the existing wife. As regards the question of partition of property I would treat the divorce as if it were one by mutual consent for the reason stated by the learned Chief Judge, unless there has been a contract to the contrary.

VATHIAR VENKATACHARIAR v. PONAPPA AYYENGAR.

ORMOND, J.—I concur in the judgments that have been delivered.

Answer accordingly.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL SUIT No. 223 OF 1916.

February 12, 1918.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

VATHIAR VENKATACHARIAR

—PLAINTIFF No. 2—APPELLANT

versus

P. PONAPPA AYYENGAR AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act I of 1908), s. 9, O. XXII, r. 4—Appeal and cross-objections by respondent—Death of respondent pending appeal—Omission of appellant to bring legal representative on record—Legal representative, application by, to be brought on record in memorandum of objections, effect of—Appeal, whether abates—Right to office, suit for declaration of, maintainability of—Teerthkars in Hindu temple, right of, to recite prabandam—Duty not legally enforceable—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

The omission by an appellant to bring on record the legal representative of a deceased respondent will not cause the abatement of the appeal if the latter, on his own initiative, has brought himself on the record in the memorandum of cross-objections filed by the deceased. The effect of the legal representative being added in the memorandum of objections is, in effect, to make him a party to the appeal. [p. 961, col. 1.]

The appeal and memorandum of objections are not disconnected and independent proceedings, but are part of the same proceedings. [p. 961, col. 1.]

Andrew v. Aitken, (1882) 21 Ch. D. 175; 51 L. J. Ch. 784; 46 L. T. 689; 30 W. R. 701, distinguished.

Brij Indar Singh v. Lala Kanshi Ram, 42 Ind. Cas. 43; 33 M. L. J. 486, 22 M. L. T. 362; 6 L. W. 592; 126 P. W. R. 1917; 15 A. L. J. 777; 19 Bom. L. R. 866; 3 P. J. W. 313; 26 C. L. J. 572; 104 P. R. 1917; (1917) M. W. N. 811; 22 C. W. N. 169; 127 P. L. R. 1917; 45 C. 34 (P. C.), applied.

A suit to establish a right to an office to which emoluments are alleged to be attached is maintainable, when the existence of the office as also the connection between the office and the honour and dignities and perquisites is proved by clear evidence. [p. 961, col. 2.]

Thirumalai Alwar Aiyangar v. Srinivasachariar Swamikal, 36 Ind. Cas. 568; 31 M. L. J. 758; 4 L. W. 562; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 327, followed.

To constitute an office, the one, if not the essential, thing is the existence of a duty or duties attached to the office which the office-holder is under a legal obligation to perform and the non-performance of which is visited by penalties. The rendering of a voluntary service cannot constitute an office. [p. 961, col. 2.]

Plaintiffs sued to establish their right to recite prabandams or holy verses in a temple and in the procession of a temple deity and a certain rank or precedence in such procession. They also claimed an injunction restraining the 6th defendant from receiving the teerthams and being ranked above them. The Court dismissed the suit as not being one of a civil nature, but disallowed 6th defendant's costs. Plaintiffs appealed and 6th defendant filed cross-objections against the portion of the decree disallowing his costs. The 6th defendant died pending the disposal of the appeal and the plaintiff-appellant did not bring his legal representative on record within the time allowed by law, but the latter brought himself on record in the memorandum of objections. The Appellate Court confirmed the Munsif's decree.

Held, (1) that the appeal did not abate by reason of appellant's omission to bring the deceased respondent's representative on record, as he was on the record in the memorandum of objections which is substantially the same proceeding as the appeal; [p. 961, col. 2.]

(2) that as there was no obligatory duty on plaintiffs to recite the prabandam, the suit was not cognizable by the Civil Court under section 9, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 961, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tuticorin, in Original Suit No. 11 of 1913.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Rangachariar (with him Mr. N. S. Rangaswami Iyengar), for the Respondents, raised the preliminary objection that the appeal had abated under Order XXII, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code. He argued that as the 6th defendant-respondent died and no legal representative of his was brought on record within the time allowed by law, the appeal abated. The fact that the 6th defendant's legal representative brought himself on record in the memorandum of objections filed by the 6th defendant did not cure the defect in the appeal. The proceedings in appeal were entirely different from those in the memorandum of objections, as the latter was separately stamped. Reference was made to Andrew v. Aitken (1).

The preliminary objection having been overruled, Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar (1) (1882) 21 Ch. D. 175; 51 L. J. Ch. 784; 46 L. T. 689; 30 W. R. 701.

VATEIAR VENKATACHARIAR V. PONAPPA AYYENGAR.

(with him Mr. V. Vencatachariar), for the Appellants, argued, that the plaint set forth some perquisites as attached to the office, viz., the right to receive Prasadam or holy food. The rights to receive Teerthms is an honour for the establishment of which an action lies. The evidence is that plaintiffs used to recite the Prabandam and Vedas on specified occasions.

The Hon'ble T. Rangachariar, for the Respondents, argued that the recitation of the Prabandam was only a voluntary act and if the plaintiffs were accorded a rank, it was a special privilege and an act of courtesy.

The evidence is that no penalty attached to their refusal to recite the Prabandam. The perquisites alleged to attach to the office are unsubstantial and of no value. The official reciters are the Adyapakamdars. The test to determine whether the right claimed is of a civil nature is to see if there are duties attaching to the office for breach of which the office holders are liable to be penalised, and the evidence was that it was in the option of the plaintiffs to recite the verses or not:

JUDGMENT.

KRISHNAN, J.—This is an appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Tuticorin, in Original Suit No. 11 of 1913, dismissing the plaintiff's suit on the ground that his claim was not of a civil nature under section 9, Civil Procedure Code. The 1st plaintiff having died, the 2nd plaintiff alone has appealed to us against that decree and his learned Vakil has strongly urged that the finding of the lower Court is wrong.

The plaintiffs' case, as stated in the plaint, is that in the Adniada Alwar temple in Alwar Tirunagari in the Tinnevely District there is an office called "Teertham or Teerthakar's" office of which they and others, in all 29 in number, are the office holders, that the duty of the said office holders is to recite the Prabandam or Tiruvaimoli and the Vedas in the temple and in places where the idol is taken in procession when the Goshti or group of Teerthakars is formed, that special places are allotted to each of them in the temple for this purpose and that attached to this office as an emolument of it is the right to receive Teertham or holy water and Prasadam or holy food and some other small perquisites in a fixed order of precedence. The rank of the plaintiffs family is stated to be the 14th in what is called the 1st cup group; considerable importance no doubt is attached to this rank by the parties. The plaintiffs complain that the trustees, defendants Nos. 1 to 5, have improperly introduced into their group, in a place above theirs in rank, the 6th defendant who has no right to be there according to the practice in the temple and have thus illegally interfered with their rank or right of precedence.

They do not complain that any portion of the Teertham and Prasadam which have to be given to them has been reduced; but they ask the Court to declare that the 6th defendant is not a Teerthakar officer and is not entitled to any place or Stanam and any honours as such officer, and to restrain him by an injunction from occupying such a place and receiving such honours and the trustees from allowing him to do so. Both the trustees and the 6th defendant have denied the existence of any such office and of any duties or honours attached to it and have pleaded that the suit was not maintainable in a Civil Court. They also alleged that the 6th defendant was entitled to the rank given to him.

Before considering the question whether a civil right has been made out it is necessary to refer to a preliminary objection to the appeal raised by Mr. Rangachariar, viz., that the appeal has abated under Order XXII, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code. The facts in this connection are these. The 6th defendant was made the 6th respondent in the appeal. He filed a memorandum of cross-objections under Order XLI, rule 22, clause 1, for the costs disallowed to him; some time thereafter he died but the appellant took no steps to bring his legal representative on record; and the time for doing it has now expired. If the facts stood there, there would be no answer to the objection. But the 6th defendant's legal representative, who is Mr. Rangachariar's client, applied in time to have himself brought on the record in the memorandum of cross-objections and he was added to the record as prayed. It is argued that this did not make him party to the appeal. Mr. Rangachariar contends that the appeal and the memo. of cross-objections are two distinct and independent proceedings and, therefore, the addition of the legal representative to the latter will not save the former from abating. He refers to the facts that the memorandum of objections has to be stamped as an appeal and that under Order XLI, rule 22, clause 4, the withdrawal of the appeal does not affect the hearing of the memorandum of objections as supporting his contention. He also relies on the case of Andrew v. Aitken (1). Rule 22, clause 1, itself furnishes the answer to this argument. That rule requires that a person should be a respondent in the appeal before he can file any cross-objections or be heard on them. It follows, therefore, that when the legal representative of the 6th respondent was allowed to come on the record in respect of the memorandum of objections he was in effect made respondent in the appeal and there can, consequently, be no abatement of the appeal on the ground alleged. Moreover the Privy Council has recently laid down broadly in the case of Brij Indar Singh v. Lala Kanshi Ram (2) that the introduction of the legal representative of a plaintiff or a defendant for one stage of a suit is an introduction for all stages. Applying this principle to appeals, the preliminary objection must fail as the appeal and the memorandum of objections are only parts of the same proceedings. There is no force in the argument that they are two disconnected and independent proceedings. The English case cited is easily distinguishable, as it refers to a suit and a counter-claim which is treated as an independent suit tried with the 1st suit. The preliminary objection must, therefore, be overruled.

VATHIAR VENKATACHARIAR v. FONAPPA AYYENGAR.

Turning now to the main question in the case, it is clear from the plaint itself that the claim refers to a religious honour which consists of receiving Teertham and Prasadam in the temple, in a certain order of precedence. The claim is, therefore, prima facie not one of a civil nature. But plaintiffs have tried to bring it within the explanation to section 9, Civil Procedure Code, by alleging that it is attached as an emolument to a religious office. It is conceded by the learned Vakil for the appellant that unless he establishes this, his suit must fail. This High Court recently held in the case of Thirumalai Alwar Aiyangar v. Srinivasachariar Swamikal (3), on an examination that of the previous authorities on the subject, in a case like the one before us "the existence of the office to which the emoluments claimed are said to attach must be proved and so must the connection between the office and the honour and dignities and perquisites claimed be established by clear evidence." Accepting this statement of the law, we have to consider whether the plaintiffs have established on the evidence in this case the two above-mentioned positions they are bound to establish.

The first question then is whether there is such an office as the Teertham office in this temple. It is clear that, to constitute an office one, if not the essential, thing is the existence of a duty or duties attached to the office which the office holder is under a legal obligation to perform and the non-performance of which may be visited by penalties such as suspension, dismissal, etc. The rendering of any voluntary service cannot of course constitute an office. Ordinarily temple offices have substantial emoluments attached to them in the shape of income from Inam lands and money payments; and though the absence of such emoluments is not necessarily by itself evidence of the non-existence, it makes it necessary to scrutinise carefully the evidence for its existence. Admittedly there is no emolument of any value attached to the so-called Teertham office. Plaintiff alleged that the duties of the Teertham office are to recite the Prabandam and the Vedas on stated occasions. Though the Teerthakars do recite Prabandams and Vedas the evidence does not establish that they are bound to do so as a matter of obligation. It may be mentioned that among the Teerthakars there are some 5 or 7 in number, who are called Adhyapakamdars, whose special duty it is to recite these Prabandams and they are remunerated by Inam lands given to them. They are what may be called the official reciters in this temple. Plaintiffs are not such Adhyapakamdars. It is, therefore, very unlikely that there would be any other unremunerated office holders for doing the same duty. It should also be remembered that it is not merely the Teerthakars that recite the Prabandams but all Vaishnavites present join in the recital. The only difference between the outsiders and the Teerthakars, as shown by the evidence, is that the Teerthakars have special places allotted to them in the temple to stand and recite and they are given the honour of Teertham and Prasadam, before the outsider get them; and they have what is called an "Arulapad", that is, their names are called out by the Archaka in a certain order, when, if present, they have to respond by saying "Nayinde", meaning "I am here." This does not seem to show that they are anything more than a recognised and privileged class of worshippers who are shown special consideration by having places allotted to them in the temple and by being given the honours before the ordinary worshippers in an order of precedence fixed by the usage of the temple. Plaintiffs' own witnesses who are mostly Teerthakars admit that no duties are attached to the position of Teerthakars and no penalty has been inflicted on any one of them for not reciting Prabandams. This evidence corroborates that of the defence witnesses to the same effect. Plaintiffs' 1st witness says: "If I do not do my duty, (i. e., reciting) nothing could be done against us by the temple." Second witness says the duty of the office is the getting of Teertham and Viniyogam; there is no other duty. The 3rd witness confesses that he does not know the Prabandams, and has never recited them, though he was always getting the Teertham like the others and that he has never been asked to explain his conduct or been punished for it for the last 30 years. The 4th witness, who is a cook, says that though he is a Teerthakar, he knows very little of the Prabandam and has never recited any, but he has always been getting his Teertham. Defence witnesses Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 11 say the same thing and two of them, viz., Nos. 4 and 5 are Teerthakars. In Original Suit No. 7 of 1877 one of the then Teerthakars, examined as the then plaintiff's 6th witness and who is now dead, stated categorically that as a Teerthakar he had no duties to discharge in the temple, see Exhibit XXV. There is a list of office holders in this temple produced by the defendants, Exhibit XXVI, in which there is no mention of any Teertham office. Perhaps much reliance should not be placed on this exhibit as it was produced at a late stage of the case, and is not free from suspicion. Exhibit II, a document of 1817, contains the list of persons who are recognised as entitled to Teertham and Prasadam in this temple. There are in it a number of persons who are not office holders at all in the temple. As against all this evidence on the defendants' side the learned Vakil for the appellant has been able to call our attention only to one statement in cross-examination of defence 7th witness and to one document Exhibit C as in his favour. The witness says that the Teerthakars recite Prabandam and that it is their duty. It is not clear in what sense he used the word duty. It may be said in a general way that it is the duty of all persons present to recite the Prabandams if they can, but that does not show that legally enforceable duty exists. The witness is not an important man and his evidence is of little value. Exhibit C is a petition submitted by certain Teerthakars in 1870 to the Dharmakartha to exclude a convicted Teerthakar from joining their assembly. In it no doubt they describe themselves as persons who perform Kainkaryam or service in the temple. The statement is not of much value in this cases as in a way the Teerthakar were doing some work in the temple by reciting the holy verses but it is a different thing to say that it was an obligatory duty. If there is such an office as plaintiffs claim, it would have been easy to give cogent evidence of it. On the evidence as set out it must be held that plaintiffs have not made out the existence of any obligatory duty on the part of the Teerthakars or of any office called the Teertham office.

(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 43; 33 M. L. J. 456; 22 M. L. T. 362; 6 L. W. 592; 126 P. W. R. 1917; 15 A. L. J. 777; 19 Bom. L. R. 806; 3 P. L. W. 313; 26 C. L. J. 572; 104 P. R. 1917; (1917) M. W. N. 811; 22 C. W. N. 109; 127 P. L. R. 1917; 45 C. 94 (P. C.).

(3) 36 Ind. Cas. 568; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 327; 31 M. L. J. 758; 4 L. W. 502.

VATHIAR VENKATACHARIAR V. PONAPPA AYYENGAR.

On the next branch of the case, viz., as to the connection between the honours claimed and the position of the Teerthams, we have been referred to a statement in a petition in 1902 by the whole body of the Teerthakars, the appellant himself being a party to it, that "there is no connection whatever between the said Vrithi" (that is, the work of reciting the Prabandam and the Vedas) "and the Teertham and honours." This is strongly against the plaintiffs on this part of the case and it has not been satisfactorily explained. On a previous occasion when the existence of the Teertham office and the connection of the honours with it was asserted they were denied and both were found against by the Subordinate Judge and by this Court. See Exhibits XXVII (c) and XXVII (e). No successful assertion of the right now claimed by the plaintiffs has ever been made up to date. The existence of the Teertham office and the connection of the honours with it must, therefore, be held not to be proved and the appeal fails in consequence and it must be dismissed with costs.

SAWAN V. MEHR DIN.

WALLIS, C. J.—I entirely agree both as to the law to be applied and the effect of the evidence.

JUDGMENT IN THE MEMORANDUM OF OBJECTIONS.

We allow the memorandum and award the representative of the 6th defendant his costs of the suit which were disallowed by the lower Court, and also the costs of the memorandum of objections.

*Appeal dismissed;
Memo. of objections allowed.*

M. C. P.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 3139 OF 1916.

May 6, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

SAWAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

MEHR DIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Occupancy rights—Takiadar, whether can build pucca mosque on takia land without consent of proprietors—Suit by proprietors for injunction—Death of some plaintiffs-appellants, pending appeal—Appeal, whether abates in toto—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 3 (2).

A takiadar is not entitled to build a pucca mosque on any part of the takia land in his possession as an occupancy tenant without the consent of the proprietors. [p. 964, col. 2.]

A suit was brought by several proprietors of a village against the defendant for a perpetual injunction restraining him from building a mosque on certain takia land of which he was in possession as an occupancy tenant. On the hearing of the second appeal in the Chief Court it appeared that some of the plaintiffs-appellants had died and no application had been made to bring on the record their legal representatives within limitation:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as the suit could in the first instance have been brought without the deceased plaintiffs having been joined at all, the appeal did not abate as a whole but only so far as the deceased plaintiffs-appellants were concerned; [p. 964, col. 1.]

(2) that as the building of a mosque was inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was originally given, the defendant was not competent to build a pucca mosque on the takia land. [p. 964, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Gurdaspur, dated the 20th July 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Gurdaspur, dated the 8th March 1916, decreeing the claim.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Badr-ud-Din Kureshi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen was brought by 93 proprietors of Dorangala in the Tahsil and District of Gurdaspur against Malak Shah, defendant, for perpetual injunction restraining him from building a mosque on certain takia land of which he was in possession as an occupancy tenant in that place. The first Court found that the defendant had no right to build a pucca mosque on the land of which he was an occupancy tenant without the permission of the proprietors and decreed the plaintiffs' claim. The lower Appellate Court held that the land was originally granted to defendant's predecessor for the upkeep of a takia, which it described as a quasi-religious building, and that there could have been no intention on the part of the original grantor that the grantee or his successors should be prohibited from building a mosque—a wholly religious building—adjacent to the takia. It, therefore, accepted the defendant's appeal and dismissed plaintiffs' suit. The plaintiffs have preferred a second appeal to this Court. Malak Shah has died and Mehr Din and others have been brought on the record as his legal representatives.

A preliminary objection was raised by Mr. Kureshi on behalf of the respondents to the effect that the following plaintiffs-appellants had died, namely, Nihala (No. 5), Wasawa (No. 48), Udho (No. 76), Wadhawa (No. 30) and one Musammat Jindi more than six months ago and as their legal representatives had not been brought on the record, the appeal abated in toto. It appears probable that these persons did die more than six months ago as the objection was raised at a previous hearing, but even if the appeal has abated as regards them, this is not one of those cases where the appeal would abate as a whole. Order XXII, rule 3 (2), Civil Procedure Code, lays down that in such a case the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned. Now, the suit could, in the first instance, have been brought without the deceased plaintiffs having been joined at all. Several of the proprietors could alone have maintained such a suit. The appeal, therefore, in no case has abated as a whole, and I proceed to dispose of it on the merits. The lower Appellate Court in its judgment says that the plaint really disclosed no sufficient cause of action, because it did not state clearly in what way the building of a mosque would affect the plaintiffs' rights. The plaint states that the plaintiffs are proprietors of the land and defendant is an occupancy tenant under them, that the building of a mosque is inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was originally given, that it was never intended that a mosque should be built on the land, and that the building of one would result in bringing the land into the exclusive use of the takiadar and would interfere with the rights of the plaintiffs-proprietors and deprive them of the use of the takia. If this was not clear enough, the statement of one or more of the plaintiffs should have been taken by the first Court. This was not done. The plaintiffs appear to me to insist on their rights as proprietors of the land and to say that the defendant, who is merely an occupancy tenant, has no right to put the land in his possession to a use for which it was never intended.

SAWAN C. MEHR DIN.

The lower Appellate Court was of opinion that the takia was a building of a quasi-religious character. Fallon's English-Hindustani Dictionary gives the meaning of takia to be "an abode of a faqir." It does not seem to me to necessarily follow that a takia is a building of a quasi-religious character merely because a faqir lives in it. It is admitted that the takia has been kept up as a sort of a rest-house for travellers, who can rest there and obtain fire and water according to their needs. It has been alleged that before Malak Shah began to build a mosque, there had been a prayer thara in existence adjoining the takia for 40 years and that there is no reason why the takiadar should not be allowed to build a pacca mosque upon this old thara. I do not think that this argument has any force. A prayer thara is a small thing to which the proprietors of the village might have no objection, but a pacca mosque would be a very different matter. It should be remembered in this case that the proprietors of the village are Jat Sikhs, whereas the takiadar is a Muhammadan. One can easily understand that the building of a pacca mosque adjacent to the takia would make Hindus less inclined to use the takia.

A proprietor in the village who is a co-sharer in the shamilat deh, would ordinarily not be allowed to build a mosque on the common land without the permission of his co-sharers, and I fail to see how a non-proprietor like the takiadar can be allowed to do so without the permission of the proprietors. The following authorities have been referred to by plaintiffs' Counsel. Kalu v. Wasawa Singh (1), where it was held that "as a kamin generally gets land from the proprietary body on the implied understanding that it is only to be used for purposes of residence and for plying his trade, he is not competent to build a mosque or temple on it without the consent of the proprietors." Now the takiadar may not be a kamin in the ordinary sense but he is certainly a non-proprietor and obtained the land originally for the up-keep of the takia. In accordance with this authority, I have no difficulty in holding that he would not be competent to build a pacca mosque on any part of the occupancy land in his possession without the consent of the proprietary body. Allah Dia v. Sadu Nand (2). "At one of the corners of an occupancy holding, there stood some huts which the defendant used for his living and for his cattle and kolhu. In one of these huts, the Musalmans used to meet for prayers. Subsequently the defendant

(1) 19 P. R. 1904.

(2) 8 Ind. Cas. 732.

ANANDIRAM MADAL v. GOZA KACHORI.

began to build a pacca mosque on the site of the house in which they used to pray." It was held by the Allahabad High Court that "the building of pacca mosque was an act inconsistent with the purpose for which the holding had been let and that the defendant was liable to be ejected for so doing." Basa Mal v. Ghayas-ud-Din (3). In this case it was held that "a tenant was not at liberty to convert a thatched shed in his courtyard into a pacca mosque without the permission of the proprietors." At page 358 the following passage has occurred: "The District Judge says that because there was an old shed used for religious observances, the old shed being of a frail and temporary kind, it could be replaced by a permanent mosque in which the same kind of observances should continue. He holds in effect that the defendants had title to erect such a building. It seems to us that he has not fully considered the nature of the tenure of land of a village site. It is held by tenants for dwelling houses and what are understood to be the ordinary appendages of a dwelling house. Indeed, it seems to us as impossible to contend that a tenant is entitled to erect a permanent mosque as that he is entitled to erect premises for some manufacture."... "This enables a tenant to build a dwelling house in his compound, but in the case of erection of a mosque, which would by dedication become vested in the religious body for whose observances it was used, the contention of the defendants is manifestly baseless in point of law." In accordance with these authorities, I have no difficulty in holding that the takiadar is by no means entitled to construct a pacca mosque upon the takia land in question. I, therefore, accept the appeal, and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court, restore that of the first Court, decreeing the plaintiffs' claim with costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

(8) 27 A. 356; 2 A. L. J. 27; A. W. N. (1904) 276.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 640 OF 1917.

February 7, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Newbould.

ANANDIRAM MANDAL—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versus

GOZA KACHORI AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE
PARTY.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Public policy—Agreement to serve creditor till debt paid off, whether slavery bond—Money paid under agreement against public policy, whether can be recovered.

The plaintiff advanced a sum, for marriage expenses to two brothers on their executing a bond, by which they agreed in consideration of the sum advanced that one of them should always work for the plaintiff. It was further stipulated in the bond that interest at the rate of 2½ per cent. per mensem that would accrue on the principal was not to be paid in cash but was to be liquidated by the services of the one or the other of the two brothers whom the plaintiff undertook to feed but not to clothe.

Held, that it was doubtful whether the agreement was opposed to public policy as a slavery bond as under its terms while one brother was working for the plaintiff it would be possible for the other brother to earn money elsewhere and in course of time to pay off the principal debt. [p. 966, col. 1.]

A suit is maintainable for the recovery of a sum of money actually advanced pursuant to an agreement which is opposed to public policy. [p. 966, col. 1.]

Civil Rule against the decision of the District Judge, Assam Valley Districts, dated the 19th April 1917, affirming that of the Munsif, Gauhati.

Babu Probodh Chandra Ray, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This is a Rule calling on the opposite party to show cause why the judgment and decree complained of should not be set aside and such other order made as to this Court may seem fit and proper.

The plaintiff who is the petitioner before us brought this suit to recover a sum of Rs. 147 with interest and costs. The plaintiff's allegations were that he advanced a sum of Rs. 120 for marriage expenses to the two defendants, who are brothers, on their executing a bond by which they agreed in consideration of the sum advanced that one of them should always work for the plaintiff. Interest was agreed on at 8 annas per Rs. 20, i. e. 2½ per cent. per mensem, and the sum of three rupees due on this account each month was not to be paid in cash but was to be liquidated by the services of one or other of the two brothers whom the plaintiff undertook to feed but not to clothe. Both the lower Courts have held that the bond was a slavery bond and not enforceable as being opposed to public policy. The suit has been dismissed on the pleadings without any evidence being taken.

SAIDE KHAN v. AMIR-UN-NISSA.

We are doubtful whether the lower Courts were right in holding that the terms of this agreement between the parties were such that it cannot be enforced on the ground of being opposed to public policy. If one of the brothers alone had executed the contract, the case of Ram Sarup Bhagat v. Bansī Mandar (1), cited by them, would support their view. But in the present case while one brother was working for the plaintiff it would be possible for the other brother to earn money elsewhere and in course of time pay off the principal debt and release them both. But it is unnecessary to discuss this aspect of the case at greater length. In any case the contract for service is not one that can be specifically enforced and even if the agreement be opposed to public policy yet when the facts have been fully ascertained, it may be that on the equitable principles embodied in sections 38 and 41 of the Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff may be found entitled to restitution of the whole or some part of the money advanced. It was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mohori Eibee v. Dharmodas Ghose (2) that these sections give a discretion to the Court when under the circumstances of the case justice requires the return of money paid in respect of a transaction held to be void. We may also refer to the case of Bakshi Das v. Nadu Das (3), where following the decisions of this Court in Juggessur Chuckerbutty v. Panchcowree Chuckerbutty (4) and Ram Chand Sen v. Audaito Sen (5), it was held that a suit was maintainable for the recovery of the sum actually paid pursuant to an agreement which was opposed to public policy.

We accordingly make this Rule absolute and direct that the case be sent back to the Munsif of Gauhati to be tried according to law. As the opposite party did not appear we make no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2429 OF 1915.

April 5, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Wilberforce.

SAIDE KHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat AMIR-UN-NISSA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Ancestral property—Daughters or collaterals of sixth degree—Manj Rajputs of Talwandi Rai, Tahsil Jagraon, Ludhiana District—Riwaj-i-am, evidentiary value of entries in—Burden of proof.

An entry in a riwaj-i-am even though unsupported by instances constitutes a strong piece of evidence in support of an alleged custom and it lies upon the party impugning it to rebut the value of this evidence. [p. 968, col. 2.]

Ata Muhammad Khan v. Jiwani, 26 Ind. Cas. 492; 34 P. R. 1915; 2 P. W. R. 1915; 33 P. L. R. 1915, Ranjha v. Jindwaddi, 24 Ind. Cas. 942; 104 P. R. 1914; 221 P. L. R. 1914; 122 P. W. R. 1914 and Dasaundhi v. Chanda Singh, 13 Ind. Cas. 421; 45 P. R. 1912; 85 P. W. R. 1912; 71 P. L. R. 1912, followed.

Plaintiffs, collaterals in the sixth degree of the last male owner, a Manj Rajput of Talwandi Rai, Tahsil Jagraon, Ludhiana District, sued for a declaration that a gift of his ancestral land made by his widow in favour of his two unmarried daughters should not affect their reversionary rights. It appeared that according to the riwaj-i-am the daughters had a prior right of succession to the collaterals:

Held, that in view of the entry in the riwaj-i-am it was for the plaintiffs to establish their rights of inheritance as against the daughters of the deceased and that they having failed to do so were not entitled to obtain the relief they claimed. [p. 968, col. 2.]

Rustam Khan v. Musammat Jio, 189 P. R. 1892, distinguished.

First appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Ludhiana, dated the 8th July 1915, dismissing claim.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., and Mr. Muhammad Rafi for the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-i-Hussain and Mr. Abdul Ghani Khan, for the Respondents.

(1) 30 Ind. Cas. 955; 42 C. 742; 19 C. W. N. 1118.

(2) 30 C. 539 at p. 549; 30 I. A. 114; 7 C. W. N. 441; 5 Bom. L. R. 421; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 374.

(3) 1 C. L. J. 261;

(4) 14 W. R. 154; 5 B. L. R. 395.

(5) 10 C. 1054; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. N.) 704.

SAIDE KHAN v. AMIR-UN-NISSA.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiffs, who are collaterals in the sixth degree of one Rahmat Ali, sued for a declaration that a gift of his ancestral land made by his widow in favour of his two unmarried daughters should not affect their reversionary rights. It was found in their favour by the lower Court that the land was ancestral, but plaintiffs' suit has been dismissed on the ground that plaintiffs could not contest the right of succession of the daughters to Rahmat Ali's estate. The parties in question are Manj Rajputs of the village of Talwandi Rai, Tahsil Jagraon of the Ludhiana District.

A large amount of documentary and oral evidence was produced in the case and has been discussed at length by the lower Court, which has apparently held this evidence somewhat inconclusive. It has, however, based its decision to a very large extent upon the riwaj-i-ams of the 1882 and 1909-10 Settlements. Counsel for the appellants argues that the riwaj-i-ams in question have been wrongly interpreted and that the weight of evidence, as shown by the instances proved and by the oral statements, is much in his favour. Counsel also questioned the action of the lower Court in relying on instances produced by defendants of succession among other gots in other districts. Counsel admits that the daughters have a right by custom to succeed to the estate till their marriage but argues that they have no further rights in the property. It may be stated that since the decision of the first Court both the daughters have married.

The most important point to consider is the correct interpretations and the value of the riwaj-i-ams. Mr. Gordon Walker in 1882 recorded his opinion of the customs of Muhammadan Rajputs in the Ludhiana district to the following effect:—

"That ordinarily a daughter could not succeed in the presence of male lineal issue, but that if she had taken a vow to remain single she took a son's share till her marriage or death."

He then proceeded to state that though Hindu Jats were unfavourable to the rights of daughters, Muhammadan Rajputs and some other tribes agreed that if there was no male collateral related through the great-great-grandfather (nakar dada), the daughter whether married or virgin succeeds.

Counsel for the appellants contested the interpretation placed on Mr. Gordon Walker's riwaj-i-am on the ground that the rights of Muhammadan Rajputs are dealt with in one paragraph and that the second paragraph, in which the rights of a daughter against a collateral in the 5th degree are described, refers to Hindu Jats and tribes other than Muhammadan Rajputs. This contention cannot be upheld in view of the special riwaj-i-am prepared at the same Settlement for Muhammadan Rajputs of the Manj tribe. This special riwaj-i-am provides directly for the succession of a daughter, married or unmarried, as against collaterals of the 6th degree. The riwaj-i-am of Mr. Gordon Walker has been somewhat varied in the riwaj-i-am prepared in the 1909-10 Settlement, but apparently the compiler, Mr. Dunnett, held the view that the rights of daughters generally had considerably improved. As far as Muhammadan Rajputs of the Manj tribe are concerned the entry in the present riwaj-i-am is to the effect that the previous custom as noted by Mr. Gordon Walker continues in force. Mr. Dunnett has also cited some instances in his riwaj-i-am of the succession of daughters. It is true that all his examples among Rajputs refer to the succession of virgin daughters, but it appears that in at least two of the instances their retention of the land was not contested by the collaterals when they married. In these two cases the collaterals long after the period of limitation had passed contested the rights of the daughters, but the mere fact that they allowed them to remain in possession unchallenged for a large number of years strongly supports the case set up by the defendants. It must also be noticed that the entries in the riwaj-i-am in the present case were compiled especially for the village in which the land in suit is situated, and there is evidence of a respectable witness, which appears to be true, that the original entry was attested by two of the plaintiffs themselves.

Learned Counsel for the appellants admits that an entry in a riwaj-i-am, even if not supported by instances, constitutes a strong piece of evidence in support of a custom relied upon, and that it lay upon the plaintiffs to rebut the value of this evidence. [Dasaundhi v. Chanda

SAIDE KHAN v. AMIR-UN-NISSA.

Singh (1)]. Counsel, however, urges that he has succeeded by documentary and oral evidence in proving that the custom cited in the riwaj-i-am does not actually prevail among the tribe of the parties. The documentary and orally cited instances have been discussed at length by the lower Court. A large number of these instances are of no value in the present case, as they refer to the succession of collaterals related within five degrees. As far as the succession of more distantly related collaterals against daughters is concerned, only three or at most four instances have been established, and in each of these cases full details are wanting regarding the position of the daughter with regard to her inheritance and also with regard to her collaterals. It may frequently happen that a daughter married in a different village does not care to be burdened with the worry of managing land situated far distant, especially in the teeth of opposition from her collaterals. It may also frequently be the case that the land inherited is of small area or of small value and not worth the expense of litigation. The married daughter, moreover, is dependent on her husband's inclinations and he may be influenced by one consideration or another in such cases. The instances quoted, therefore, by the plaintiffs are, in our opinion, of little value against the recorded opinions of the members of the Manj Rajput tribe at a time when there was no litigation.

Counsel for the appellants also relied upon Rustam Khan v. Musammatt Jio (2) and the enquiry held in connection therewith in support of his claim. That case, however, was one between the collaterals in the 3rd degree and khana-damad, and it was the rights of a son-in-law which were specially in question. The case was, to a large extent decided upon the entry in the riwaj-i-am which was most unfavourable to the rights of a son-in-law. It is true that in that case some reference was made to the position of daughters, but the entry now relied upon by the defendants was not specially noticed by the Chief Court.

Of a large number of instances quoted by the defendants a considerable proportion were also of little value in this case, as many of these concern collaterals more nearly related than the 6th degree and many others relate merely to the rights of virgin daughters. The value of other instances was contested on the ground that the parties did not belong to the Ludhiana District or that they did not belong to the Manj got of Rajputs. We do not consider the latter objection as of any great importance, as according to the Ludhiana Gazetteer the Manj got is one of the leading tribes of Rajputs in the Ludhiana District and as tribes of inferior importance would naturally follow their customs. The instances cited from the neighbouring districts of Jullundur, Hoshiarpur, Ferozpur and Patiala appear to us of some value owing to contiguity and the probability that the tribes in question follow a similar custom. In some of the judicial cases cited, for instance Nos. 9 and 10, by the lower Court, the cases were decided in favour of the daughter on account of adverse possession, but as already stated, the fact that such successions were not challenged strongly supports the custom as set up in favour of the daughter.

Finally, we may express our opinion that the entry in the riwaj-i-am has special value in that it gives expression to the opinion of males in favour of the rights of females at a time when no litigation was expected. The same view has been held in many rulings of this Court. [See for instance Ata Muhammad Khan v. Jiwani (3) and Ranjha v. Jindwaddi (4)].

For the above reasons we consider that in view of the entry in the riwaj-i-am it was for the plaintiffs to establish their rights to inheritance as against the daughters of the deceased and we have no hesitation in holding that they have failed to do so. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 492; 34 P. R. 1915; 2 P. W. R. 1915 33 P. L. R. 1915.

(4) 24 Ind. Cas. 842; 104 P. R. 1914; 221 P. L. R. 1914; 122 P. W. R. 1914.

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 421; 45 P. R. 1912; 85 P. W. R. 1912; 71 P. L. R. 1912.

(2) 139 P. R. 1892.

DASARTHY NAIDU v. PALALA KUMARAMULL.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
CIVIL APPEAL No. 283 of 1916.

January 22, 1918.

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling,
Kt., and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

P. DASARTHY NAIDU—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

PALALA KUMARAMULL RAJA (DEAD)

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE OF 1ST

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, O. II, r. 2, O. XXIII, r. 1—Res judicata.—Dismissal of suit on pleadings without decision on merits, whether operates as res judicata.—Withdrawal of suit, leave for, on payment of costs; meaning of—Costs, payment of, whether condition precedent to grant of leave—Suit on non-existent cause of action, whether bars fresh suit on true cause of action—Power-of-attorney granted to mortgagee for realization of dues to mortgagor—Suit for cancellation of power and accounts, dismissal of—Fresh suit for redemption, maintainability of—Cause of action.

Where a suit is dismissed on the pleadings without any decision being rendered on the merits, there is no bar of res judicata. [p. 970, col. 2.]

Where leave to withdraw a suit is granted on payment by the plaintiff of defendant's costs, the payment of costs is not a condition precedent to the institution of a fresh suit and non-payment will not disable the plaintiff from filing a fresh suit. [p. 971, col. 1.]

The essential thing to be borne in mind in applying Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, is that the cause of action in the subsequent suit should be the same as the cause of action in the previous suit and not that the cause of action in the subsequent suit should have been made the subject of litigation in the former suit. [p. 971, col. 2.]

Where a suit is brought upon either a non-existent cause of action or upon a false cause of action, it will not bar the institution of a suit upon the true cause of action, because there is no identity of causes of action between the two suits [p. 972, col. 2.]

A right which a litigant possesses without knowing or ever having known that he possesses it cannot be regarded as a 'portion of his claim' within the meaning of rule 2, Order II. [p. 972, col. 1.]

Plaintiff executed a mortgage to one R. on 12th July 1892. On 4th July 1898 he executed a power-of-attorney to R. empowering R. to collect rents from plaintiff's tenants and appropriate the net income towards the mortgage-deed. In 1910 plaintiff sued R. for cancellation of the power and for accounts. That suit was dismissed on the ground that plaintiff should have sued on the mortgage. Afterwards he filed a suit on the Original Side of the High Court for cancellation of the power and for accounts alleging that the mortgage had become discharged. That suit was dismissed on the ground that it was barred as res judicata. On appeal, the Appellate Court permitted the plaintiff to withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit on payment of defendant's costs. The plaintiff without paying the costs of that suit brought the present suit for redemption of the mortgage:

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred as res judicata inasmuch as, in neither of the previous suits, was there any decision on the merits; [p. 970, col. 2.]

(2) that the non-payment of costs in the second of the two prior suits was not a condition precedent to the order granting leave and did not bar the institution of the present suit; [p. 971, col. 1.]

(3) that the suit was not barred under Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 972, col. 2.]

Appeal against the preliminary decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Chingleput, dated the 8th September 1916, in Original Suit No. 57 of 1916.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. T. Rangachariar, for the Appellant, argued that, in the first place, the present suit was res judicata by reason of the two previous suits. There was a final decision in both. In the latter of those suits, the Appellate Court permitted the withdrawal of the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit only on condition of the plaintiff paying defendant's costs within 2 months. That order had not been obeyed and plaintiff was debarred from suing again.

Secondly, the suit offended against the provisions of Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiff having omitted to ask for redemption in the prior suits, it was not competent to agitate for the relief in another proceeding. There was a reference to the mortgage in the plaints in the earlier suits. Reference was made to Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum (1), Rangayya Goundan v. Ranjappa Rao (2), Abdul Hakim Khan v. Karan Singh (3), Naganada Iyer v. Krishnamurti Aiyar (4) and Akayi Kunhi v. Ayissa Bi (5).

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondents, argued that there was no res judicata as the prior decisions were on preliminary points and were not given on the merits. The order granting leave in the second case was unconditional and defendant could apply in execution for costs.

(1) 11 M. L. A. 551; 8 W. R. P. C. 3; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 59; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 259; 20 E. R. 208.

(2) 24 M. 491; 6 C. W. N. 17; 3 Bom. L. R. 799; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 117; 28 I. A. 22 (P. C.).

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 951; 87 A. 646; 18 A. L. J. 929.

(4) 6 Ind. Cas. 233; 34 M. 97; (1910) M. W. N. 213; 8 M. L. T. 60; 20 M. L. J. 535.

(5) 26 M. 645.

DASARTHY NAIDU v. PÁLALA KUMARAMULL.

The suit was not barred by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. The fact that the prior suits were based on an unsustainable cause of action and that the plaintiff misconceived his remedy did not bar the present suit.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for redemption. The two main defences are that the suit is barred by Order II, rule 2, and also by section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Subordinate Judge overruled these objections and passed a preliminary decree for taking accounts. The defendant has appealed.

In order to understand the contentions in appeal it is necessary to set out the history of the case. The property in suit belonged to the 1st plaintiff. He executed a deed of mortgage in favour of one P. Rajaratnam Naidu on the 12th of July 1892. On the 5th of July 1898 he executed a general power-of-attorney to the same individual to facilitate the collection of rents from the tenants. One of the conditions of the power-of-attorney was that the agent should appropriate the net income towards the mortgage-deed and should also pay to the mortgagor a certain fixed monthly allowance. The relation between the mortgagor and the mortgagee became strained in or about the year 1910. In that year Original Suit No. 36 of 1910 on the file of the District Court of Chingleput was instituted against Rajaratnam Naidu by the plaintiff for the cancellation of the power-of-attorney executed in 1898 and for accounts. The defendant pleaded in limine to that suit that as the power-of-attorney was part of the mortgage transaction, the plaintiff should sue on the mortgage and not on the power-of-attorney. The then District Judge upheld this objection and dismissed the suit. The second suit was filed in the Original Side of the High Court, viz., Original Suit No. 232 of 1914, in which it was claimed that the mortgage has become discharged, that the power-of-attorney should be cancelled and that the defendant should render an account. At the time of this suit Rajaratnam Naidu had died and the present defendant who is his legal representative was impleaded as defendant. Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri who heard the original suit was of opinion that it was barred by res judicata and dismissed it. An appeal was preferred against that decree. At the hearing of the appeal, the plaintiff applied for permission to withdraw the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit. This permission was granted and the present suit was instituted in the District Court of Chingleput for redemption based upon the mortgage of 1892.

The contention that the suit is barred by res judicata may be shortly disposed of. It is not denied that at no time was there any decision on the merits. The suits on both the occasions were dismissed on the pleadings. It is, therefore, clear that the present suit is not barred by section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code. Very recently, the Judicial Committee pointed out in Abdullah Ashgar Ali Khan v. Ganesh Dass (6) that where the matter has not been heard and finally decided there can be no bar of res judicata.

One other objection may also be shortly dealt with. It was contended by Mr. T. Rangachariar that the order of the Appellate Court permitting the withdrawal of the suit with liberty to sue again has been contravened by the plaintiff and that consequently the present suit is unsustainable. The order is in these terms: "Leave to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit on payment of defendant's costs here and below, within two months, in view of decision in Original Side Appeal No. 51 of 1914." In order to understand the import of this, it must be stated that in Original Side Appeal No. 51 of 1914, it was held by a Bench of this Court that suits for redemption should be instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction the mortgaged property is situated. Therefore, what the learned Judges meant in giving leave to withdraw was that as the suit ought to be one for redemption and as the High Court can have no jurisdiction to entertain such a suit, plaintiff will be given liberty to withdraw the suit and to bring a proper suit in a proper forum. In effect the order amounted to saying that the High Court had no jurisdiction to hear the suit, which ought to be filed under the circumstances disclosed in the

(6) 42 Ind. Cas. 959; 34 M. L. J. 12; 128 P. W. R. 1917; 22 M. L. T. 451; 22 C. W. N. 121; 3 P. L. W. 381; 26 C. L. J. 568; 15 A. L. J. 589; 19 Bom. L. R. 972; 7 L. W. 62; 132 P. L. R. 1917; (1918) M. W. N. 7 (P. C.)

DASABATHY NAIDU v. PALALA KUMARAMULL.

District Court of Chingleput and that consequently the plaintiff should not be allowed to go on with the suit in Madras. If that is the correct interpretation of the order, there was no necessity at all for the granting of permission to sue again. We take it that it was given ex abundanti cautela. Consequently, the non-payment of costs within the time mentioned in the order would not disable the plaintiff from suing upon the cause of action; moreover on the grammatical construction of the order, we are not prepared to say that the payment of costs was a condition precedent to the institution of the suit within two months. We must, under these circumstances, overrule the objection based upon the withdrawal order.

Now we go to the main objection. Mr. T. Rangachariar conceded at the outset that if the cause of action for the present suit can be held to have been different from the cause of action for Original Suit No. 36 of 1910 on the file of the District Court of Chingleput, he will not be able to maintain his position that Order II, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, barred the present suit. It is clear on examining the plaint in the first suit that although there was a casual reference to the mortgage of 1892 in the plaint, it was solely based upon the power-of-attorney executed in 1893. The cause of action was stated to have accrued on the date on which notice to cancel the power-of-attorney was given, and the prayer was for the cancellation of the power of attorney. What was pleaded in defence was that that was not the proper suit. In the present suit, the cause of action is based on the mortgage document, and the prayer is for redemption. In our opinion, the two causes of action are entirely different. The fact that the plaintiff in the first suit had to rest his case upon an unsustainable cause of action is not a ground for holding that that cause of action is the same as the true cause of action on which the subsequent suit is based. It was held in Pittapur Raja v. Suriya Row (7) by the Judicial Committee with reference to section 7 of the Act of 1859, which corresponded to Order II, rule 2, "that every suit should include the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action, meaning the whole of the claim arising out of the same cause of action upon which the suit was brought, not that every suit should include every cause of action, or every claim, which the plaintiff had against the defendant." This was followed in Mahomed Riasat Ali v. Hasin Banu (8) and in Nagathal v. Ponnusami (9). Reference may also be made to Khedaroonissa Bibee v. Boodhee Bibee (10). In Order II, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, there are three distinct clauses: Clause (1) deals with the splitting of cause of action, clause (2) deals with the splitting of portions of the subject-matter, and clause (3) to the same process in respect of reliefs arising from the same cause of action. The essential thing to be borne in mind in applying the rule is that the cause of action in the subsequent suit should be the same as the cause of action in the previous suit, and not that the cause of action in the subsequent suit should have been made the subject of litigation in the former suit. If we keep this principle in mind, there will be no difficulty in understanding the various cases that have been quoted at the Bar.

Mr. T. Rangachariar relied upon Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum (1). That related to the omission of a portion of the subject-matter in the previous suit. The cause of action for the second suit was a deposit of Government promissory notes; a portion of that same deposit was the subject-matter of the previous litigation. The Judicial Committee pointed out that the word omission included both accidental and deliberate omissions, and that consequently the subsequent suit was barred. In Rangayya Goundan v. Ranjappa Rao (2), another Privy Council case, two reliefs were available on the cause of action as stated in the previous plaint. One relief alone was asked for in the first litigation. The Judicial Committee pointed out that a suit for the other relief based upon that cause of action was not maintainable. The same remarks apply to Abdul Hakim Khan v. Karan

(8) 20 I. A. 155; 21 C. 157; 17 Ind. Jur. 484; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 374; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 133; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 737 (P. C.).

(9) 13 M. 44; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 741.

(10) 13 W. R. 317.

(7) 8 M. 520; 12 I. A. 116; 9 Ind. Jur. 274; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 638; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 356.

MAUNG BA KYAW V. U LAN.

Singh (3). Naganada Iyyr v. Krishnamurti Aiyar (4), which was strongly relied upon by the learned Vakil for the appellant, proceeded on the footing that the subsequent suit for possession arose out of the cause of action for declaration which was the basis of the first suit. As regards Akayi Kunhi v. Ayissa Bi (5), another case relied upon by Mr. T. Rangachariar, it is enough to say that that decision does not seem to be reconcilable with the decision of the Judicial Committee in Saminathan Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty (11). On the other hand, the decisions to which Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar drew our attention support the principle we have already enunciated. The decision of the Judicial Committee in Amanat Bibi v. Imdad Hussain (12) is one of the strongest cases on the point. The Judicial Committee said in that case, "It appears to their Lordships that the fair result of the evidence is that at the date of the former suit the respondent was not aware of the right on which he is now insisting. A right, which a litigant possesses without knowing or ever having known that he possesses it, can hardly be regarded as a 'portion of his claim' within the meaning of the section in question." These words are exactly applicable to the present case. The plaintiff was not aware when he sued in Original Suit No. 36 of 1910 on the file of the District Court of Chingleput that his cause of action was only to sue on the mortgage. Raghava Chariar v. Seshadri Iyengar (13) follows the decision in Amanat Bibi v. Imdad Hussain (12). A Full Bench of this Court in Thrikaikat Madathil Ramon v. Thiruthiyil Krishnen Nair (14) held that where the first suit is based upon an alleged lease and fails, a subsequent suit on title is not barred, the reason of the decision being that the cause of action for the subsequent suit is not the same as the cause of action for the fresh suit. Vasudeva Rari Varma v. Athi Kottil Eashwara Kannanur (15) is also to the same effect. It is not necessary to multiply citations. The principle deducible from these various cases is that where a suit is brought upon either a non-existent cause of action or upon a false cause of action, that will not bar the institution of a suit upon the true cause of action, because there is no identity of causes of action between these two suits. The reason of the decision of the Judicial Committee in Saminathan Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty (11) is decisive on that matter. That was a suit upon a document which was found to be invalid. The Judicial Committee held that a suit based upon the original title which preceded the document was not obnoxious to the rule similar to Order II, rule 2. The observations of the learned Judges in Ramaswami Ayyar v. Vithinatha Ayyar (16) are exactly in point. For all these reasons we are of opinion that the decision of the Subordinate Judge is right; and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

M.C.P.

(16) 26 M. 760 at p. 771; 13 M. L. J. 448.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 45 OF 1917.
March 27, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Kin.
MAUNG BA KYAW AND ANOTHER—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

U LAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Execution of decree—Attachment withdrawn—Declaration, suit for, by creditor that property belongs to judgment-debtor, maintainability of—Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), s. 42, proviso, applicability of.

Independently of the provisions of Order XXI, rule 63 of the Civil Procedure Code, a decree-holder may sue for a declaration that certain property attached in execution of his decree belongs to the judgment-debtor, although at the time of the suit the attachment might have been withdrawn and the property may not be in the possession of the decree-holder. To such a suit the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act does not apply. [p. 973, cols. 1 & 2.]

Mr. Ba U, for the Appellants.

Mr. Maung Tin, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In execution of their decree against one Tun Hla, the plaintiffs-appellants

(11) 26 Ind. Cas. 228; 41 I. A. 142; 18 C. W. N. 617; 88 L. J. P. C. 131; 17 New Law Rep. 56; (1914) A. C. 618; 110 L. T. 913 (P. C.)

(12) 15 C. 800; 15 I. A. 106; 12 Ind. Jur. 255; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 214; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 103; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1117.

(13) 15 M. L. J. 374.

(14) 29 M. 153; 16 M. L. J. 49 (F. R.).

(15) 26 Ind. Cas. 51.

MAUNG BA KYAW C. U LAN.

attached two bullocks as the property of their judgment-debtor. The defendant-respondent applied for the removal of the attachment. Thereupon the plaintiffs withdrew their attachment and filed the present suit for a declaration that the two bullocks were liable to be attached and sold in execution of their decree.

The trial Court decreed the suit.

The lower Appellate Court held that the suit, not being under Order XXI, rule 63, of the Code of Civil Procedure but under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, did not lie, inasmuch as there was no prayer for consequential relief. Evidently the learned Appellate Judge thought that, as the bullocks were in the possession of the defendant, the plaintiffs should have asked for their possession.

It has not been contended here that the suit is one under the Civil Procedure Code. That it cannot be held to be such a suit there is no doubt, as there was no investigation of plaintiff's claim in the attachment proceedings owing to the attachment being withdrawn. The wording of rule 63, Order XXI, is quite clear. Nor is it disputed that independently of a suit under the Civil Procedure Code, the decree-holder may sue for a declaration that the property attached belonged to the judgment-debtor. In fact this latter proposition was expressly laid down in Societa Coloniale Italiana v. Shree Le (1), following Raghunath Mukund v. Sorash K. R. Kama (2). I have followed this ruling in Chan Tat Thai v. Ma Lat (3). But the argument of the defendant's Advocate is that the plaintiff could not sue for a bare declaration, as the bullocks were in the possession of the defendant, and that the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act applies. Exactly the same argument was advanced in Allagappa Chetty, P. L. A. N. v. Nazamat Ali Chowdhry (4) and Irwin, J., answered it in these words, "I can see no reason for making any distinction between the mode in which plaintiff must establish his right if he has previously applied for a summary order and the mode in which he must establish his right if he has not applied for a summary order. In either case a declaration is sufficient. When plaintiff obtains a declaration, the Court which executed the decree must respect the declaration and give restitution.... The object of the proviso is to prevent a plaintiff from getting a declaration in one suit, and consequential relief afterwards in another. Here there is no need for any subsequent suit. The relief must be given by the Court which sold the land in execution." It may be noted that the suit in that case was one by the claimant to the property attached but not by the decree-holder. In this case the suit is by the decree-holder. But the remarks of Irwin, J., must apply, mutatis mutandis, to this case. When the plaintiff gets the declaratory decree he asks for, he can proceed to attach the same property in execution of his previous decree and the execution Court will be bound to recognize the attachment as being just and proper. The declaratory decree will be binding on the present defendant in the subsequent execution proceedings, and he will not be able to object that the plaintiff has no right to attach the property.

Then there is my own ruling in K. Y. K. M. Chetty Firm v. S. N. V. R. Chetty Firm (5) in favour of the plaintiff. There I followed Sappabadi Chetty v. Maung In (6) and Kristnam Socaya v. Pathma Bee (7).

I would, therefore, hold that the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act does not apply.

The appeal is allowed and the case is remanded to the lower Appellate Court to be decided on the merits. Costs will abide the result. The appellant will be granted a certificate for the return of the Court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal under section 13 of the Court Fees Act.

Appeal allowed;

Case remanded.

(5) 34 Ind. Cas. 125; 9 Bur. L. T. 109.

(6) P. J. L. B. 481.

(7) 29 M. 51.

(1) 4 L. B. R. 252; 14 Bur. L. R. 135.

(2) 23 B. 266; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 176.

(3) 33 Ind. Cas. 124; 9 Bur. L. T. 89.

(4) 4 L. B. R. 263.

BABU MISAR v. UMBE PARSHAD.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL. No. 1547
OF 1917.

April 9, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

BABU MISAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

UMBE PARSHAD AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), ss. 62, 65—Application for Letters of Administration with Will annexed, nature of—Duty of Court—Court, whether can refuse Letters.

An application for Letters of Administration with the Will annexed stands on the same footing as an application for Probate, and the Court is bound to grant the Letters unless it finds that the Will was not executed by the testator or that he was not of a disposing mind at the time of making it or that the Will was not his own voluntary act. [p. 975, col. 1.]

In an application for Letters of Administration to the estate of one D. with a copy of the Will annexed it appeared that N., the husband of D., made a Will dedicating certain property to a temple and directing that his widow be maintained out of his other property. After the death of N. D. applied for Letters of Administration to his estate. The executors under the Will appeared in Court and consented to the widow being granted the Letters, which were granted accordingly. Later on D. made a Will in which she appointed the applicants as executors, who after her death applied for Letters of Administration with a copy of her Will annexed. The executors under the Will of N. lodged caveats urging that D. had no power to make a Will:

Held, that as it was proved that D. executed the Will and as it was not contested that she was not of a disposing mind at the time she made it, the applicants were entitled to Letters of Administration with copy of her Will annexed. [p. 975, col. 1.]

Miscellaneous first appeal from the order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Delhi, dated the 28th February 1917, dismissing the application.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Delhi, rejecting the application of Babu Misar and Jhabbu Misar for Letters of Administration to the estate of Bibi Dhanno with a copy of Will annexed. Narain Das, husband of Musammatt Dhanno, made a Will on the 27th July 1896, Joti Parshad and Umbe Parshad being appointed executors. Under his Will he made certain property wakf and dedicated it to a Hindu temple and directed that his widow be maintained out of his other property. He died on the 19th November 1910 and on the 16th of December 1913 Musammatt Dhanno applied for Letters of Administration to his estate. Joti Parshad and Umbe Parshad appeared in Court and consented to the widow being granted Letters of Administration and they were granted accordingly. On the 15th November 1915 Musammatt Dhanno made a Will in which she appointed Babu Misar and Jhabbu Misar as executors. She died sometime in December 1915, and on the 5th of August 1916 the said executors applied for Letters of Administration with a copy of Musammatt Dhanno's Will annexed. Joti Parshad and Umbe Parshad lodged caveats. The main objection urged by them was that Musammatt Dhanno deceased had no power to make a Will. The Court has rejected the application, on the ground that the widow had no right to make the Will because the Will of her husband confined her rights only to maintenance from certain properties and that the mere fact that she was granted Letters of Administration because the executors did not like to act, did not entitle her to will away the property contrary to the very terms of the Will of her husband in respect of which she was granted Letters of Administration.

Mr. Moti Sagar on behalf of Babu Misar appellant urges that in proceedings under Act V of 1881 where Probate of a Will is sought, the Court is bound to grant the Probate unless it finds that the Will was not executed by the testator or that he was not in a state of mind competent to exercise his testamentary power or that the Will was not the testator's own voluntary act, and that the Court has no concern with the question whether the Will, if proved, will be effectual or valid or whether it can affect certain parts of the property with which it purports to deal. In support of this he relies upon Indar Narain v. Onkar Lal (1). He also cited Ochavaram Nanabhai v. Dolatram Jamiatram (2), wherein it was laid down that on the hearing of a petition for issue of Letters of Administration to the estate of a deceased person it is not the province of the Court to go into the question of title to the property to which the Letters of Administration refer. He urges that all the Court had to do was to arrive at a finding whether Musammal Dhanno executed the Will in question and whether she was of a disposing mind at the time when she executed it, and that having found these facts in favour of the executors-applicants, it was bound to grant them Letters of Administration. Mr. Manohar Lal on behalf of the respondents does not contest the authority of the rulings cited by Mr. Moti Sagar, but contends that section 85 of Act V of 1881 gives the Court power to refuse Letters of Administration for reasons to be recorded by it. Mr. Moti Sagar replies that this section does not apply to an application for the grant of Letters of Administration with a copy of the Will annexed, which he says stands on the same footing as an application for Probate of a Will. There are, I think, grounds for holding that an application for Letters of Administration with the Will annexed stands on the same footing as an application for Probate, for both applications are grouped together in section 62 of the Act. Be that as it may, I do not think the present case was one such as is contemplated by section 85 of the Act. The real question in dispute appears to be whether the original executors under the Will of Narain Das are now entitled to manage the property or whether they have forfeited their right by not taking out Letters of Administration after Narain Das's death and by assenting to the grant of such Letters to Narain Das's widow. If they are not now entitled, it appears to me that there are no reasons why Musammal Dhanno should not have had authority to make arrangements for the management of the property after her death. The question is not devoid of difficulty and is, in my opinion, not one for decision in the present application. It is proved that Musammal Dhanno executed the Will and it is not contested before me that she was not of a disposing mind at the time when she made it.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 130; 20 P. R. 1912; 141 P. L. R. 1911; 233 P. W. R. 1911.

(2) 28 B. 644; 6 Bom. L. R. 966.

MUTHAYA SHETTI v. KANTHAPPA SHETTI.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and reversing the order of the lower Court grant the application of Babu Misar and Jhabbu Misar for Letters of Administration to the estate of Bibi Dhanno with a copy of her Will annexed. Parties will bear their own costs. Letters of Administration will be made out by the lower Court.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1301 of 1915.

December 17, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Bakewell.

MUTHAYA SHETTI—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

KANTHAPPA SHETTI—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1909), Sch. I, Art. 134, scope of—Transfer by mortgagee—Redemption, suit for, against transferee—Adverse possession, plea of—Absolute interest, acquisition of, by purchaser—Tests—Burden of proof—Adverse finding on issue, while final decision favourable to party, effect of—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11.

Article 134 of the Limitation Act governs only those cases where the transferee from the mortgagee acquires an absolute title to and interest in the property transferred. [p. 978, col. 2.]

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Article 134 of the Limitation Act is only a branch of the law of prescription, and the question to be determined in cases governed by that Article is, what it is that the purchaser prescribed for. If the transferee bargained for and believed he was bargaining only for the interests of the mortgagee, he cannot acquire title as the absolute owner of the property. The fact that he knew his vendor had only mortgagee rights would not be conclusive on the question. The real test would be, did he ask for and obtain an absolute interest in the property and believe himself that he was acquiring an absolute interest in it. [p. 978, col. 2.]

The fact that a party against whom an issue is decided has no right of appeal does not affect the rule of res judicata. [p. 977, col. 1.]

Where the decision on an issue is not necessary for the disposal of the case, it will not operate as res judicata. [p. 977, col. 2.]

Where an unnecessary decision on an issue is embodied in the decree itself, the matter becomes res judicata. [p. 977, col. 2.]

Where a judgment decides more issues than one and it is doubtful on which of those issues the final conclusion was based, the decision on all the issues will be res judicata. [p. 977, col. 2.]

Where the decision on an issue is unnecessary and the party against whom it is given cannot appeal

MUTHAYA SHETTI V. KANTHAPPA SHETTI.

as the final decree is in his favour the decision on the issue would be res judicata. The proper procedure for the party adversely affected by the issue is to ask the Court to embody it in the decree. [p. 978, col. 1.]

Per Bakerell, J.—A transferee who claims the benefit of Article 134 of the Limitation Act must adduce evidence that he intended to purchase an absolute title, which will be, in the first place, the deed of transfer but may also consist of the contract of sale and the negotiations which preceded it. Evidence as to the documents of title produced by the vendor and the steps taken by the purchaser to ascertain the former's title to the property will be important as showing the interest to be transferred. If the title adduced by the vendor and the deed of transfer to the purchaser are consistent with an intention to transfer an absolute interest, the burden will lie on the plaintiff to show that the circumstances of the transfer negative such an intention. [p. 979, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of South Kanara, in Appeal Suit No. 326 of 1914, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Mangalore, in Original Suit No. 19 of 1913.

Mr. B. Sitarama Row, for the Appellant.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, for the Respondent.

This second appeal coming on for hearing on 29th and 30th March 1917 respectively, and having stood over for consideration till 18th April 1917, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

SESHAGIRI AIYAR, J.—The predecessors-in-title of the plaintiff executed Exhibit A to one Shankarananappayya in 1872. Shankarananappayya sold the property comprised thereunder to Venkappayya under Exhibit I in 1879. Venkappayya's widow sold it in 1897 to Puttappayya and Puttappayya's sons sold the same in 1912 to the defendant. The present suit is brought by the plaintiff to redeem the mortgage of 1872. The answer of the defendant is that the suit is barred by Article 134 of the Limitation Act as more than twelve years have elapsed since the date of the transfer by the original mortgagee. Both the Courts have come to the conclusion that the suit is barred by limitation. The judgment of the District Judge is so meagre that we were obliged to hear this case as a first appeal. Mr. Sitarama Row contended before us that under Article 134 the burden of proving that the transferee from the mortgagee had acquired an absolute right in the property lay on the defendant.

Before considering this question, I shall dispose of a preliminary point suggested by Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar for the respondent, namely, that Exhibit A is an absolute conveyance with an option to re-purchase, and that consequently his client is the absolute owner of the property. In answer to this suggestion, the learned Vakil for the appellant pointed out that the construction of Exhibit A is res judicata by virtue of a decision of the District Court of South Kanara in the year 1886. That decision was given under the following circumstances. A member of the plaintiff's family sued his brothers for partition, and claimed a share in the property in dispute alleging that the alienation of it was not for necessary purposes. The District Munsif held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover a third share of the property on paying a third of the mortgage amount. There was an appeal by the alleged mortgagee, the 9th defendant in that case. His contention was that the transaction was not a mortgage but an absolute sale with an option to re-purchase. Mr. Best, the District Judge, held that it was a mortgage and not a sale. He further held that it was not open to the plaintiff to sue for the redemption of a portion of the property by offering to pay only a portion of the mortgage debt, and that, moreover, as the suit was not one for redemption, it should be dismissed qua this property.

The question is whether this conclusion of the then District Judge of South Kanara is res judicata. Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar strenuously argued that as the suit was dismissed and as the mortgagee could not have appealed against the decision of the District Judge although the finding on the construction of Exhibit A was against him, the matter is not res judicata. Upon the question whether a bare finding upon an issue when the final conclusion is in favour of the party against whom the decision on the issue is given, gives a right of appeal to the party, there have been differences of opinion. In Yusuf Sahib v. Durgi (1) it was apparently held that an appeal lies under the circumstances. In Ranganatham Chetty v. Lakshmu Uammal (2) the same

(1) 30 M. 447; 17 M. L. J. 269; 2 M. L. T. 368.

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 15; 25 M. L. J. 879; (1913) M. W. N. 690; 14 M. L. T. 189.

MUTHAYA SHETTI v. KANTHAPPA SHETTI.

view was taken. Both these cases follow Krishna Chandra Goldar v. Mohesh Chandra Saha (3). In Achanta Venkatasayana v. Yellapa, agada Sivasankaranarayana (4) the question was left open. There is a decision of Ayling and Spencer, JJ., in Secretary of State v. Swaminatha Koundan (5) which is inconsistent with Yusuf Sahib v. Durgi (1) and Ranganatham Chetty v. Lakehmi-ammal (2). See also Brij Behari Lal v. Shevanath Prasad (6). Having regard to the language of sections 16 and 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure which gives a right of appeal only against decrees, it seems doubtful whether the two earlier Madras decisions are correct. If the decision in this case depended solely upon that question, I would have felt bound to refer the matter to a Full Bench; but I think that this case can be disposed of upon other grounds. I agree with Mr. Sitarama Row that the fact that a party against whom an issue is decided has no right of appeal does not affect the rule of res judicata. There is nothing in the language of section 11 to suggest such a test. The language of explanation 2 to that section implies that the competence of a Court for the purpose of res judicata is not affected by the fact that its decision is not appealable. It is true that this explanation was introduced to put an end to a controversy which existed as to whether when a decree is not appealable to the same Tribunal the Court which decided the earlier claim can be held to have been competent to adjudicate upon the subsequent claim litigated in a superior Court. Nonetheless, the wide language of the explanation shows that the Legislature did not intend that the test of res judicata should depend on the right of appeal. I, therefore, overrule the first contention. Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar then argued that the decision on Exhibit A was not necessary for the conclusion which was come to in the suit, and that consequently the matter is not res judicata. The cases on this point may be grouped under four heads: the first class of cases relates to the decision on issues which are altogether unnecessary for the disposal of the case.

For instance, decisions on the character of the defendant's holding where the suit is dismissed on the ground that there has been no notice to quit or that there had been no exchange of pattas and muchilikas. Devarakonda Narasamma v. Devara Kondakannaya (7) and Muttukumarappa Reddi v. Arumuga Pillai (8) represent this class of cases. In these cases as the pronouncement upon the tenure of the defendant was not necessary for the disposal of the case, the decision upon that issue was held not to be res judicata. It is to this class of cases the observation of Sir R. Collier in Run Bahadur Singh v. Lucho Koer (9), that "as the decree was not based upon it, but in spite of it," there can be no res judicata applies. See also Nundo Lal Bhattacharjee v. Eithoo Mookhy Debee (10), Thakur Magundeo v. Thakur Mahadeo Singh (11) and Shib Charan Lal v. Raghu Nath (12). The second class deals with cases where although the decision of an issue is unnecessary for the disposal of the case, still for some reasons the Court embodies that decision in the decree itself. Then the matter becomes res judicata not on the ground that there has been a decision on the issue, but because there is a decree of the Court which is binding upon the parties: Kaveri Amnall v. Sastri Ramier (13) and Mota Holiappa v. Vithal Gopal Habbu (14). The third class relates to judgments which decide more than one issue, but it is doubtful from those judgments on which of these issues the final conclusion was based. In such a case the decision on both the issues will be res judicata. See Peary Mohun Muk-ryee v. Ambica Churn Bandopadhyaya (15) and the recent decision of the learned Chief Justice and Justice Phillips in Appeal No. 62 of 1913. [Secretary of State v. Rajah of Venkatagiri (16)]. Now I come to the fourth class. In the fourth class, the

(7) 4 M. 134; 5 Ind. Jur. 634; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 928.

(8) 7 M. 145; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 686.

(9) 12 L. A. 23; 11 C. 30; 4 Sup. P. C. J. 602; 9 Ind. Jur. 202; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 960 (P. C.).

(10) 13 C. 17; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 503.

(11) 18 C. 647; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 432.

(12) 17 A. 174; A. W. N. (1895) 47; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 437.

(13) 28 M. 104; 13 M. L. J. 58.

(14) 36 Ind. Cas. 74; 42 B. 632; 18 Bom. L. R. 712.

(15) 24 C. 900; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1269.

(16) 35 Ind. Cas. 286; 31 M. L. J. 97; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 96; 4 L. W. 133; 20 M. L. T. 284.

(3) 9 C. W. N. 554.

(4) 27 Ind. Cas. 861; 17 M. L. T. 85; 2 L. W. 101.

(5) 12 Ind. Cas. 167; 37 M. 25; 10 M. L. T. 29; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 303; 21 M. L. J. 947.

(6) 35 Ind. Cas. 837; 20 C. W. N. 1354.

MUTHAYA SHETTI V. KANTHAPPA SHETTI.

decision upon the issue is necessary, but unfortunately the party against whom that decision is given could not appeal against it as the final decree is in his favour. In such a case it seems to me that the decision on the issue would be res judicata. The proper procedure where the defendant is affected by a decision on an issue which he has not the opportunity of contesting in appeal may be as suggested by Petheram, C. J., in Jamaitunnissa v. Lutfunnissa (17), that is to say, he can ask the Court which has given an adverse decision on a material issue to embody it in the decree so that he may have a right of appeal against such a decision. But if he neglects the opportunity and the decision itself is necessary for the disposal of the case, there seems to be no escape from the bar of res judicata. On the whole I have come to the conclusion that the decision of Mr. Best in 1886, which was absolutely necessary for the decision of the case and which has stood unchallenged for thirty years, is binding on the parties, and that Exhibit A should be construed as a mortgage by conditional sale and not as a sale with an option to re-purchase.

This conclusion throws me back upon the question whether the suit is barred by limitation. Article 134 has given rise to conflicting decisions. I do not propose to examine them at any length in the present case. In Radhanath Doss v. Gisborne and Co. (18), at a time when the corresponding Article of the Act of 1859 contained the words "in good faith," Lord Cairns delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee held that the burden of proving that the purchaser acquired an absolute interest in the property lay upon such purchaser. In the Acts of 1877 and 1908, in addition to the other changes, the words "in good faith" were omitted. It is unnecessary to canvass the reasons which led the Legislature to omit these words. In Radhanath Doss v. Gisborne and Co. (18) the Judicial Committee pointed out that it must be shown that the purchaser honestly believed that he was acquiring an absolute right to the property. This deduction was made not because of the existence of the words "in good faith" but because of the use of the expression 'purchaser'. I do not think that the changes introduced by the Act of 1877 and of 1908 have absolved the Court from the necessity of coming to a conclusion upon this question. If the transferee bargained for and believed he was bargaining only for the interests of the mortgagee, he cannot acquire title as the absolute owner of the property. After all, Article 134 is only a branch of the law of prescription, and the question to be determined would be, what it is that the purchaser prescribed for. The fact that he knew that his vendor had only a mortgagee right would not be conclusive on this question. The real test would be, did he ask for and obtain an absolute right in the property and believe himself that he was having an absolute interest in it? In Pandu v. Vithu (19) that is the test that was suggested; Kannusami Thonjirayan v. Muthusami Pillai (20) to which Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar drew our attention quotes that case with approval. I do not think that Subbaiya Sandaram v. Mahamad Mustapha Maracayar (21) decides anything to the contrary. Singaram Chettiar v. Kalayanasundaram Pillai (22) is in favour of this view. See also Baluswami Aiyer v. Venkataswamy Naicken (23). The language of the Article is not opposed to this proposition. In the present case this question has not been considered by either of the Courts below. I express no opinion on the question of the burden of proof, bearing in mind the observations of Lord Parker of Waddington that the Courts in this country are too prone to base their decisions on the abstract theory as to onus. But seeing that the plaintiff seeks to disturb a possession which has been with the defendant for a considerable period, prima facie, he must be called upon to prove his case. There must be a finding on the following issue:

(19) 19 B. 140; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 95.

(20) 38 Ind. Cas. 194; (1917) M. W. N. 5; 5 L. W. 250.

(21) 40 Ind. Cas. 50; 32 M. L. J. 85; 21 M. L. T. 62; 5 L. W. 690.

(22) 26 Ind. Cas. 1; 1 L. W. 687; (1914) M. W. N. 735.

(23) 40 Ind. Cas. 531; 32 M. L. J. 24; 40 M. 745.

(17) 7 A. 606; A. W. N. (1885) 89; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 657.

(18) 14 M. I. A. 1; 15 W. R. P. O. 24; 6 B. L. R. 530; 2 Suth. P. O. J. 397; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 636; 20 E. R. 687.

MUTHAYA SHETTI v. KANTHAPPA SHETTI.

Did the executant of Exhibit I intend to transfer absolute interest in the property? and was it the intention of the parties that there should be an absolute transfer of title to the property?

Finding on the evidence on the record within a month from the date of the re-opening of the Court. Seven days for objections.

BAKEWELL, J.—I agree that the document which forms the root of the respondent's title must as between the parties be held to be a mortgage, and I propose to deal only with the question of limitation. It is, I think, clear from the wording of Article 148 of the Limitation Act, 1908, that it deals with suits in which the cause of action arises upon the contract of mortgage, and the Article applies to a transferee of the mortgagee's interest under that contract: Article 134, therefore, provides for cases where the transfer of mortgaged property by the mortgagee gives rise to a cause of action apart from the mortgage contract. The condition of good faith on the part of the transferee which was contained in section 5 of Act XIV of 1859 has been eliminated from Article 134, but otherwise the Article substantially corresponds with that section read with clause 12 of section 1.

In Radhanath Doss v. Gisborne and Co. (18) their Lordships of the Privy Council indismissing section 5 of the Act of 1859 considered separately each of the three conditions prescribed thereby, and defined "purchaser" as meaning "some person who purchases that which de facto is a mortgage upon a representation made to him and in the full belief that it is not a mortgage but an absolute title." They held that the pleadings did not allege, and that there was no evidence of, any negotiation for such a purchase, and "no evidence of any allegation on the part of the vendor which would lead Messrs. Gisborne and Company (the transferees) to believe that this was an absolute title which they held to the property in question. The only evidence that they were purchasers at all is the production of the purchase deed," which their Lordships held contained "no evidence of a statement on the part of the vendor or of any belief on the part of the purchasers that the property of the Maheewan Estate was a property which the vendor claimed to hold by what we should call in this country a fee simple title." The word "transfer" includes a purchase (see Transfer of Property Act, section 5) and the transaction in the present case is alleged to be a purchase, and I think that their Lordships' observations apply to Article 134.

It follows that a transferee who claims the benefit of the Article must adduce evidence that he intended to purchase an absolute title, which will be in the first place the deed of transfer but may also consist of the contract of sale and the negotiations which preceded it. An important preliminary to a sale of immoveable property, which seems, however, to be frequently neglected, is a careful investigation of the vendor's title, and I think that their Lordships had this in mind when in the passage first quoted; they refer to a representation made to the purchaser and to his full belief that he was acquiring an absolute title. Evidence as to the documents of title produced by the vendor, and the steps taken by the purchaser to ascertain the former's title to the property will be important as shewing the interest intended to be transferred. If, for instance, it should appear that the purchaser refrained from calling for and examining the title-deeds, and from examining the register of assurances, or from enquiry as to who was in possession of the property, or otherwise abstained from means available to him of ascertaining the title, or that he in fact inspected the mortgage document under which the vendor claimed the property, there would be evidence upon which the Court might hold that the parties did not intend to transfer an absolute property but such interest only as was vested in the transferor, or possibly that the mortgagee intended to commit a fraud upon the mortgagor and that the transferee was accessory thereto or did not act in good faith (see section 18 of the Limitation Act). If, on the other hand, the title adduced by the vendor and the deed of transfer to the purchaser are consistent with an intention to transfer an absolute interest, the burden will lie upon the plaintiff to show that the circumstances of the transfer negative such an intention.

MULK SHAH v. NATHU.

This view appears to me to be supported by the decisions of this Court reported as Kannusami Thaniroyan v. Muthusami Pillai (20) and Baluswami Aiyar v. Venkataswamy Naicken (23) and Subbaiya Pandaram v. Mahamad Mustapha Muracayar (21).

The lower Appellate Court has dealt with the case in a very summary manner and I would remand it to that Court for a finding on the issue framed by my learned brother.

In compliance with the order contained in the above judgment, the District Judge of South Kanara submitted the following

FINDING.—I have been directed to return a finding on the issue "Did the executant of Exhibit I intend to transfer an absolute interest in the property, and was it the intention of the parties that there should be an absolute transfer of title to the property?" Exhibit I was executed on 10th January 1879, and of course at this distance of time it is impossible to obtain positive evidence as to what the intention of the parties was. The wording of the sale-deed undoubtedly indicates that the vendor purported to sell the property as his absolute property. Exhibit I is styled "an absolute sale-deed" and the executant says, "I have this day sold you absolutely without a condition." It is urged, however, on behalf of the plaintiff (appellant) that there were no allegations in the written statement that there were any negotiations prior to this sale evidenced by Exhibit I or that there were any representations made by the vendor that he had an absolute title and that the vendee believed he was acquiring an absolute title. I do not think that the omission to make such definite allegations is of much importance. It is said that the conduct of the vendee under Exhibit I shows that he had not purchased an absolute right. The consideration for Exhibit A, it is pointed out, was only Rs. 1,000, whereas the consideration for the absolute sale-deed was only Rs. 1,500 and this included certain rent decrees which had been transferred. Again eighteen years afterwards in 1897 when the property must have increased in value, the vendee's widow sold it for Rs. 1,500 under Exhibit II. There is undoubtedly some force in these contentions, but we do not know what the reasons were which led the vendee's widow to sell the property for what was apparently less than its value. On the other hand, Exhibit A, which was handed over with Exhibit I, is styled a sale-deed (the word absolutely in line 16 at page 1 of the select documents does not appear in the original), though it is now found that the document was a mortgage by conditional sale. The period for redemption fixed in Exhibit A (30th May 1876) had expired when Exhibit I was executed and the vendee would naturally suppose that he was purchasing an absolute title. I do not think that the plaintiff on whom the burden apparently lies has proved his case. I would accordingly return a finding that the executant of Exhibit I intended to transfer an absolute interest, and that the intention of the parties was that there should be an absolute transfer of title of the property.

This second appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the finding of the lower Appellate Court upon the issue referred by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following JUDGMENT.—We accept the finding and dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

M.C.P.

COURT OF THE FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER, PUNJAB.

REVENUE REVISION No 60 of 1917-18.

March 2, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Maynard, F. C.

Pir MULK SHAH—PLAINTIFF

—APPLICANT

versus

NATHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 19—Appraisement proceedings—Consent of landlord or tenant, whether necessary—Refusal of tenant to accept appraisement, effect of—Omission of Revenue Officer to vary or confirm appraisement—Financial Commissioner's Standing Order No. 2, para. 12, object of.

The consent of neither landlord nor tenant is necessary for the validity of appraisement proceedings under Chapter II of the Punjab Tenancy Act. [p. 982, col. 2.]

The refusal by a tenant to accept the result of an appraisement is not an adequate reason for declining to confirm it under section 19 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act. [p. 981, col. 2.]

MOLK SHAH V. NATHU.

The failure by a Revenue Officer to give effect to the direction contained in section 19 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, which requires him to make an order either confirming or varying an appraisal, does not affect the admissibility or the value of the evidence contained in the appraisal record. [p. 981, col. 1.]

In suits for the value of produce rents there is no conclusive presumption that produce calculated according to the Financial Commissioner's instructions in paragraph 12 in Standing Order No. 2 is the actual produce of the particular land in the particular harvest in suit. [p. 982, col. 1.]

The object of the executive instructions there given is to provide the Revenue Courts with a means of calculating the probable produce and its probable selling value, from the records of crop inspection, the Settlement Officer's estimate of average outturns and other available sources, in those cases in which reliable evidence of the actual produce and actual selling price is not available. [p. 982, col. 1.]

Revision from the order of the Commissioner, Rawalpindi, dated the 19th October 1917.

Mr. Badr-ud-Din, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Diwan Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this group of cases, Nos. 60 to 62, I have heard Counsel for both the parties. The facts are these. The landlord applied for appraisal of the produce, which was made accordingly by Abdulla Khan, Zaildar. There is no suggestion that the appraiser acted otherwise than honestly and with due care. The Revenue Officer should thereupon have made an order, under section 19 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, either confirming or varying the appraisal. He omitted to do so. This was a grave omission, but there is no reason why either of the parties should suffer by reason of the remissness of the Revenue Officer, and the appraisal proceedings can be, and ought to be, considered on their merits, notwithstanding the absence of formal confirmation.

The appraisal took place on April 9th, a date on which it is reasonably to be supposed that, in the Gujrat district, all the principal crops were still standing, and that a capable appraiser, acting in good faith, would have no difficulty in appraising them accurately. There is a subsequent suggestion, in the course of the hearing of the present suits before the Naib Tahsildar, that certain crops had already been cut. Senji, khawid, coriander seed and sounf are specially mentioned. It is quite possible that some crops had already been cut for green fodder. But, if this was so, it was fair, having regard to section 16 of the Act, to assume that the produce was as full as the fullest crop of the same description on similar land in the neighbourhood for that harvest. The areas sown with spices were very small.

There is a note on the appraisal proceedings which appears to show that the Revenue Officer omitted to pass an order under section 19 (2) because the tenant did not accept the appraisal. It is sufficient to say here that the refusal by a tenant to accept the result of an appraisal is not an adequate reason for declining to confirm it. If it were an adequate reason for declining, it would always be in the power of a tenant to stultify appraisal proceedings by merely objecting to them. This is not the intention of the law.

The Naib-Tahsildar did not give a decree for the value of the produce on the basis of the appraisal: but made a calculation of his own, by adding 50 per cent. on some not clearly defined principle, to the normal or average rates (which are intended for application when there is no means of ascertaining the actual produce of a particular harvest). To the result thus obtained he added one anna in the rupee on account of malikana, which is due at the rate of $12\frac{1}{2}$ topas per man of the produce.

On appeal the Collector, again ignoring the appraisal, which he refers to only to say that it was not accepted by the tenants, made a fresh calculation of his own, in which he omitted, apparently by inadvertence, the item of $12\frac{1}{2}$ topas per man for malikana. He observed that the Rabi of 1916 was a very poor one (though the Naib-Tahsildar had definitely found that on this particular area it was the best harvest for six years). He also drew an inference, unfavourable to the landlord, from the fact that he had not attended on the land to take his share of the produce, although served with a notice to do so. On this point there is some obvious misapprehension. The proceedings were for appraisal and not for the division of the produce, and were already complete before the tenants asked that the landlord should be required to attend to receive his share. On further appeal, the Commissioner observed that the rates awarded by the Naib-Tahsildar were excessive, because they were not in accordance with "the normal rates laid down in the Financial Commissioner's circular, by which such cases are governed." The reference here is to paragraph 12 of the Financial Commissioner's Standing Order No. 2 and to certain paragraphs of the Land Administration Manual there referred to. The object of the executive instructions there given is to provide the Revenue Courts with a means of calculating the probable produce and its probable selling value, from the records of crop inspection, the Settlement Officer's estimate of average outturns and other available sources, in those cases in which reliable evidence of the actual produce and actual selling price is not available. The Courts generally have to calculate the amount and cash value of rents in kind after a crop has been removed, and the oral evidence which is adduced on such subjects is coloured by the predilections of the witnesses. It is, therefore, essential that they should be supplied with the means of arriving at a reasonably equitable estimate, even though it be an estimate for an average or normal crop rather than for the actual particular crop which is the subject of litigation. But if the actual particular crop has been seen on the spot and appraised by a reliable and qualified appraiser, there is no reason for having recourse to a calculation of the kind which is inevitable when no evidence of this character is available.

MULK SHAH V. NATRU.

But in legal form, the mistake made by the lower Courts is this. They have created a conclusive presumption in favour of a calculation, made on the basis of certain executive instructions which were drawn up to help the Courts to frame a reasonably equitable estimate of produce rents in cases in which reliable evidence of actual produce and actual value is not forthcoming: and have conceived themselves precluded from accepting evidence of the actual produce, because it involved a departure from that calculation. But there is no conclusive presumption in favour of the calculation for which the Financial Commissioner's executive instructions provide. There is only a conventional presumption in favour of its accuracy, when reliable evidence of the particular crop cannot be had.

In the present case the evidence, which deserved most weight and which would have been followed but for mistakes in the application of the law, was the record of the appraisement. The mistakes were these. In the first place, it was held that an appraisement under Chapter II of the Punjab Tenancy Act is not valid unless the tenants assent to it, whereas the assent of neither landlord nor tenant is essential to its validity. In the second place, it was held by implication that the record contained in the appraisement proceedings was not admissible in evidence, or at all events not worthy of credence: and it was also held, by implication, that there is a conclusive presumption, in suits for the value of produce rents, that produce calculated according to the Financial Commissioner's instructions in paragraph 12 in Standing Order No. 2 is the actual produce of the particular land in the particular harvest in suit. It is true that the Revenue Officer, dealing with the appraisement proceeding, failed to give effect to the direction in section 19 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, which requires him to make an order either confirming or varying the appraisement. But this omission did not affect the admissibility or the value of the evidence contained in the appraisement record.

Following the appraisement and adding one anna in the rupee on account of the malikana due, I accept the applications in cases Nos. 60, 61, 62, and give amended decrees as follows:—

No. 60 (Original Case No. 22) Rs. 26-0-0,
No. 61 (Original Case No. 23) Rs. 100-2-0,
No. 62 (Original Case No. 21) Rs. 30-6-1, with the costs of the present proceedings in favour of the applicant.

Revision accepted.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. SIBAPROSAD JANA.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 461
OF 1915.

August 27, 1917.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

SIBAPROSAD JANA—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Lease, construction of—Covenant for renewal—Admission of Pleader on point of law, whether binding on party.

Where on a settlement made by the Government the grantee executed a Kabuliyat containing the following clause:—"If I agree to the enhanced rent to be fixed at the time of the next settlement in future, the Government shall have the power to settle the lands with me, or if I do not agree then with others":

Held, that the clause in the lease was in essence a covenant for renewal, under which the lessee became entitled to obtain a renewal of the lease on the same terms as were contained in the original lease, except as to the amount of rent and the covenant for renewal, and that according to the true construction of the original lease the term of the renewed lease would continue till the completion of the next periodical settlement by Government. [p. 984, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where in a suit to obtain a re-settlement the right of the plaintiff to obtain a fresh lease was conceded by the defendant's Pleader in the trial Court:

Held, that it was competent to the defendant's Pleader to urge in the Appellate Court that the plaintiff was not entitled to a re-settlement as a matter of right, as an erroneous admission by a Pleader on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude a party from claiming his legal rights in the Appellate Court. [p. 983, col. 2; p. 984, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Midnapur, dated the 13th July 1915.

Babu Ram Charan Mitra, for the Appellant.

Babus Biraj Mohan Mojumdar and Kshirod Narayan Bhuiya, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the Secretary of State for India in Council from the decree in a suit instituted by the respondent to obtain a lease from Government in respect of the lands described in the schedule to the plaint. The facts material for the investigation of the rights of the parties are not in dispute at this stage. On the 5th August 1878 a settlement was made with one Radhika Prasanna Chandra (the predecessor of the plaintiff) for a term of 22 years on a progressive rate of rent from 1285 to 1306. The kabuliyat executed by the grantee contained a covenant to the following effect:

"If I agree to the enhanced rent to be fixed at the time of the next Settlement in future, the Government shall have the power to settle the lands with me, or if I do not agree, then with others."

When the term of the lease expired in the year 1900, the Settlement operations were still in progress, and annual leases, renewed from year to year, were granted to the successor-in-interest of the original lessee. The last of these annual leases was executed on the 18th January 1909, and was to remain in force from the 1st April 1909 to the 31st March 1910. The Settlement operations were concluded during the course of the year just mentioned, though the Record of Rights was not finally published till the 30th June 1910. The plaintiff thereupon unsuccessfully endeavoured to obtain a re-settlement on the same terms as were embodied in the initial lease of the 5th August 1878 except as to the amount of rent payable; the result was that the plaintiff instituted this suit on the 1st March 1913. In the Court below, it was not seriously denied that the plaintiff was entitled to a re-settlement; the controversy really centred round the terms on which the re-settlement should be made, specially whether there should or should not be a covenant for renewal in the new lease. The Subordinate Judge has held that the plaintiff is entitled to obtain a lease for a period of 22 years from the date of execution of the document, containing all the terms of the lease of the 5th August 1878, with the exception of the covenant for renewal. The defendant has appealed to this Court.

In support of the appeal, the Government Pleader has urged that the plaintiff is not entitled as a matter of right to a re-settlement. Notwithstanding the fact that the right of the plaintiff to obtain a fresh lease was conceded in the Court below, it is unquestionably competent to the Government Pleader to take up this line of argument, because as ruled by the Judicial Committee in Jolendramohun Tagore v. Ganendra.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. SIBAPROSAD JANA.

mohun Tagore (1) and Beni Pershad Kocri v. Dudhnath Roy (2), an erroneous admission by a Counsel on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude the party from claiming his legal rights in the Appellate Court. [Holms v. Johnston (3), Mitchell v. Cotten (4), L'equhart v. Butterfield (5), Abdullah Sarkar v. Asraf Ali Mandal (6) and Ramsaran Singh v. Khakhan Singh (7)]. We must consequently consider, whether the plaintiff is entitled to obtain a lease from the Government in respect of the disputed lands. We are of opinion that this question should be answered in the affirmative. In the first place, it is plain that the clause in the lease set out above is in essence a covenant for renewal. It would be meaningless to hold that it was intended merely to confer an authority upon the Government to grant a fresh lease. In the absence of such a clause, the grantor would have been at liberty, on the expiry of the lease, to make a fresh settlement at his choice subject to the provisions of Regulation VII of 1822. The obvious intention was that if the grantee was willing to take a fresh lease at the enhanced rent, he should be entitled to do so. This view is in accord with that adopted in the case of Secretary of State v. Forbes (8) and Lani Mia v. Muhammad Easin Mia (9). Consequently, when the term of the first lease expired in 1900, the lessee was in a position to enforce the covenant for renewal. The fact that the lease was not renewed at that time may, in the absence of an explanation, raise a presumption that the lessee abandoned his right in this respect. But the undisputed circumstances of the case leave no room for doubt that the lease was not renewed at that time because the Settlement operations had not been concluded and the amount of the enhanced rent could not accordingly be determined. The lease was thus renewed from year to year at the original rate of rent, and this continued up to the time of the completion of the Settlement proceedings. We can see no escape from the position that at that stage the lessee became entitled to obtain a renewal of the lease on the same terms as were contained in the original lease, except as to the amount of rent and the covenant for renewal, as explained in the case of Secretary of State v. Forbes (8). His right in this respect was in force at the date of the institution of the suit and the decree must be made accordingly. The Subordinate Judge, however, has made a decree for a lease for 22 years from the date of the execution of the lease. On a true interpretation of the original lease we are of opinion that that lease was essentially for the term of the rent then fixed in the Settlement proceedings. The intention plainly was that the lease should continue so long as the rent was not altered by a Survey and Settlement proceeding, and this happened to be a period of 22 years. Much confusion will obviously result if a lease is now granted for 22 years at the rent fixed at the last Settlement and a new rent roll is prepared during the currency of the lease. The decree of the Subordinate Judge must accordingly be modified by the substitution of the words "for the period extending from the 1st April 1910 till the completion of the next periodical Settlement and at the rent assessed at the last Settlement minus a profit of 20 per cent. and" in place of the words "for a period of 22 years from the date of the execution of the patta by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff," and further by omitting the words "for a term of 22 years." As the appeal has succeeded only in part, there will be no order for costs in this Court. A self-contained decree will be drawn up in this Court.

Appeal partly allowed.

(1) 9 B. L. R. 377; 1 A. Sup. Vol 47; 18 W. R. 359; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 692; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 82.

(2) 27 C. 156 at p. 163; 26 I. A. 216; 4 C. W. N. 274 7 Sar. P. C. J. 580. 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 103.

(3) (1873) 12 Heisk (59 Tenn) 155.

(4) (1860) 3 Fla. 134.

(5) (1888) 37 Ch. D. 357; 57 L. J. Ch. 521; 57 L. T. 780; 36 W. R. 376.

(6) 7 C. L. J. 152 at p. 162.

(7) 11 C. W. N. 340.

(8) 17 Ind. Cns. 180; 16 C. L. J. 217.

(9) 33 Ind. Cns. 448; 20 C. W. N. 948.

DHARAM DAS v. PIYARE LAL.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 778 OF 1916.

January 7, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

DHARM DAS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

PIYARE LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 23. Re-construction involving change in situation of roshandans, whether fresh easement—Building up wall so as to block roshandans—Injunction, suit for, whether maintainable.

A re-construction of a house involving a change in the situation of the roshandans does not mean a fresh easement requiring a fresh period of 20 years for its acquisition.

Plaintiff sued for the issue of a mandatory injunction to the defendants that they should demolish a wall built by them. It appeared that the plaintiff had re-constructed his house and had changed the position of his parwalas and roshandans. Defendants had thereafter built up their wall so as to block these parwalas and roshandans.

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief claimed.

Bai Hariganga v. Tricamial, 26 B. 374; 4 Bom. L. R. 34, dissented from.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 5th February 1916, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Rohtak, dated the 9th March 1915, passing a decree in favour of plaintiff for Rs. 100, and dismissing the rest of the claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellants.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts are given in the judgments of the lower Courts. I had hoped that the parties being neighbours would be able to come to some amicable conclusions which would avoid future disputes, but they cannot agree.

The District Judge inspected the spot, and an affidavit has been put in that he did so before more than a portion of plaintiff's western wall had been dismantled, so he could say that the parwalas and roshandans which he saw were old, though, of course, mere inspection would not enable him to say they were 20 years' old.

The sale-deed of 1877 mentions parwalgah and daricha; this does not make it clear whether singular or plural is mentioned. This sale was followed by a pre-emption suit, which failed. There was a plan filed in that suit which according to Mr. Shafi shewed only one parwala. I have looked at that plan, but am unable to say definitely whether it shews any parwalas at all, though a mciri is shewn though undoubtedly there was at least one parwala then. Now we find six parwalas and four roshandans and no proof of any modern construction. In fact there seems to be nothing to shew that there has been any alteration in the construction since 1877 till just before this suit, when plaintiff began to re-construct the present wall.

GAURI SAHAI v. A. C. BAHREE.

As to the argument that any re-construction involving any change in the situation of the roshandans means a fresh easement and a commencement of a fresh period of 20 years, Counsel refers me to Bai Hariganga v. Tricamial (1). But a different view seems to have been taken in Framji Shapurji v. Framji Edulji (2); and with all due respect I think the argument about different "cones of light" seems rather a legal quibble. I am unable then to hold that the lower Appellate Court's decision is incorrect. As to the form of the decree I should have liked, if possible, to re-model it so as to define exactly what plaintiff could or could not do, as I fear there will be more trouble, but the parties cannot agree on anything and I cannot venture without having seen the premises to lay down what limits should be left. But it seems clear that defendant cannot build as he has done right up against plaintiff's wall so as to block his parwalas and roshandans, and so, I think, plaintiff was entitled to the decree which has been given.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 26 B. 374; 4 Bom. L. R. 34.

(2) 7 Bom. L. R. 73.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 148 OF 1917.

March 19, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr.

Justice Abdul Raoof.

GAURI SAHAI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

A. C. BAHREE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Allahabad High Court Rules (Civil) for Subordinate

SAKHIUDDIN SAHA V. SONAULLA SARKAR.

Courts, Ch. XXI, rr. 21, 25—Plaint returned for presentation to proper Court—Pleader's fee, calculation of, basis of.

Plaintiff filed a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court. The defendant pleaded that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. This issue was taken up first at the request of the plaintiff and decided in favour of the defendant. The Court ordered the plaint to be returned and awarded the defendant his costs. In drawing up the decree the Pleader's fee was calculated at 5 per cent. according to rule 21 of Chapter XXI of the General Rules (Civil) for the Subordinate Courts.

Held, that the suit having been decided on contest and on the merits of the contest so far as that contest went, rule 21 applied to the case and the fee was properly calculated.

First appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Budaun.

Mr. Lakshmi Narain, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nehal Chandra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are simple. The plaintiff-appellant filed a suit against the defendant. Notice was issued, a written statement filed and issues were framed. One of the issues raised the question of the jurisdiction of the Court. It was pleaded by the defendant that the learned Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to try the suit. This issue was taken up first at the request of the plaintiff and decided in favour of the defendant. The Court ordered the plaint to be returned and awarded the defendant his costs. In drawing up the decree the Pleader's fee was calculated at 5 per cent. according to rule 21 of Chapter XXI of the General Rules (Civil) for the Subordinate Courts. The plaintiff objected on the ground that this rule did not apply but that rule 25 of that Chapter did apply. The lower Court has held that the case falls within rule 21. On behalf of the appellant it is urged that the case was not decided on the merits; but it was clearly decided after contest and on the merits of the contest, so far as that contest went. We do not think that rule 25, which applies to appeals from orders and other cases, is intended to cover a case of the present kind. In our opinion rule 21 clearly applies in this case. There is, therefore, no force in the appeal. We accordingly dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 230 OF 1915.

February 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson
and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

SAKHIUDDIN SAHA AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SONAULLA SARKAR AND OTHERS

-- DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage, suit on—Co-mortgagees, interests of, whether severable—Estoppel. Some co-mortgagees precluded from enforcing their rights—Rights of others—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Transfer of mortgage-debt—Registration, whether necessary.

In equity co-mortgagees are presumably tenants-in-common of the mortgage debt and their interests are severable or partible among themselves; so that one of them can sue on the mortgage provided those who are unwilling to be joined as plaintiffs are made defendants. [p. 987, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where some of several co-mortgagees have by their conduct precluded themselves on the ground of estoppel from enforcing their rights under the mortgage against purchasers of a portion of the mortgaged property and a puisne mortgagee of the remainder, it is open to the Court to sever their interests from those of the other co-mortgagees who are under no disability or disqualification and to make a decree in favour of the latter in proportion to their interests in the mortgage-debt. [p. 987, col. 2.]

A mortgage-debt is immoveable property both for the purposes of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act and for the purposes of section 17 of the Registration Act. [p. 988, col. 2.]

Where a mortgage-debt is transferred by an instrument in writing and the value of the right, title and interest transferred is Rs 100 or more, the writing requires registration under the Registration Act. [p. 988, col. 2; p. 989, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Rungpur, dated the 7th November 1914, affirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Court, Rungpur, dated the 16th August 1913.

Babu Atul Chandra Gupta, for the Appellants.

Babu Satya Charan Sinha for Babu Jitendra Nath Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—This is a suit brought by the plaintiffs as mortgagees to enforce their security. Plaintiff No. 12 is one of the two original mortgagees and plaintiffs Nos. 1—11 are the heirs and the successors of the other. The defendants Nos. 1—3 are the mortgagors. Subsequent to the mortgage defendants Nos. 4, 5 and 6 purchased a portion of the mortgaged property and defendant No. 7 took a puisne mortgage of the remainder. In connection with these transactions, however, it has been found, and cannot now be disputed, that the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 12 led the defendants Nos. 4—7 to believe that the whole property was unencumbered. The position, therefore, is that the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 12 are precluded by the doctrine of estoppel from setting up their rights under the prior mortgage as against those defendants.

SAKHIUDDIN SAHA v. SONAULLA SARKAR.

In that state of things the Courts below have concurred, in dismissing the suit so far as the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 12 are concerned and in making in favour of the remaining plaintiffs a mortgage decree in the usual form entitling them to sell the whole of the mortgaged property in satisfaction of their share of the original mortgage debt.

The plaintiffs have appealed to this Court and the first point which arises is free from difficulty.

As regards the defendants Nos. 4 to 6, who took an apparently absolute title to the portion of the property which they purchased, the claim of the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 12 has been rightly dismissed. But as regards the defendant No. 7 the effect of the estoppel, under section 78 of the Transfer of Property Act, is to postpone them (in respect of their share of the original debt) to that defendant. As between the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 12 and the defendant No. 7, therefore, the suit should not be dismissed and the decree should declare that the property mortgaged to the defendant No. 7 is hypothecated to the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 12 for their share of the original mortgage-debt and that their rights as mortgagees are postponed to those of the defendant No. 7. The decrees of the Courts below will be modified accordingly.

The further contention on behalf of the plaintiffs, who may be described as innocent plaintiffs, that they are in a position to demand that a decree should be made in favour of the mortgagees as a body for the whole of the mortgage-debt, is untenable. Nor are we obliged to tell the defendants Nos. 4—7 that their only remedy lies in an action for deceit. In equity co-mortgagees are presumably tenants-in-common of the mortgage-debt and their interests are severable or partible among themselves. One of them can sue on the mortgage, provided those who are unwilling to be joined as plaintiffs are made defendants. Davenport v. James (1). There is nothing to take the present case out of the general rule. The innocent plaintiffs are not damaged by the way in which the case has been dealt with. Some of the mortgagees have by their conduct precluded themselves from enforcing their rights under the mortgage, and it was open to the Court to sever their interests from those of the mortgagees who were under no disability or disqualification and to make a decree in favour of the latter in proportion to their interest in the debt.

The contention last dealt with has been advanced solely for the purpose of evading the ruling of the Courts below on another question which has given rise to some discussion before us. The two original mortgagees were brothers and they each had an eight-annas share in the mortgage. It is said that there was a partition of the joint property by which the bond in suit was allotted to the deceased brother, the predecessor of the plaintiffs Nos. 1—11. On that footing the plaintiff No. 12 was in the first instance made a defendant. He was made a plaintiff by direction of the learned Munsif when he found that the partition had not been proved, a finding which has been affirmed by the learned Subordinate Judge. The objection taken is that in dealing with this part of the case the Courts below have wrongly refused to receive in evidence two documents by which the partition of the bonds in which the brothers had a joint interest was effected. These documents are not registered and have been rejected on that ground on the authority of Upendra Nath Banerjee v. Unnes Chandra Banerjee (2), where it was held that a deed of partition, either declaring certain rights over immoveable property or reciting the allotment of lands and containing an agreement to act accordingly, is compulsorily registrable. In my opinion the rejection of these documents has, as the language of the two judgments shows, largely influenced the conclusion at which the Courts below have arrived on the question of partition or no partition. If the Subordinate Judge intended to say that even if these documents be taken into account, the partition is not proved, he has not expressed himself very happily. The point raised, therefore, seems to me to require consideration.

(1) (1847) 7 Hare 249; 12 Jur. 827; 68 E. R. 102; 82 R. R. 98.

(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 346; 12 C. L. J. 25; 15 C. W. N. 375.

SAKHIUDDIN SAHA V. SONALLA SARKAR.

It is contended for the plaintiffs that the case cited below has no application, because the transfer of a simple mortgage such as the bond in suit or a share in such a mortgage is not a transfer of immoveable property within the meaning of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act, and the document by which the transfer is effected is not a document which purports or operates "to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish, whether in present or in future any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent ...to or in immoveable property" within the meaning of section 17 (b) of the Indian Registration Act.

In support of this contention it is said that the transfer of a simple mortgage is merely the transfer of a debt on which the security is attendant, the security passing to the transferee with the debt under section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act.

For authority, reference is made to Gous Mahomed v. Khawas Ali Khan (3), Baij Nath Lohea v. Binoyendra Nath Palit (4) and Ham Ratan Chuckerbutty v. Jogesh Chandra Bhattacharya (5). These cases are perhaps not entirely consistent with the earlier decision of this Court in Koob Lall Chowdhry v. Nittyanund Singh (6) or with the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Abdul Majid v. Muhammad Raizullah (7). However that may be, they relate to the transfer of mortgage decrees and the considerations which apply to such transfers may not be altogether applicable to the transfer of mortgage bonds. Order XXI, rule 16, of the Civil Procedure Code appears to contemplate the transfer of a decree "by assignment in writing," though the Code does not say whether the writing must be registered when the decree transferred is a mortgage decree.

(3) 23 C. 450; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 300.

(4) 6 C. W. N. 5.

(5) 12 C. W. N. 625.

(6) 9 C. 834; 12 C. L. R. 333; 8 Ind. Jur. 38; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1208.

(7) 13 A. 89; A. W. N. (1860) 186; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 55.

If, therefore, we confine ourselves to transfers of mortgage bonds or mortgages, it has first to be noticed that "a debt secured by mortgage of immoveable property" is expressly excluded from the definition of "actionable claim" added to section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act by the Amending Act of 1900 (Act No. 11 of 1900). And inasmuch as section 8 of the Act speaks of "a debt or other actionable claim" (in the clause which deals with the passing of the securities therefor), section 8 can be of no assistance to the appellants for the present purpose, though in other connections the principle underlying the section will, no doubt, be applicable (Ghose's Law of Mortgage in India, 7th Edition, Volume I, pages 70, 71, and Volume II, page 667).

The transfer of actionable claims is governed by section 130 of the Act which requires the execution of an instrument in writing signed by the transferor or his duly authorized agent, and it can hardly be supposed that debts secured by mortgages of immoveable property were excluded from the definition of actionable claims in order that they might pass by word of mouth without any writing. The inference would seem to be that the Legislature regarded such debts as immoveable property within the definition in section 3 (25) of the General Clauses Act of 1897. "Immoveable property" shall include land, benefits to arise out of land, and things attached to the earth, or permanently fastened to anything attached to the earth." For the purposes of the Transfer of Property Act that definition is only qualified by the clause in section 3 of that Act which says that "immoveable property" does not include standing timber, growing crops or grass."

And if a mortgage-debt is within the definition of immoveable property in the General Clauses Act, it is also within the definition of such property in section 2 (6) of the Registration Act of 1908.

It would follow that a mortgage-debt is immoveable property both for the purposes of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act and for the purposes of section 17 (b) of the Registration Act.

If that be the true view, it would be sufficient in the case before us to say that where a mortgage-debt is transferred by an instrument in writing and the value of the right, title or interest transferred is one hundred rupees or more, the writing requires registration under the Registration Act.

LAJJA RAM v. NARINJAN LAL.

In the work already referred to the learned author remarks, quite generally and without reference to any statutory definition, that "whatever may be the form of the mortgage, it operates as a transfer of an interest in the land which is given as security." (The Law of Mortgages in India, 4th Edition, Volume I, page 72.) If a mortgage, even a simple mortgage, creates an interest in land, its transfer must be the transfer of an interest in land. In the Second Volume of the same work at page 729, it is said that "a mortgage on land is immovable property" and reference is made to Hoyles, In re; Row v. Jagg (8).

The learned Pleader for the plaintiff cited the cases of Malcolm v. Charlesworth (9) and Gresham Life Assurance Society v. Crowther (10). But those cases turn on the provisions of an English Statute which permit the registration of assurances by which lands are "affected," and have no application to the different language of the Indian Registration Act.

The conclusion at which I arrive is that the cases on which the learned Pleader relies are at any rate distinguishable and that the Courts below have taken a correct view of the requirements of the Registration Act. We are not referred to any decision of this Court precisely in point, but the conclusion is supported by the ruling of the Bombay High Court in Ganpat Pandurang v. Adarji Dadabhai (11) and see also Joharmal v. Tejram Jagrup (12).

The result is that in my opinion subject to the modification above directed the decrees of the Courts below should be affirmed and the appeal dismissed. The appellants having substantially failed, the respondents are entitled to their costs of the appeal.

(8) (1911) 1 Ch. 179; 80 L. J. Ch. 274; 103 L. T. 817; 55 S. J. 169; 27 T. L. R. 131.

(9) (1836) 1 Keen 63; 43 E. R. 230; 44 R. R. 19.

(10) (1915) 1 Ch. 214 at p. 225; 84 L. J. Ch. 312.

(11) 3 B. 312; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 209.

(12) 17 B. 235 at p. 252; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 154.

BZACHCROFT, J.—I agree that the appeal should be dismissed subject to the modification in the decree proposed by my learned brother for the reason given by him.

But I express no opinion on the question whether the learned Subordinate Judge was right in his view on the question of registration for, as I understand his judgment, he finds as a fact that no partition was made between Bhetu and Netu, whether the evidence which he holds to be inadmissible be excluded from or taken into consideration.

Appeal dismissed; Decree varied.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2361 OF 1917.

May 6, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

LAJJA RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

NARINJAN LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by father—Suit by son for cancellation of deed—Antecedent debt—Family necessity.

Plaintiff sued for cancellation of two mortgage-deeds and a lease alleged to have been illegally executed by his father in favour of defendant. The 1st Court holding that the alienations were tainted with immorality and were not for any family necessity, cancelled the alienations. On appeal the District Judge held that it was not proved that the executant was leading an immoral life and that the debts were not tainted with immorality and dismissed the suit. On second appeal to the Chief Court:

Held, that it was necessary for the lower Appellate Court to decide, whether the debts in question were raised by the executant for some family necessity or to meet antecedent debts and to see whether the antecedency of the debts was real or merely a cover for what was essentially a breach of trust. [p. 990, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 21st June 1917, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Karnal, dated the 18th August 1916, decreeing half of the claim in favour of Lajja Ram only.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Manohar Lal and Lala Jagan Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which the present appeal arises was brought by Lajja Ram, son of Narinjan Lal and by two widows for cancellation of two mortgages and lease executed by Narinjan Lal in favour of Kasturi Mal, defendant No. 2. The first Court held that Narinjan Lal was profligate, that the alienations were tainted with immorality and were not for any family necessity. It cancelled the alienations qua Lajja Ram's half share, and in respect of Narinjan Lal's half share it held that Lajja Ram could redeem that share on payment of Rs. 100 only. It dismissed the suit of the two females. Both parties appealed to the District Judge, who held that it was not proved that Narinjan Lal was leading an immoral life, that the debts were not tainted with immorality and were not such as the plaintiffs could object to. He, therefore, dismissed the plaintiffs' suit with costs. The plaintiffs have filed a second appeal to this Court, though at the hearing it was admitted that the female plaintiffs had no right to sue and the appeal was pressed as regards Lajja Ram only.

LAJJA RAM V. NARINJAN LAL.

The main point urged on behalf of the appellant is that the District Judge was not right in dismissing plaintiffs' suit merely on the ground that the debts were not incurred for immoral purposes and that he should have come to a finding as to whether they were raised for the payment of just antecedent debts or to meet family necessities. In support of this contention Counsel referred to Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad (1) and Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (2). The case reported as Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad (1) was decided by a Full Bench of five Judges, the majority of whom held that a creditor suing to enforce against the sons a mortgage executed by the father in a joint Hindu family over the joint family property is bound to prove that the loan secured by such mortgage was taken to satisfy an antecedent debt or was justified by some family necessity, or at least that he had before advancing the loan made inquiries which reasonably led to the belief that the loan was required for family necessities or to pay off an antecedent debt. This view of the majority of the Full Bench was approved by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (2). On the question of antecedent debt the following passage occurs at page 449* of the report:—

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 31 A. 176; 6 A. L. J. 263.
 (2) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.)

"The argument in support of the validity of the mortgage also took this shape. It was said:—'What difference would it make if the father had contracted the debt an hour, a day, a year before granting the mortgage? Then de facto it would be an antecedent debt, and the creditor would have a mortgage good upon that ground.' Their Lordships cannot assent to any such proposition that a mortgage on the family estate would follow the loan. The case as put up might instantly raise the presumption that what occurred was substantially this: that the father contracted the debt knowing that he was at the end of his personal resources and that the creditor advanced the money relying upon an understanding or agreement, express or implied, given to the father. In truth, in order to validate such a transaction of mortgage there must, to give true effect to the doctrine of antecedency in time, be also real dissociation in fact. The Courts in India, wherever such antecedency is found to be unreal and is merely a cover for what is essentially a breach of trust, will not be slow to deny effect to a mortgage so brought into existence."

It was, therefore, necessary in the present case for the lower Appellate Court to decide whether the debts in question were raised by Narinjan Lal for some family necessity or to meet antecedent debts and having regard to the previous litigation between him and Kasturi Mal and to the remarks of the first Court in regard to his extravagance, it was necessary to examine the debts very carefully and to see whether the antecedency of the debts was real or, in the words of their Lordships of the Privy Council, merely a cover for what was essentially a breach of trust.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court remand the case thereto for re-decision of the appeal with reference to the authorities above cited.

Appeal accepted; Case sent back.

HAMIDA BIBI V. FATIMA BIBI.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 70 OF 1917.

March 18, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr.
Justice Abdul Raof.

HAMIDA BIBI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

FATIMA BIBI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 14—Exclusion of time spent in bona fide proceeding in Court not having jurisdiction—Due diligence—Delay, effect of.

A decree for rent was obtained against two co-tenants of a holding and was satisfied by one of them on 9th August 1910. On 20th May 1913 the latter instituted a suit for contribution against the other co-tenant in the Small Cause Court which, holding that it had no jurisdiction to try the suit, directed the return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court on 27th November 1913. The plaintiff refused to take back the plaint and lodged a revision in the High Court on 19th February 1914, which was dismissed on 16th March 1915. On 15th June 1915 she applied for the return of the plaint which was returned on the 30th June 1915, on which day she presented it in the Court of the Munsif:

Held, that even if it were assumed that the plaintiff was entitled to exclude the period from the 20th May 1913 to the 16th March 1915, she could not in any case be allowed to exclude the period between the 16th March and the 30th June under section 14 of the Limitation Act, inasmuch as she did not prosecute her suit with due diligence in view of the fact that she waited for three months after the dismissal of her application for revision before she asked for the return of the plaint and that, therefore, the suit was barred by time.

Held, further, that the plaintiff was not justified in refusing to take back the plaint from the Court of Small Causes merely because she wished to file a revision in the High Court, inasmuch as if she had taken back the plaint her action could not have prejudiced her application for revision and, on the other hand, she would have been able to present the plaint in the proper Court immediately on the dismissal of the application.

First appeal from an order of the Subordinate, Judge, Allahabad.

Mr. Mukhtar Ahmad (for Mr. Haidar Mehdi), for the Appellants.

Mr. S. M. Sulaiman (with him Mr. Lalit Mohan Banerji), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order of remand passed by the Court below. The question was one of limitation and application of section 14 of the Limitation Act. The parties to this suit were co tenants in a holding. A suit was brought against them for rent and a decree was obtained (against them jointly) on the 6th of July 1910. On the 19th of August 1910 the plaintiff paid the decretal debt. On the 20th May 1913, some ninety days before the expiry of the period of limitation which is fixed by Article 99 of the First Schedule, she instituted a suit in the Small Cause Court. An objection was taken that the Court had no jurisdiction, and on the 27th of November 1913, the Small Cause Court held that it had no jurisdiction and directed the plaintiff to take back the plaint and file it in the proper Court. The plaintiff refused to take back the plaint. On the 19th of February 1914, that is nearly ninety days after the order of the Small Cause Court, she filed an application in the High Court for revision of the order. This application was dismissed by this Court on the 16th of March 1915. The plaintiff then apparently took a rest. She waited until the 15th of June 1915, that is for full three months, and then applied to the Court for the return of the plaint. There was some delay and she received it on the 30th of June. On that same date she presented the plaint in the Court of the Munsif. The Court of first instance held that the suit was barred by limitation. The lower Appellate Court has allowed to the plaintiff the period from the 20th of May 1913 to the 30th of June 1915 under section 14 of the Limitation Act and has held that the suit is within time. Assuming without deciding that the period from the 27th of November 1913 to the 16th March 1915 may be allowed to the plaintiff under section 14 of the Act, we fail to see that she has been prosecuting her case with due diligence in view of the fact that she waited for three months after the dismissal of her application for revision before she asked for the return of the plaint. We also cannot agree that the plaintiff was justified in refusing to take back her plaint from the Court of Small Causes because she wished to file an application in revision to this Court. If she had taken back her plaint as she could easily have done without any prejudice to the prosecution of her revision, it would have been in her hands directly the revision was dismissed and she could have at once filed it in the Court of the Munsif. On the contrary she preferred to wait for three months before she asked for the return of it. We do not think that she is entitled to any allowance for any period after the 16th March 1915. If the period up to that time be allowed to her, her suit should have been filed on or before the 16th of June 1915. It was not so filed and we, therefore, agree with the Court of first instance that the suit is barred by limitation. We allow the appeal, set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the Court of first instance with costs in all Courts.

R. K. KAPUR v. SHANKAR DASS.

Appeal allowed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 3275 OF 1916.

April 25, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din.

R. K. KAPUR—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT
versus

SHANKAR DASS AND OTHERS—SURETIES—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 145—Surety making himself liable for decretal money in case dispute not settled—Suit compromised—Decree based on compromise, whether can be executed against surety.

In an application for execution of a decree against the sureties of the judgment-debtor, it appeared that the sureties had made themselves liable to pay the decretal amount only in case the defendants did not settle the dispute and judgment was passed against them, but that the plaintiff had entered into a compromise with the defendants according to which the latter had made themselves liable to pay the total amount of money claimed by the plaintiff by certain instalments set forth in the deed of compromise:

Held, that as the decree was passed on the basis of the compromise without any mention being made of the sureties, it could not be executed against them under the terms of the surety bond.

Miscellaneous second appeal from the order of the District Judge, Lahore, dated the 8th June 1916, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Lahore, dated the 7th October 1915, allowing the execution proceedings against the sureties.

Mr. Ganpat Rai, for the Appellant.

Lala Moti Sagar, R.S. (for Mr. Kirkpatrick), and Lala Tirath Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are very fully stated in the judgment of the learned District Judge and it is unnecessary to repeat them here. He has decided that the respondents are not liable to be proceeded against by the appellant as sureties for the judgment-debtors in execution of the decree dated the 28th July 1914, which the appellant had obtained against Jowahir Lal and Devi Dass upon the basis of a compromise. The District Judge has given several reasons in support of the view which he has taken; but it is unnecessary for me to deal with all the points discussed by him in his judgment, for I think that his decision can be supported solely on the ground that under the terms of the surety bond, dated the 9th July 1914, which was executed by the respondents in favour of the appellant, the latter, having compromised the claim with the original defendants Jowahir Lal and Devi Dass, is not entitled to execute the decree based on the compromise against the respondents under section 145, Civil Procedure Code. The relevant portion of the surety bond is this:—

Agar muda'a alaihim mudai ke sath faisla na karega aur niz adalat se muda'a alaihim ke bar-khilaf faisla hoga to ham har do samin zimmarwar hokar iqrar karte aur likh dete hain keh kul zar-i-dawa ma' kharcha ke zimmarwar hain.

(If the defendants do not settle the dispute with the plaintiff by compromise and if judgment be passed against the former by the Court, then we the sureties will both be liable, and promise that we will be responsible for the payment of the decretal money with costs.)

Now, it appears from the record that on the 28th July 1914 the plaintiff-appellant entered into a compromise with original defendants Jowahir Lal and Devi Dass, according to which the latter made themselves liable to pay the total amount of money claimed by the plaintiff-appellant by certain instalments which are set forth in the deed of compromise; and it was on the basis of this compromise that the Court passed a decree in favour of the appellant. No reference whatever was made to the respondents who had become sureties for the original defendants, and neither the judgment nor the decree of the Court makes any mention of them. It is quite clear to my mind, as the District Judge has held, that what was contemplated in the surety bond was that if the parties to the suit were to settle the matter by compromise they were not to be liable as sureties at all and that they would be so liable if the claim was contested in Court and a decree was passed after contest as the result of an independent judicial adjudication upon it. Since, therefore, the suit was settled by compromise, the sureties incurred no liability whatever for the satisfaction of the decree under the terms of the surety bond in question.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

JANGILAL v. EMPEROR.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 24 of 1918.

April 17, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Kotwal, A. J. C.

JANGILAL—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 350, 223, 224, 230, 233, 234, 346—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 420—Case transferred from one Magistrate to another—S. 350, applicability of—Trial de novo, whether can be claimed by accused—Estoppel—Intention of Counsel, expression of, in High Court not to claim trial de novo, whether estops accused from demanding trial de novo—Cheating, charge of—Omission to specify manner in which cheating effected, whether vitiates charge—Money delivered by some persons but contributed by several persons—Inducements offered to persons contributing—Separate offences—Misjoinder of charges.

The general rule is that the decision as to the innocence or guilt of an accused person must be by the Judge who has heard all the evidence. [p. 996, col. 2.]

Ladga v. Emperor, 1 N. L. R. 187 and Emperor v. Ramprasad, 36 Ind. Cas. 867, 18 Cr. L. J. 35, 12 N. L. R. 146, followed.

Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, introduces an exception to this general rule and the exception should not receive a more extended interpretation than its actual words clearly justify. [p. 996, col. 2.]

Mohesh Chandra Saha v. Emperor, 35 C. 457, 12 C. W. N. 416, 7 C. L. J. 488, 7 Cr. L. J. 220, Kudrutullah v. Emperor, 14 Ind. Cas. 314, 39 C. 781, 13 Cr. L. J. 218, Palaniandy Gounden v. Emperor, 1 Ind. Cas. 54, 32 M. 218, 5 M. L. T. 218, 9 Cr. L. J. 146 and Ram Dass v. Emperor, 44 Ind. Cas. 682, 16 A. L. J. 217, 19 Cr. L. J. 378, disapproved.

The applicant was challaned and convicted on three charges under section 420, Indian Penal Code, which were tried together under section 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code, on the allegation that in his capacity as a Revenue Inspector he cheated three persons by dishonestly inducing them to deliver to him sums of money collected by them from several others, they themselves contributing to the sums their own quota of subscriptions. The applicant under orders from the Tahsildar caused a list of the tenants of a certain village to be prepared, showing the amount each of the tenants would have to pay towards the War Loan. Sometime after he offered to some of them within the hearing of others to cut down the subscriptions to half if he was paid Rs. 2 a piece, and to omit altogether the names of persons who were to pay Rs. 7-12-0 if they paid him Rs. 1 each. The villagers were then told to bring the money and they met in two groups. Seven out of one group paid Rs. 2 each to K, who thus collected Rs. 16 including Rs. 2 of his own and paid the amount to the applicant, who made the necessary corrections in the list already prepared. Similarly C. collected Rs. 9 from 6 persons including himself out of the other group and paid it to the applicant who made corrections in the list as promised. The case was originally tried by the District Magistrate but on an application for transfer to the Judicial Commissioner it was sent to the file of a First Class Magistrate in the same District. In the course of his arguments in the proceedings under the transfer application the applicant's Counsel expressed his intention not to apply for a re-hearing of the case. The Magistrate, to whose file the case was transferred, held that this constituted a waiver on the part of the accused and consequently refused to grant the prayer of the applicant for a trial de novo. On appeal the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and sentence on one charge only and upheld those on the other two. The applicant urged amongst others the following grounds:—(1) that there was an illegal contravention of section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, in refusing to grant a trial de novo, (2) that there was a non-compliance with sections 223 and 224, Criminal Procedure Code, causing in fact a failure of justice and illegal misuse of section 336 inasmuch as the charges did not give necessary notice of the matter charged, (3) that the charges framed were in contravention of the provisions of sections 233 and 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code, as there were 15 persons cheated and 15 separate offences committed and the offences were wrongly combined in one trial:

Held, (1) that the statement of the applicant's Counsel not to apply for a fresh trial did not operate as an estoppel and the trial Court was wrong in refusing the applicant's demand for a trial de novo; [p. 997, col. 1.]

(2) that the omission to specify in the charge the manner in which the applicant cheated, whether by illegal act or omission, could not be regarded as material as it had not misled the accused; [p. 997, col. 2.]

(3) that all or most of the persons who parted with money having been present when the terms were proposed by the accused, the representations made and inducements offered were made and offered to each of the villagers collected there and when the applicant took the money paid by each villager he committed a distinct offence, and the trial of the case was, therefore, bad for misjoinder of charges as under section 234, the applicant could not be tried for more than three charges. [p. 997, cols. 1 & 2.]

If circumstances are deposed to against the accused by a prosecution witness, it is necessary that the Magistrate should let the accused know by questions put to him in examination which of them tell against him in his mind; it is more particularly necessary where the witness has deposed to other circumstances favourable to the accused which nullify the value of the circumstances against him. [p. 999, col. 1.]

Sir Henry Stunyon, for the Applicant.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. P. Dick, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—(1) The applicant Jangilal was the Revenue Inspector of the Bahera Circle in the Bemetara Tahsil, Drug District, till the 9th May 1917, when he was suspended by the Deputy Commissioner, Drug, on Police reports that he was taking money from villagers on the pretence that he could save them from being compelled to subscribe to the war loan. After an investigation by the police the applicant was challaned and tried and convicted on three charges under section 420, Indian Penal Code. The three charges were tried together under section 234, Criminal Procedure Code. The applicant has been sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for one year and a fine of Rs. 100 on each count, the sentences of imprisonment to run consecutively. On appeal the Sessions Judge, Raipur, has set aside the conviction and sentence on one charge. This latter charge related to the taking of money from the villagers of Mouza Puran. The other two related to the money taken from the villagers of Mouza Bhotidih. I am now dealing with the latter two only.

JANGILAL v. EMPEROR.

(2) The case against the accused as disclosed by the evidence is briefly this: Admittedly the accused was directed by the Tahsildar to prepare lists of tenants and other persons in his circle who were likely to subscribe to the loan: (see accused's written statement dated 20th August 1917). On the 1st April 1917 the tenants of Bhotidih were collected at Mouza Pendri and on the same day Chabilal Patwari (P. W. No. 12) prepared a rough list for this village showing the names of the tenants and the rents paid by them, and the applicant filled in the amounts against each tenant's names. From this Chabilal prepared a list Exhibit C. The villagers were then told what sum each would have to pay. They pleaded that they were too poor to pay anything, but they were told by the applicant that they "would have to pay" (P. W. No. 6) or were told to "be off" (P. W. No. 7). They then went home. Seven or eight days afterwards being told by the kotwar that they were wanted again, they went to Munderbod, a place about a kos from Bhotidih. They saw the applicant in the rest house sitting on a charpoy. He told them to wait and after a while got up and went outside the village. The villagers followed him and the applicant then beckoned to them and said that 2 or 3 men only should go to him. Thereupon Karia (P. W. No. 6), Chiraidas (P. W. No. 7), Sakhu (P. W. No. 9), Jadnath (C. W. No. 6) and Ramcharan (C. W. No. 7) went to him. He then offered to look after the villagers' interests—"Dekh rekh karunga"—if they would pay him something. He offered to cut down their subscriptions to half if he was paid Rs. 2 a piece, and to "cut off the Rs. 7-12-0 people altogether "if they paid Re. 1 each. The other villagers had by this time come closer and sat down within hearing distance. They were then told to bring the money. The villagers then returned to their village where they met in two groups. Seven persons paid Rs. 2 each to Karia (P. W. No. 6) who thus collected Rs. 16 including Rs. 2 of his own. Similarly Chirai (P. W. No. 7) collected Rs. 9 from 6 persons including himself. These two men went to Munderbod to the applicant, and told him they had brought the money from 8 and 7 persons respectively. He told them not to let it chink, and took it, went near a lamp, asked whose money they had brought, wrote something, and said he was cutting out the Rs. 7-12-0 people and reducing the others by half. The two then went home. Ghanaram (P. W. No. 11), the Patwari in whose absence Chabilal (P. W. No. 12, was acting when he prepared the list Exhibit (C), had been cooking his food while this interview was taking place. Before retiring for the night he looked at his Basta and saw that in the list Exhibit (C) there were corrections in red ink which did not exist when that list had been made over to him by Chabilal. Next morning he asked the applicant why the corrections were made, and he replied that he had filled in the amounts without enquiry into the haisiyat of the villagers, but as some had begged and prayed he had changed their items. He made a fresh copy of Exhibit (C) as corrected by applicant by his direction (Exhibit D).

(3) The case as detailed above rests principally upon the evidence of P. W. No. 6 and P. W. No. 7 and of P. W. No. 11 and P. W. No. 12, the two Patwaris whose evidence is mainly in connection with the lists Exhibits (C) and (D). One piece of material evidence in the case is that of P. W. No. 10 Bhagirathi, a banker of Raipur who deposes to the accused having paid Rs. 1,600 on account of an outstanding loan on 4th May 1917. The other evidence supports some part or other of the above story and is of minor importance.

(4) Upon this evidence the applicant was charged as follows:—"First head: That you, on or about the 7th day of April 1917, at Munderbod cheated Karia Chamar by dishonestly inducing him to deliver Rs. 16 to you, and thereby committed an offence punishable under section 420 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance."

JANGILAL V. EMPEROR.

The second and third heads of the charge were in the same terms but referred to the Rs. 9 paid by Chirai Chamar and Rs. 15 paid by Hira at Bhainsa. There were also three alternative charges under section 161, Indian Penal Code, in respect of the three sums named above.

(5) The applicant denied taking any of the above sums, and denied going to Munderbod at any time between the 1st and 10th April 1917. He produced no evidence in defence.

(6) The trying Magistrate came to the conclusion that the evidence justified conviction under section 420, Indian Penal Code. He says in paragraph 7 of his judgment:—

"There is no doubt that the accused obtained money from the above persons by practising a deception on them. He well knew that he had no authority to fix an amount on them or to reduce any amount so fixed. There is also no doubt that the poor credulous villagers made the payments firmly believing that the accused had power to reduce the amounts which he had imposed in the exercise of his authority. Since there was deception it is immaterial in which way it was practised. It may arise even from a dishonest concealment of facts (Explanation to section 415, Indian Penal Code) as in the present case. The accused in receiving the monies from Hira, Karia and Chiraidas undoubtedly acted fraudulently and I accordingly find him guilty of three offences under section 420, Indian Penal Code".

It is not quite clear what persons the Magistrate refers to when he speaks of the "above persons," whether all the fifteen who contributed to the total amount received by the applicant or to Hira, Karia and Chiraidas alone who are named as the persons cheated in the charge. The Sessions Judge has held that the applicant must be taken to have cheated only Karia and Chiraidas. "The essence of his action," he says, "was dealing with collections of people through representatives and realising lump sums of money from the representatives."

(7) It might be mentioned at this stage that the proceedings in this case originally commenced in the Court of the District Magistrate. After the latter had taken down the depositions of nine witnesses the applicant obtained an order from this Court for a transfer of the case, which was then tried by Mr. Smellie, the Magistrate who has given judgment in the case.

Before Mr. Smellie commenced his proceedings the accused applied for a de novo trial. This was refused on the ground that the right to claim it had been given up by the accused's Counsel before the High Court when he obtained the order of transfer from the District Magistrate's Court.

(8) The argument in appeal before the Sessions Judge proceeded on grounds substantially the same as those urged in revision in this Court. The grounds are:—

- 1 That the trial was preceded by such executive action and judicial procedure as operated to prejudice the applicant materially and this Court ought not to allow a conviction so obtained to stand ;
2. The trial was illegal in some respects and materially irregular in others ;
3. Neither the facts charged, nor the variation of them irregularly introduced by the Sessions Judge, nor the prosecution evidence, if believed, satisfy the definition nor furnish and establish the ingredients of an offence under section 420, Indian Penal Code.

(9) Under the 1st ground it is urged ;—

(a) that the actions of the Police and the District Magistrate in suspending the applicant in order to obtain evidence with reference to the charge against him, and in making the enquiry behind his back was unfair and prejudicial to his subsequent judicial trial, and the lower Courts have ignored the presumption against the credibility of witnesses which arose from the above executive actions;

(b) further that the applicant's suspension by the District Magistrate and the latter's conduct in the course of the proceedings, which took place in his Court before the transfer, showed that he had already condemned the applicant, and this must have unconsciously prejudiced the trying Magistrate.

JANGILAL v. EMPEROR.

(10) As regards point (a) I notice that the learned Sessions Judge has considered the matter urged therein in paragraph 47 of his judgment. As regards (b) the statement, that the trying Magistrate must have been prejudiced, can at the best be only a conjecture. All the circumstances which are relied upon in support of this point had happened before the order for transfer from this Court was obtained and might have been urged then to get the case transferred out of the District, but it is admitted that only a transfer to another Magistrate in the District (who must necessarily be one subordinate to the District Magistrate) was applied for. It is not suggested that the trying Magistrate was particularly prone to such unconscious prejudice.

(11) Under the second ground it is urged that there was :—

- (a) illegal contravention of section 350, Criminal Procedure Code ;
- (b) non-compliance with sections 222 and 223, Criminal Procedure Code, causing in fact a failure of justice, and illegal misuse of section 236 ;
- (c) contravention of section 233 read with section 234, Criminal Procedure Code ;
- (d) failure to comply with section 342, Criminal Procedure Code, to an extent which caused serious prejudice to the accused, and therefore, a failure of justice.

(12) Before the Sessions Judge the argument with reference to section 350 was based on the assumption that it was applicable to the present case, which was one transferred from the Court of one Magistrate to that of another. In paragraph 13 of his judgment the Sessions Judge says :—

"A large number of rulings have been cited to show that section 350 applies to cases in which the trial is transferred from one Magistrate to another as well as to cases in which the Magistrate is transferred, dies or otherwise vacates his office, a proposition of which I needed no convincing."

It is somewhat strange that the applicant should have failed to rely upon the rulings of the Court to the contrary which would have served his purpose better and more fully, and that both the trying Magistrate and the Sessions Judge should have overlooked or ignored the rulings of their own High Court which they were bound to follow. These rulings are Emperor v. Kasim (1), Emperor v. Gokul (2), Ladya v. Emperor (3) and Emperor v. Ramprasad (4).

(13) In this Court the argument advanced with reference to section 350 is two-fold :

1st. Reliance is placed upon the above rulings to show that the section does not apply to transferred cases and, therefore, the case ought to have been tried denovo by Mr. Smellie;

2nd. Even if section 350 applies, there should have been a trial de novo as applicant had demanded it at the proper time before Mr. Smellie and the refusal on the ground that the accused had waived his right was illegal.

(14) In my opinion the view taken of the applicability of section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, in the rulings of this Court referred to above is the correct one.

The general rule is that the decision as to the innocence or guilt of an accused person must be by the Judge who has heard all the evidence : See Ladya v. Emperor (3) and Emperor v. Ramprasad (4). Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, introduces an exception to this general rule, and I do not think that the exception should receive a more extended interpretation than its actual words clearly justify. I am not inclined to agree with the more recent view taken in Mohesh Chandra Saha v. Emperor (5), Kudrutullah v. Emperor (6), Palaniandy Gounden v. Emperor (7) and Ram Dass v. Emperor (8).

(15) If, therefore, section 350 has no application in this case, it is unnecessary for me to discuss the points involved in the alternative argument, but assuming that the section applies and there are no other valid reasons for refusing the applicant's demand for a trial de novo, it seems to me that the lower Courts were

(1) 15 C. P. L. R. 66.

(2) 17 C. P. L. R. 159.

(3) 1 N. L. R. 187.

(4) 36 Ind. Cas. 867; 12 N. L. R. 146; 18 Cr. L. J. 35.

(5) 35 C. 457; 12 C. W. N. 416; 7 C. L. J. 488; 7 Cr. L. J. 220.

(6) 14 Ind. Cas. 314; 39 C. 781; 13 Cr. L. J. 218.

(7) 1 Ind. Cas. 54; 32 M. 218; 5 M. L. T. 218; 9 Cr. L. J. 146.

(8) 44 Ind. Cas. 682; 16 A. L. J. 217; 19 Cr. L. J. 878.

JANGILAL v. EMPEROR.

not justified in refusing it on the ground of waiver in anticipation before this Court at the hearing of the application for transfer. The circumstances of the case reported as Kudrutullah v. Emperor (6) were different. Not only was there no demand for a trial de novo made: but the transfer had been made to suit the convenience of the accused which would not have been served by a trial de novo. In the present case there was a demand made at the proper time, and the only question was whether the applicant's Counsel's previous statement as to the applicant's intention operated as an estoppel as the learned Magistrate seemed to think, and justified him in ignoring it. I do not think that it did. The learned Sessions Judge in discussing the case of Gomer Sirda v. Queen-Empress (9) says: "In that case the accused had never expressly waived his right to a trial", implying that in this case the accused had done so. The only record of the statement of the applicant's Counsel in this Court is in the last sentence of this Court's order for transfer, which runs thus:—"The applicant's Counsel tells me that he does not intend to apply for a re-hearing of the case." These words do not, in my opinion, amount to an express waiver. In Ram Duss v. Emperor (8) the transfer was made on the express undertaking that the accused would not ask for the re-hearing of the entire evidence and no demand for a trial de novo had been made: yet it was held that if the accused had repudiated the undertaking and offered some explanation of his conduct in doing so, it would have been the Magistrate's duty to consider the application and give such effect to it as he thought just and lawful. Here the application has not been considered on the merits at all.

(16) The second point raised under this ground is that the charges did not give the accused the necessary notice of the matter charged that he was entitled to under the provisions of sections 222 and 223, Criminal Procedure Code. It is said that the charge did not contain any particulars of the manner in which the applicant cheated, whether by act or illegal omission, and if so, what; that the Magistrate's record apart from his judgment does not anywhere specify any act or words by which the accused deceived the men who parted with money or the men who carried it to the accused, or of the illegal omission or dishonest concealment by which the deception was brought about. Reliance is placed on illustrations (b) and (c) to section 225 in this connection. It would, no doubt, have been better to have set out in the charge the manner in which the cheating was effected, but the omission cannot be regarded as material as it is not alleged, and does not appear to me, that the accused was in fact misled by such error: section 225, Criminal Procedure Code. The challan and the evidence in the case must have sufficiently indicated to the accused the manner in which he was said to have cheated the villagers. There is evidence on the record which, if true, goes to show that the applicant by his words and conduct induced a belief that the villagers would have to pay the amounts entered against their names, unless they were reduced or cut off altogether by him. I agree with the Sessions Judge's views on this point expressed in paragraph 11 of his judgment.

(17) It is further urged that the charges of cheating and bribery were based on inconsistent facts, and the trial of those charges together, apart from its not being justified under section 236, Criminal Procedure Code, has been the cause of prejudice to the applicant. It is said that at the stage of argument the Magistrate himself stated to the Pleader for the applicant that no case of cheating had been made out and he confined his argument to the charges of bribery. I cannot decide the question of prejudice to the accused under this head of objection without further inquiry and as I find that the trial is bad on other grounds I think it unnecessary to go any further into this objection. On the record as it is, the charge of bribery was rightly dropped by the Magistrate.

(18) The third point argued under this ground is that the charges framed are in contravention of the provisions of sections 233 and 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is argued that assuming there was cheating, the number of individuals cheated was 15, i. e., 13 from Mouza

(9) 25 O. 568; 2 C. W. N. 465; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 568.

JANGILAL v. EMPEROR.

Bhotidih and 2 from Mouza Puran, that 15 offences were thus committed, that the Magistrate wrongly combined 15 charges in respect of them in one trial, and that the proceedings are irremediably bad in law on account of this error, and the convictions cannot stand. Subrahmania Ayyar v. King-Emperor (10). It is admitted by the learned Counsel for the applicant as well as the Crown that according to the evidence on the record all or most of the persons from Bhotidih who parted with money were present at the first interview with the applicant outside the village and heard the terms he proposed. There are witnesses whom the lower Courts have relied on (see paragraph 2 at page 6 of the Magistrate's judgment and paragraph 30 of the Sessions Judge's judgment) who give evidence to the effect that Karia shouted out to the villagers, who were sitting apart, whether they had heard the terms and that they agreed. If this is so, then it appears to me that the representation made and the inducement offered by the applicant were made and offered to each of the villagers collected there, and when the applicant took the money paid by each villager he committed a distinct offence.

(19) Reliance is placed by the Sessions Judge on Johan Subarna v. King-Emperor (11) and Girwardhari Lal v. Emperor (12), for holding that there was only one offence in respect of each lump sum paid by Hira, Karia and Chiraidas. I am not prepared to accept the view taken in Johan Subarna v. King-Emperor (11). The attempt complained of in that case was, in my opinion, nonetheless an attempt to deceive each individual separately, because it was made simultaneously. The last paragraph on page 1063* in Girwardhari Lal v. Emperor (12) seems to me to go against the view of the Sessions Judge rather than to support it. It is not the case here that the applicant treated the transaction as a single one and was unwilling to reduce or cut off the subscription of any one unless all of them combined and made a combined payment. It is difficult to reconcile the views taken in Girwardhari Lal v. Emperor (12) with the one taken in Johan Subarna v. King-Emperor (11), unless we assume that the Judges who decided the former case understood the facts in the latter case to be somewhat different from those stated therein. I hold that the trial of this case is bad on account of misjoinder of charges. Under section 234 the applicant could not have been legally tried for more than three charges.

The fourth point urged under this ground is that there was a failure to comply with the provisions of section 342, Criminal Procedure Code, which has resulted in prejudice to the accused. The Sessions Judge in paragraph 50 of his judgment has found that the applicant paid to his creditor Bhagirathi, P. W. No. 10, Rs. 1,600 on the 3rd or 4th of May 1917 on account of a debt owed on a hundi, which had been running for 3 years without any re-payment. He refers to this as a damning piece of evidence against the accused (paragraph 51 of his judgment says, "this evidence has much value as corroborating the prosecution story"). It is urged that when this evidence was tendered the applicant by cross-examination elicited that he had been accompanied by another man when the money was borrowed and also that he had offered to pay off the hundi in February 1917. It is said that the object of this cross-examination was to prove that the money was borrowed on the personal security of the accused for a relation who was unknown to the lender, and the borrower had sent the money for payment in February 1917 to the applicant. It is argued that any inference arising from this payment disappeared the moment it was found that the applicant had money to pay off the hundi in his possession before the war loan proceedings were set on foot. It is said that the admissions obtained from Bhagirathi in his cross examination were not questioned or explained away by re-examination, nor did the Magistrate ask the witness any further question on the point of the February tender, and wholly omitted to question the applicant about it. Under these circumstances it is urged that the lower Courts were wrong in (10) 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 233; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 28 I. A. 257; 5 C. W. N. 866; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160 (P. C.).

(11) 10 C. W. N. 520; 2 C. L. J. 618; 3 Cr. L. J. 111.

(12) 4 Ind. Cas. 13; 13 C. W. N. 1062; 10 Cr. L. J. 483.

AKHOY KUMAR MUKERJEE V. EMPEROR.

using against the applicant this piece of evidence.

(21) I think there is much force in this contention of the applicant. In the circumstances stated above the applicant would be justified in concluding that the Magistrate did not accept the payment of Rs. 1,600 as a circumstance against the applicant. There was no reason for the applicant to suppose that the statement as to the February tender, coming as it did from a witness produced by the prosecution, would be disbelieved, as the Sessions Judge seems to have done. If circumstances against an accused person are deposed to by a prosecution witness, it is necessary that the Magistrate should let the accused know, by questions put to him in his examination, which of them tell against the accused in his mind, and it is more particularly necessary where the witness has deposed to other circumstances favourable to the accused which nullify the value of the circumstances against the accused. The failure to comply with the provisions of section 342 in this connection may well have prejudiced the applicant by leading him to conclude as above and to ignore the evidence of Bhagirathi so far as his defence was concerned.

(22) The third and the last of the main grounds of appeal urges that neither the facts charged, nor the variation of them introduced by the Sessions Judge—viz, that the cheating was practised on Karia and Chiraidas as the representatives of collections of villagers—nor the prosecution evidence, if believed, established a case under section 420, Indian Penal Code. As regards this contention I think it advisable at this stage to do no more than refer to what I have already said in the latter part of paragraph 16.

(23) Holding as I do that the trial is bad for the reasons stated above, I do not think it is open to me to go into the merits as I have been asked to do. I do not see how I can decide on evidence on which it is not open to the lower Courts to decide on account of the contravention of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code referred to above. I set aside the applicant's conviction and sentence and order that he be re-tried in accordance with law.

The applicant has been released on bail by an order of this Court passed on the 22nd February 1918. He will surrender before the District Magistrate, Drug, on or before the 22nd April 1918. It will be open to the District Magistrate to make such further order as to bail as he deems proper.

Conviction set aside; Retrial ordered.

—
CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.¹
CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 479 OF 1917.
October 9, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Richardson.

AKHOY KUMAR MUKERJEE alias
BHUTNATH MUKERJEE—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY,

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1899), s. 342
(4)—Oaths Act (X of 1873), s. 5—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 118—Evidence—Accused, whether competent witness—Two persons tried separately, whether can give evidence against each other.*

An accused person actually under trial cannot be sworn as a witness, and if two or more persons are being jointly tried none of them is a competent witness for or against the others. But this exception to the general rule goes no further and has no application to an accused person who is not at the time under trial. Accordingly when two persons though they may be accused of complicity in the same offence are tried separately each is a competent witness at the trial of the other, and the deposition of each may be used against him in his own trial. [p. 1000, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal against the sentence of the Third Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, dated the 27th July 1917.

Babu Manmatha Nath Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Mr. Orr, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Akhoy Kumar Mukerjee alias Bhut Nath Mukerjee, has been convicted by the Third Presidency Magistrate, Mr. Abdus Salam, in the alternative under section 411 or section 414 of the Penal Code and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for one year.

The case relates to two currency notes of Rs. 1,000 each which were undoubtedly stolen on the 22nd January 1917, and subsequently on the 26th January presented for encashment at the Paper Currency Office by Sheo Pershad Chatterjee, a clerk of that office,

AKHOY KUMAR MUKERJEE V. EMPEROR.

Sheo Pershad's arrest led to the arrest of the appellant. The Police placed the two men for trial before Mr. Keays, the Second Presidency Magistrate. Mr. Keays, as he was at liberty to do, directed that they should be tried separately. Sheo Pershad's case was taken first and at his trial the appellant was put in the witness box and gave evidence. In the result Sheo Pershad was convicted but the conviction was subsequently set aside by this Court. Now the appellant has been tried and his deposition in Sheo Pershad's case has been used as evidence against himself. His learned Pleader Mr. Manmatha Nath Mookerjee has urged on his behalf that the deposition is inadmissible, mainly on the ground that the appellant was not a competent witness for or against Sheo Pershad.

The general rule on the subject of the competency of witnesses is contained in section 118 of the Evidence Act:

"All persons shall be competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them or from giving rational answers to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind."

The Evidence Act is silent as to accused persons, but section 5 of the Indian Oaths Act (Act X of 1873) provides that "Nothing herein contained shall render it lawful to administer in a criminal proceeding an oath or affirmation to the accused person," and clause (4) of section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code similarly provides that "No oath shall be administered to the accused." It is undisputed, therefore, that an accused person actually under trial cannot be sworn as a witness, and that if two or more persons are being jointly tried none of them is a competent witness for or against the others. But in our opinion this exception to the general rule goes no further, and has no application to an accused person who is not at the time under trial. Accordingly when two persons, though they may be accused of complicity in the same offence, are tried separately each is a competent witness at the trial of the other.

We are disposed to regard the law as settled in this sense and it is only in deference to the arguments addressed to us that we go further into the matter.

It is hardly contested that the provision in the Criminal Procedure Code, regard being had to its context, applies only to the accused actually under trial, and it appears to us that the language of the Oaths Act is capable of and should receive a like interpretation. The accused person in a criminal proceeding is the accused who is the subject of that particular proceeding.

This view is in accord with English practice [Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence, Article 108, Archbold's Criminal Pleading, Evidence and Practice, 23rd Edition, page 394 (note)]. In India the law was laid down as we have stated it so long ago as the year 1868 by Couch, C. J., and Newton, J., in Reg. v. Narayan Sundar (1). It is true that the Oaths Act had not then been passed but section 204 of the first Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861) was to the same effect as the corresponding provision in the present Code to which we have referred. It may be that some difficulty has since been caused in this connection by certain decisions relating to illegal or irregular pardons. The earlier cases are referred to and distinguished or explained in Queen Empress v. Mona Puna (2). In these and other cases the true question appears to be whether several persons having been placed on their trial together, the proceedings as against one of them have come to an end so as to remove the impediment to his being examined as a witness for or against the others: See Subrahmanya Ayyar v. King-Emperor (3) per Arnold White, C. J., and Queen-Empress v. Hussein Haji (4). On this question as it has arisen in particular cases or in particular circumstances, there may have been some conflict of opinion and the decisions may not be entirely reconcilable. Possibly, too, traces may be found of some confusion between the competency of a person as a witness and the admissibility of any evidence such person may have to give. However that may be, in the case before us the appellant and Sheo Pershad were never on their trial together. Sheo Pershad was

(1) 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. 1.

(2) 16 B. 661; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919.

(3) 25 M. 61 at p. 67 (et seq.); 11 M. L. J. 238; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 28 I. A. 257; 5 C. W. N. 866; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160.

(4) 25 B. 422; 2 Bom. L. R. 1095.

AKHOY KUMAR MUKERJEE v. EMPEROR.

tried separately. In such a case the rule applicable is that laid down in Reg. v. Narayan (1) already cited and again in Empress v. Durant (5). The latter case, which was decided by Candy, J., upon the present Code is clearly in point. Full reasons for the decision, with which we generally concur, will be found in the judgment of the learned Judge, and if the decision was not actually approved and adopted by this Court in Banu Singh v. Emperor (6), it was certainly not dissented from. In fact at page 1357 of the report, the learned Judges (Mitra and Holmwood, JJ.) say this:—

"The law, however, is well settled that an accomplice, if he is not an accused under trial in the same case, is a competent witness, and may, as any other witness, be examined on oath."

That expression of opinion, even if it be nothing more, certainly supports our conclusion that the appellant was a competent witness at the trial of Sheo Pershad, a conclusion which is also supported by the observations of another Bench of this Court in Amritlal Hazra v. Emperor (7).

We may mention that, as the cases show, it may often be to the advantage of the accused actually under trial that a person alleged to be an accomplice should be put into the witness box.

It was next argued that if the appellant was a competent witness at Sheo Pershad's trial, the evidence he gave was not admissible against himself at his own trial. It was not suggested that the appellant had brought himself within the protection afforded to witnesses by the proviso to section 132 of the Evidence Act. His evidence was voluntarily given. Reference was, however, made to certain observations in Emperor v. Nanda Gopal Roy (8). There were special facts in that case. Nanda Gopal and others were placed on their trial before a Presidency Magistrate. Nanda Gopal was discharged. The other accused were convicted and appealed to this Court. This Court before disposing of the appeal directed that Nanda Gopal should be examined as a witness. No question was raised as to his competency and his evidence was duly taken by the Magistrate and sent up to this Court. Then the appeal of the other accused was dismissed, and the learned Judges at the same time issued a Rule upon Nanda Gopal to show cause why the case against him should not be further inquired into. The Rule was heard by the Chief Justice and Walmsley, J., and in discharging the Rule the learned Chief Justice incidentally said that "the evidence of Mr. N. G. Roy given under the direction of the Court could not be used against him if he were to be re-tried." But the point was not decided and could not be decided at that stage. The Rule was discharged, because it was considered unfair that the proceedings against Nanda Gopal should be revived upon the strength of statements made by him in the witness box in the course of an examination directed by this Court. The ground taken was quite independent of the further question whether those statements would or would not have been admissible against him supposing he were re-tried. Section 132 of the Evidence Act was not referred to and, apart from that, the case is distinguishable from the present upon the facts. The case of an accused person who is discharged and then gives evidence and against whom an order for further inquiry is then made, may be subject to considerations which are not applicable to the present case. Upon that question we need express no opinion. In the present case, we are unable to say that the Magistrate committed any "error of law by admitting the appellant's deposition at Sheo Pershad's trial as evidence against him at his own trial."

It was lastly argued that the Magistrate could not properly find on the materials before him that the appellant "knew or had reason to believe" that the notes were stolen property. Reference was made to Empress v. Rango Timaji (9). No doubt mere carelessness or suspicion might not amount to criminal knowledge, though the question might be one of degree. But in the present case the accused admits a dishonest mind. He says: I did not know that the notes were stolen. I thought they were forged. There is nothing in the notes themselves to suggest that they were

(5) 23 B. 213; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 141.

(6) 33 C. 1353; 10 C. W. N. 982; 4 Cr. L. J. 145.

(7) 29 Ind. Cas. 513; 21 C. L. J. 331; 19 C. W. N. 676; 16 Cr. L. J. 477; 42 C. 957.

(8) 35 Ind. Cas. 988; 20 C. W. N. 1129 at p. 1132; 17 Cr. L. J. 428.

(9) 6 B. 402; 6 Ind. Jur. 538; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 724.

TIKEKAR V. PIAREYLAL.

forged. We are of opinion that the evidence, including the statements of the appellant himself and the letter which he placed in his sister's custody, afford ample warrant for the finding that he knew or in fact believed that the notes had been stolen.

For the reasons given this appeal must be dismissed. The appellant, if on bail, must surrender and undergo the remainder of his sentence.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 41 OF 1918.

April 29, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Batten, Offg. J. C.

R. B. TIKEKAR—ACCUSED—

APPLICANT

versus

PIAREYLAL—COMPLAINANT—NON-

APPLICANT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 504—Insult with intention to provoke breach of peace—Barrister—Privilege—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439—Revision—High Court, power of, to re-examine evidence—Non-appealable sentence.

An intentional insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace is an offence more cognate to the offence of assault than to the offence of defamation. A Barrister cannot claim privilege in the case of an assault, nor can he claim any privilege if his conduct is calculated to provoke an assault. [p. 1003, col. 2]

A High Court, as a Court of Revision, has power to re-examine the evidence if there are prima facie good grounds for doing so, especially where the accused has been given a non-appealable sentence and has no means of vindicating his character except in revision. [p. 1004, col. 1.]

Revision petition against the order of the Magistrate, 1st class, in Criminal Case No. 176 of 1917, dated the 26th January 1918.

Dr. H. S. Gour, Messrs. G. L. Subhedar, and Balwant Rao, for the Applicant.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Dick, for the Crown,

ORDER.—The applicant, R. B. Tikekar, a Barrister-at-law, practising at Damoh, has been convicted under section 504, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 25 or in default to simple imprisonment for a fortnight. The sentence is not appealable and he has, therefore, applied in revision to this Court. The fine has been paid and the punishment is a light one, but the conviction is a serious stigma on a Barrister-at-law, and as a result of it steps were in contemplation against him under the Legal Practitioners Act. On the death of one Ramju Nai mutation proceedings took place before the Tahsildar of Hatta in respect of his Malik Makbuza plot. One of the claimants was Pammi or Param, a nephew of the deceased, and the counter-claimants were the deceased's son's wife Musammat Rajrani and her second husband Manhgoo. On the 13th September last the Tahsildar was holding a judicial inquiry into the case; Manhgoo Nai was represented by a Mukhtyar, Narbada Prasad, and Param by the applicant his Counsel. Two witnesses were examined on that date on behalf of Manhgoo, the 1st being the complainant Piareylal Nai and the 2nd Bhawani Nai. Piareylal's allegation is that the Barrister asked Piareylal the name of the grandfather of Manhgoo and Piareylal said that he did not know it. Thereupon the Barrister said to the witnesses in a threatening tone "why will you not give this information, you pig? If you don't give it I will give you a kick with my boot." It is also alleged that the Tahsildar himself, the presiding officer of the Court, said to the witness: "You are not a Nai but a Chamar." The witnesses for the complainant are the complainant Piareylal himself, his Mukhtyar, Narbada Prasad, the aforesaid Bhawani, one Pakoo Nai (a witness for Manhgoo in the mutation case who was not examined on that day) and Manhgoo's wife Musammat Rajrani. The applicant entirely denied the truth of the allegations against him, and called in his defence Mr. Narayan Rao, the Tahsildar who was the presiding officer in the Court, a Tahsil peon, one Gangadhar Rao (a Mulguzar who had another mutation case in the Tahsildar's Court that day), and Jawahar Singh, the Mulguzar of Barda who was present in the Tahsildar's Court in connection with the war loan. The proceedings were being held at Hatta, TIKekar v. PIAREYLAL.

All these witnesses entirely denied the truth of the complainant's story. The Magistrate, Khan Sahib Ishtiaq Ali, says that in the ordinary course he would have believed the Tahsildar, "but for his selfish motive, his personal interest in the accused and his prejudice against the complainant." He says:—

"Mr. Narayan Rao's admission of accused's fault in open Court and his failure to take notice of it and lastly his own unbecoming dealings with Piareylal would simply reflect shameful discredit on him (Mr. Narayan Rao) and consequently for the selfishness he cannot be expected to expose himself and his friend the accused." Piareylal made an application to the Deputy Commissioner against the Tahsildar and the Tahsildar was told to treat witnesses in a proper manner. Piareylal also lodged a complaint of defamation against the Tahsildar and it was dismissed by Mr. Ishtiaq Ali as the complainant had not obtained sanction under section 197, Criminal Procedure Code. The Magistrate observes:—

"Mr. Narayan Rao was fully aware of the above two cases against him, as he himself does not deny in the cross-examination before me. Under such circumstances then Mr. Narayan Rao had already become much prejudiced against Piareylal, when he on the 3rd December last stood up before me to depose directly in favour of the accused. I have also remarked above about the interest of Mr. Narayan Rao in the accused. In this connection I have to state that sometime after the institution of the present criminal proceeding against the accused, Mr. Narayan Rao, accompanied by the accused Raghunath Balwant Tikekar and also a certain Pleader of the Damoh Bar, repaired to Mauza Barda and saw Jawahar Singh (D. W. No. 4) there. The latter before me could not satisfactorily account for the joint visit to him of the trio, and the presumption, therefore, is that the said Mr. Narayan Rao had been trying and was anxious to get the accused out of trouble, if it could possibly be done, by getting a few Malguzars like Jawahar Singh who would agree to speak in Court for the accused if it was necessary. For the above reasons I fail to attach any importance to the evidence of the said Mr. Narayan Rao and it is rejected in toto."

Later on the Magistrate says:—

"The evidence of this witness (Jawahar Singh) is decidedly the outcome of the aforesaid visits."

The first contention of the learned Counsel for the applicant is that the conduct of the accused in the prosecution of a judicial case was absolutely privileged and that he cannot be prosecuted on account of it. The whole question of absolute privilege is exhaustively discussed in paragraph 212 of Mayne's Criminal Law of India, 4th Edition. There is a conflict of opinion in the Indian Courts as to whether or not the English doctrine of absolute privilege applies in India and whether or not the Courts can go outside the law as laid down in section 499, Indian Penal Code, more specially the ninth exception thereto. The cases apply both to civil actions and to criminal prosecutions, but all the cases relate to the conduct of the Counsel regarded as a defamation. I am of opinion that none of the rulings have any application to an offence under section 504, Indian Penal Code. A Barrister could not possibly plead privilege if he assaulted a witness, and it appears to me that an intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of the peace is an offence more cognate to the offence of assault than to the offence of defamation. A Barrister cannot claim privilege in the case of an assault, nor in my opinion can he claim privilege if his conduct is calculated to provoke an assault.

The next contention for the applicant is that the conduct complained of does not amount to an offence under section 504, Indian Penal Code. I am unable to accept this view. Such conduct out of Court would certainly fall within the section, and I see no reason for making a distinction because the alleged insult was made by a Barrister when cross-examining a witness. The law does not contemplate or take into account such conduct by a Barrister as calling a witness a pig and threatening to kick him, and under section 152 of the Indian Evidence Act the Court is bound to prevent questions put in an offensive form.

The real object of the applicant is to vindicate his character on the merits of the case, and the learned Standing Counsel also is desirous that the case should be disposed of on its merits and not on any technical points, more especially as the conduct of the presiding officer of the Court has been called in question. The learned District Magistrate in showing cause questions the power of this Court to interfere by re-examining the evidence. There is, however, ample precedent for a High Court as a Court of Revision re-examining the evidence if there are prima facie good grounds for doing so; more especially is this the case where the accused has been given a non-appealable sentence and has no means of vindicating his character except in revision. The learned Standing Counsel does not support the view of the learned District Magistrate on this point, and fully admits that there are prima facie grounds for examining the evidence de novo in this case.

TIKKAR V. PIAREYLAL.

I am of opinion that the Magistrate has not given good grounds for disbelieving the evidence of the Tahsildar regarding the conduct of the Barrister-at-law, nor has he subjected the prosecution evidence to the criticism to which it is open. He has failed in his judgment to note that all the prosecution witnesses, except Narbada Prasad, are related to each other and partisans of Manhgoo, and that Narbada Prasad cannot be regarded as an unbiassed witness since he appeared as the Mukhtyar of Manhgoo for whom Piareylal was giving evidence. The District Magistrate's observation that Narbada Prasad was not Am-Mukhtyar but held a special power-of-attorney for the case does not appear to me to meet the point.

The following is the passage in the cross-examination of the defence witness Jawahir Singh on which the Magistrate bases his allegations of conspiracy:—

"Yes,—the accused had come to my village Barda in the last week of the month of Kuar last (October 1917). He had come in connection with Girdhari Lal's case. I was also there. The reader was not present at all there. I had met the accused at Barda where he had visited us. He was accompanied by Narayan Rao Tahsildar and one more Vakil, a junior man whom I can identify."

The only deduction that I can draw from this evidence is that the Tahsildar visited the witness' village on duty in connection with the case of Girdhari Lal and that the Barrister and Vakil were also there in connection with some case. I am assured that the applicant went to Barda to conduct the prosecution of Girdhari Lal under section 342, Indian Penal Code, before the Tahsildar who was in camp at Barda and that the other Pleader appeared with him for the defence in a forest case. However this may be, the evidence does not show that the Tahsildar and the Barrister and the Pleader went to Barda otherwise than in the prosecution of their respective duties, and there is no justification on the record for the allegation of conspiracy made by the Magistrate. The Magistrate's observation that Jawahar Singh could not satisfactorily account for the joint visit to him of the trio is not justified by the record, since the witness was not questioned any further on the point than is shown by his answers above set out. There is no basis on the record for the description of the accused as a friend of the Tahsildar except perhaps the Tahsildar's answer, to a doubtfully correct question put to him in cross-examination, that the accused and he are both Mahratta Brahmins. It is also to be observed that the Tahsildar has been condemned unheard on the question of conspiracy. He was not asked a single question about his visit to Barda. It is true that the Tahsildar had gone away before the witness Jawahar Singh was examined, but this would not justify the Tahsildar being condemned on a point regarding which he was not given any opportunity whatever of giving an explanation. The Magistrate is also incorrect in saying that Mr. Narayan Rao was fully aware of the two cases against him as he himself did not deny it in the cross-examination. The Tahsildar distinctly says that though he was aware of the report against him made to the Deputy Commissioner he had no knowledge of the criminal complaint of defamation, and there is no evidence and nothing on the record to show that the Tahsildar had any such knowledge.

The Magistrate has also taken it for granted that the Tahsildar would give false evidence against a man who had made a complaint against him. On looking into the record of the mutation proceedings I find it extremely improbable that the Barristers should have acted in the way he is alleged to have done. I find that at the very beginning of Piareylal's examination he stated that he did not know what was the name of Ramju's father, though he knew that Manhgoo was related to Ramju. It was not in the interest of the applicant's client that Piareylal should show himself well acquainted with the relationships in the family. The less he knew the less valuable a witness was he for Manhgoo, and it is difficult to believe that the Barrister would wish to elicit information detrimental to his own client. I have to consider the point what object Piareylal could have in bringing a false complaint against the Barrister and the Tahsildar. I find from the records that Musammal Rajrani, whose interests were the same as those of Manhgoo, applied for a transfer of the case from the file of the Tahsildar. It is quite probable that it was apparent to Manhgoo and his friends including his Mukhtyar, Narbada Prasad, that the Tahsildar did not regard Manhgoo's claim as a good one, and it is probable that the accusations made against the Tahsildar and the Barrister appearing for the opposite side were made in support of the application for transfer. The mutation proceedings were as a matter of fact concluded by the Extra Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Ishtiaq Ali himself, who decided the case against Manhgoo.

RAJA RAM SINGH v. EMPEROR.

I am of opinion that the Magistrate has been too ready to accept an accusation made by interested persons against the Tahsildar and the Barrister, and has rejected the evidence of the Tahsildar on wholly insufficient grounds which are not justified by the evidence on the record. The conviction cannot be sustained. The conviction and sentence are set aside and the fine, if paid, will be refunded.

Conviction set aside.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 172 OF 1915.

May 4, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott.

RAJA RAM SINGH—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 500—Defamation—Using obscene and insulting language in respect of complainant—Offence.

After an altercation between the parties was over, the accused addressing third persons used language of an obscene and insulting nature in respect of the complainant, a respectable Mukhtar.

Held, that the words were calculated to harm the reputation of the complainant and that the accused was, therefore, guilty of an offence under section 500 of the Penal Code [p. 1005, col. 1]

Obiter dictum.—There is some authority for the proposition that words prima facie defamatory used in a street quarrel should be regarded as mere vulgar abuse and that their utterance under such circumstances does not necessarily suggest an intention to harm the reputation of the person to whom they are applied [p. 1005, col. 2]

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Azamgarh.

Mr. Peary Lal Banerji, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision by one Raja Ram Singh, who has been convicted on a charge under section 500 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 50, the case against him being that he used language of an obscene and insulting nature in speaking of a respectable Mukhtar of the name of Muhammad Ali Khan. I do not propose to go into the unedifying details of the quarrel between these two gentlemen. The trying Magistrate has gone into the evidence very thoroughly and has written a carefully considered judgment. I accept his finding as to the words used by Raja Ram Singh and the circumstances under which they were spoken. The point taken on behalf of the applicant is that the words used were obviously not intended to be understood literally and amounted to no more than an open expression of the fact that the accused was very angry with the complainant. There is some authority for the proposition that words prima facie defamatory used in a street quarrel should be regarded as mere vulgar abuse and that their utterance under such circumstances does not necessarily suggest an intention to harm the reputation of the person to whom they are applied. I am content to refer to the case of Empress v. Bchari (1). I think the present case distinguishable; the words in respect of which Raja Ram Singh has been convicted were not used in the course of a quarrel; they were not addressed to Muhammad Ali Khan at all, but were spoken of him after the altercation between the parties was over. Assuming in the applicant's favour that he did not intend that his hearers should take literally the disgusting imputation conveyed by his words, I do not see that he is in any better position than he would have been if he said:—"I wish to convey to you in the most emphatic language at my command that I consider Muhammad Ali Khan a worthless and despicable blackguard." Surely the Sub Inspector would not wish me to hold that his own credit and reputation amongst his acquaintances stands so low that he has himself no "reason to believe" that such an expression of opinion on his part would harm the reputation of the person of whom it was made.

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. RAJA RAM SINGH.

I hold that Raja Ram Singh was rightly convicted on the facts found and I dismiss his application.

Application dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION No. 138 of 1918.

May 4, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott.

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN—APPLICANT

versus

RAJA RAM SINGH—OPPOSITE
PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250—Compensation to accused—Charges under different sections—Acquittal on some and conviction on others, effect of.

Section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code speaks of "the case" as a whole and contemplates a trial or inquiry ending in the unqualified acquittal or discharge of the accused. A complainant who, having a genuine grievance, wilfully exaggerates or distorts the same in order to aggravate the case against the accused is liable, in the discretion of the trial Court, to be prosecuted for any offence against the Indian Penal Code which he may have committed, but the policy of the Legislature seems to be to limit the summary jurisdiction of the Court under section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code to simple cases, in which the complainant is found to have been wholly in the wrong.

Complainant charged accused under sections 500 and 506 of the Penal Code. The accused was convicted on the former and acquitted on the latter charge and the complainant was ordered to pay compensation to the accused, on the ground that the charge of criminal intimidation was frivolous or vexatious:

Held, that the provisions of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code did not apply to such a state of facts, unless the accused was discharged or acquitted altogether.

Criminal revision from an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Azamgarh.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Applicant.

Mr. Peary Lal Banerji, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—Raja Ram Singh was tried at one trial by a Magistrate of the First Class on two charges framed under section 503 and section 500 of the Indian Penal Code. He was acquitted on the former and convicted on the latter charge. The complainant Muhammad Ali Khan has been ordered to pay a compensation of Rs. 25 to Raja Ram Singh, on the ground that the charge of criminal intimidation was frivolous or vexatious. The question I have to determine is whether this order is legal in view of the fact that Raja Ram Singh was convicted on one of the two charges against him. I must take it that the complainant's case was that the two offences in question were committed in the course of one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, otherwise they would have been separately charged and tried separately. The provisions of section 250 of the Code of Criminal Procedure will not apply to such a state of facts, unless the Magistrate who tried the case discharges or acquits the accused altogether. The section speaks of "the case" as a whole, and contemplates a trial or inquiry ending in the unqualified acquittal or discharge of the accused. A complainant who, having a genuine grievance, wilfully exaggerates or distorts the same in order to aggravate the case against the accused is liable, in the discretion of the trial Court, to be prosecuted for any offence against the Indian Penal Code which he may have committed; but the policy of the Legislature seems to be to limit the summary jurisdiction of the Court under section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code to simple cases in which the complainant is found to have been wholly in the wrong. There is authority for this view in the case of Mukti Bewa v. Jhotu Santra (1). I think that case (1) 24 C. 53; 1 C. W. N. 17; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 700.

KAYYAMUDDIN v. DWARKA.

was rightly decided and that it covers the facts now before me.

I set aside the order directing Muhammad Ali Khan to pay Rs. 25 as compensation. The money, if paid, will be refunded.

Order set aside.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 123 of 1917.

August 22, 1917.

Present :—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

KAYAMUDDIN—APPLICANT

versus

DWARKA AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 7 (2)—Notification declaring boundary between two districts, construction of—Transfer of case—District Magistrate, power of, to transfer case outside district.

A notification issued under section 7 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, declared that for the purposes of criminal jurisdiction the deep stream of a river running between two conterminous districts was to be considered the boundary between those districts:

Held, that the intention of the notification was not to define the boundary between the two districts as on the date of the notification, but to declare that until a further notification was made the boundary line between the two districts was to be the deep stream of the river as found at any particular time. [p. 1008, col. 1.]

There is no authority which enables one District Magistrate to transfer a case for trial to another District Magistrate. [p. 1008, col. 2.]

Criminal revision against the order of the District Magistrate, Bara Banki, dated the 29th June 1917.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narain Mulla and Babu Ajit Prasad, for the Applicant.

Mr. H. C. Dutt, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—These two applications in revision are directed against two orders, one passed by the District Magistrate of Bara Banki and the other by the District Magistrate of Gonda. The facts of the case may be briefly stated as follows. It is said that on the 5th of June last a riot took place between persons connected with two estates, namely, the estate of Ramnagar in the Bara Banki district and the Kamiar estate which is situated in the Gonda district. These two estates are divided by the river Gogra. The applicants in the two cases now before me are the persons who belong to the Ramnagar party. The riot is said to have taken place on a piece of alluvial land situated in the bed of the river Gogra. The Ramnagar party, some of whom, it is said, sustained grievous hurts, reported the occurrence at the Thana of Ramnagar. The Police of this Thana investigated into the complaint and the result was that the other party belonging to the Kamiar estate was sent up for trial. Meantime the Kamiar party had made a complaint to the Gonda Police, who investigated their case and ordered the Ramnagar party to be sent up for trial in the Gonda district on a charge of riot. When the case of the present applicants was brought before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in Bara Banki, a plea was raised that he had no jurisdiction to deal with it inasmuch as the offence had been committed within the boundaries of the Gonda district. This plea was based upon the fact that a notification had been issued by the Local Government under section 7 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure on the 1st of December 1914. By this notification it was declared that for the purposes of criminal jurisdiction the deep stream of the river Gogra is to be considered the boundary between the districts of Gonda and Bara Banki. It was represented to the Magistrate that the spot where this riot had been committed was to the north of the deep stream of the river Gogra and this fact indeed seems to have been admitted by both parties. The learned Counsel who has argued the case before me on behalf of the applicants has told me that he does not dispute this proposition. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate then addressed a sort of demi-official note to the District Magistrate, pointing out that he had no jurisdiction to deal with the case and suggesting that the case should be transferred to the Gonda district. Upon this note the District Magistrate recorded a remark to the effect that the case would be transferred. After this the Sub-Divisional Magistrate had an order recorded on the order-sheet declaring that he had no jurisdiction to deal with the case. The Police papers then seem to have been forwarded to the District Magistrate of KATTAMUDDIN v. DWARKA.

Gonda. The latter officer having the papers before him refused to proceed any further with the matter on the ground that the offence having been committed in the Gonda district, the Bara Banki Police had no jurisdiction to make an investigation into the offence. He, therefore, directed the papers to be deposited and told the Ramnagar party that if they wished to proceed they should file their complaint before a competent Magistrate in the Gonda District. The proceedings throughout seem to have been somewhat irregular. I do not know of any authority which enables one District Magistrate to transfer a case for trial to another District Magistrate. As for the order passed by the District Magistrate, Gonda, it has been argued that section 156 of the Code of Criminal Procedure lays down that the District Magistrate of Gonda had no jurisdiction to call in question the propriety of the proceedings taken by the Bara Banki Police, although it turned out that those proceedings had, as a matter of law, been taken without jurisdiction. I think in the circumstances the proper course for the District Magistrate of Gonda, after he had received the Police papers, was to take cognizance of the offence and direct the trial of the persons against whom the Police had made a report. So far as the notification, which I have referred to above, is concerned, it has been argued before me on the authority of a ruling of the Calcutta High Court reported as Puwarles Narain Singh v. Ram Sarup Roy (1) that the notification only defines the boundary between the two districts as on the date of the notification. But although the Calcutta Court favours this view I am unable to accept it. It appears to me that the intention of the notification was to declare that until a further notification was made the boundary line between the two districts for purposes of criminal jurisdiction was to be the deep stream of the river Gogra. I have no doubt, therefore, on the facts as they have been admitted that this riot did take place within the limits of the Gonda district. Again it was argued that in view of the provisions of section 179 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the case against the Kamiar people was cognizable in the Bara Banki district, and stress has been laid in particular upon Illustration (b) appended to this section. It is said that because some of the Ramnagar people sustained grievous hurts, the consequence of the offence ensued in the Bara Banki district within the meaning of section 179. I am very doubtful whether this argument can be entertained, for Illustration (b) appears to me to refer to the causing of that particular kind of grievous hurt which is mentioned as the 8th kind of grievous hurt in section 320 of the Indian Penal Code. I am informed that the grievous injuries committed in the course of this riot on some of the Ramnagar people amounted at once to grievous hurt and do not belong to that particular class of grievous hurt which is only established after it is proved that the person who has suffered the injuries has been unable for a period of more than 20 days to follow his ordinary pursuits. I think the correct view is that the offence under investigation was committed in the Gonda district and ought ordinarily to be tried there. It has, however, been represented to me by the learned Counsel for the applicants that in any case it is advisable that this Court should make an order of transfer to another district and should give directions that both parties should be put on their trial. There is a great deal, I think, to be said in favour of this argument. It is obvious that if the Ramnagar party follow the direction given by the District Magistrate of Gonda and lodge a complaint in that district, it will occasion some difficulty if the complaint is referred to the Gonda Police for investigation. As things stand, the Police of this latter district are committed to the theory that the party in fault was the Ramnagar and not the Kamiar party. After a careful consideration of the facts I am satisfied that it will be in the interests of justice for me to make an order transferring both cases for trial to the district of Bahraich. The District Magistrate will make the cases over for trial to a competent Court. Both parties should be put on their trial in accordance with the result of the investigations made by the Gonda and Bara Banki Police respectively. I order accordingly.

Forum changed.

(1) 25 C. 858; 2 C. W. N. 577; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 559.

GENERAL INDEX

VOLUME XLV—1918.

— 0-0-0-0 —

Acts—General.

- Act 1839—XXXII. See INTEREST ACT.
 — 1859—XIII. See WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT.
 — 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
 — 1865—X. See SUCCESSION ACT.
 — 1866—XX. See REGISTRATION ACT.
 — 1867—XXV. See PRESS AND REGISTRATION OF BOOKS ACT.
 — 1869—IV. See DIVORCE ACT.
 — 1870—VII. See COURT FEES ACT.
 — 1871—XXIII. See PENSIONS ACT.
 — 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
 — 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
 — 1872—XV. See CHRISTIAN MARRIAGE ACT.
 — 1873—X. See OATHS ACT.
 — 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
 — 1876—I. See OPIUM ACT.
 — 1878—VII. See FOREST ACT.
 — 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.
 — 1881—V. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT.
 — 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
 — 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
 — 1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
 — 1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
 — 1887—VII. See Suits VALUATION ACT.
 — 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSES COURTS ACT.
 — 1889—VII. See SUCCESSION CERTIFICATE ACT.
 — 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
 — 1893—IV. See PARTITION ACT.
 — 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
 — 1897—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.
 — 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
 — 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
 — 1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
 — 1909—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
 — 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
 — 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
 — 1909—III. See PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT.
 — 1910—II. See PAPER CURRENCY ACT.
 — 1910—IX. See ELECTRICITY ACT.
 — 1911—III. See CRIMINAL TRIBES ACT.
 — 1911—XII. See FACTORIES ACT.

Acts—(Local) - Bengal.

- 1859—XI. See BENGAL LAND REVENUE SALES ACT.
 — 1869—VIII. See BENGAL LANDLORD AND TENANT PROCEDURE ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bengal—concl.

- Act 1876—VI. See CHOTA NAGPUR ENCUMBERED ESTATES ACT.
 — 1879—IX. See BENGAL COURT OF WARDS ACT.
 — 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
 — 1897—XII. See BENGAL, N.-W. P. AND ASSAM CIVIL COURTS ACT.
 — 1897—V. See BENGAL ESTATES PARTITION ACT.
 — 1908—VI. See CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bombay.

- 1862—V. See BOMBAY BHAGDARI AND NARVADARI ACT.
 — 1876—X. See BOMBAY REVENUE JURISDICTION ACT.
 — 1879—V. See BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE.
 — 1879—XVII. See DEKKHAN AGRICULTURISTS' RELIEF ACT.
 — 1886—VI. See KARACHI PORT TRUST ACT.
 — 1890—IV. See BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT.
 — 1901—III. See BOMBAY DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT.
 — 1902—IV. See CITY OF BOMBAY POLICE ACT.

Acts—(Local)—C. P.

- 1881—XVIII. See C. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
 — 1898—XI. See C. P. TENANCY ACT.
 — 1899—XXIV. See C. P. COURTS OF WARDS ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Madras.

- 1864—II. See MADRAS REVENUE RECOVERY ACT.
 — 1865—III. See MADRAS RENT RECOVERY ACT.
 — 1873—III. See MADRAS CIVIL COURTS ACT.
 — 1882—V. See MADRAS FOREST ACT.
 — 1884—V. See MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT.
 — 1905—III. See MADRAS LAND ENCROACHMENT ACT.
 — 1908—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Punjab.

- 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
 — 1887—XVII. See PUNJAB LAND REVENUE ACT.
 — 1903—XIII. See PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND ACT.
 — 1911—III. See PUNJAB MUNICIPAL ACT.
 — 1913—I. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT.

Acts—(Local)—U. P.

- 1876—XVII. See OUDH LAND REVENUE ACT.
 — 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
 — 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
 — 1901—III. See U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.

Regulations.

- Reg. 1802—XXVII. See REGULATION.
 — 1808—XVII. See BENGAL REGULATION
 — 1814—XIX. See REGULATION.
 — 1819—VIII. See BENGAL PATNI TALUKS REGULATION.
 — 1825—XI. See BENGAL ALLUVION AND DILUVION REGULATION.
 — 1831—X. See REGULATION.

Admission of Pleader on point of law, whether binding on party.

Where in a suit to obtain a re-settlement the right of the plaintiff to obtain a fresh lease was conceded by the defendant's Pleader in the trial Court.

Held, that it was competent to the defendant's Pleader to urge in the Appellate Court that the plaintiff was not entitled to a re-settlement as a matter of right, as an erroneous admission by a Pleader on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude a party from claiming his legal rights in the Appellate Court. C SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. SIRAPROSAJANA, 27 C. L. J. 447 983 in solenama subsequently set aside, evidentiary value of.

An admission by a party to a suit in the written statement and the solenama by which the suit is compromised does not lose its evidentiary value on the solenama being set aside at the instance of other parties. C NEAMAT-UN-NESSA BIRI v. GOLAM PANCHATON KAZI, 22 C. W. N. 512; 27 C. L. J. 502 601

Adverse possession under Will 749

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10 529

ss. 20, 21 546

ss. 156, 158—Suit for assessment of rent, whether falls under s. 156—Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts.

In a suit under section 156 of the Agra Tenancy Act for the assessment of rent of certain land in the occupancy tenancy of the defendant who had refused to pay rent, the lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff was not entitled to any remedy under Chapter X of the Agra Tenancy Act, on the ground that the chapter was headed "Resumption of rent-free grants."

Held, (1) that reliance could not be placed upon the "headings" of chapters or descriptions given of sections in the margin of the same, especially in the case of the Agra Tenancy Act, which could not be said to be a model of good drafting;

(2) that the suit did not fall outside the scope of section 156 of the Agra Tenancy Act. A AJNABI KUAR v. PAYAG SINGH 534

s. 158 534

Allahabad High Court Rules (Civil) for Subordinate Courts, Ch. XXI, rr. 21, 25—Plaint returned for presentation to proper Court—Pleader's fee, calculation of, basis of.

Plaintiff filed a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court. The defendant pleaded that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. This issue was taken up first at the request of the plaintiff and decided in favour of the defendant. The Court ordered the plaint to be returned and awarded the defendant his costs. In drawing up the decree the Pleader's fee was calculated at 5 per cent. according to rule 21

Allahabad High Court Rules (Civil) for Subordinate Courts—concl'd.

of Chapter XXI of the General Rules (Civil) for the Subordinate Courts:

Held, that the suit having been decided on contest and on the merits of the contest so far as that contest went, rule 21 applied to the case and the fee was properly calculated. A GAURI SAHAI v. A. C. BANBEE, 16 A. L. J. 426 935

Ch. XXI, r. 25 985 Appeal (Civil) I, 133, 177, 408, 594, 725

Appellate decree, whether supersedes original decree which it affirms.

When an appeal has been decided, the original decree becomes merged in the appellate decree and for purposes of execution as for purposes of amendment the appellate decree, even when it merely affirms the original decree, is to be taken as embodying and superseding that decree. C BEPIN BEHARI SEN v. KRISHNA BEHARI SEN 246

Decree for possession and remand for ascertainment of mesne profits—Court-fee payable on appeal.

Plaintiff's suit for possession and mesne profits was dismissed by the first Court. On appeal, the lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to possession and sent back the case to the first Court for ascertainment of mesne profits and for passing a decree:

Held, (1) that the lower Appellate Court in fact reversed the decree of the first Court and should have passed a decree for possession in favour of the plaintiff and sent the case to the first Court for enquiry as to mesne profits;

(2) that the order of the lower Appellate Court must be considered as a decree in favour of the plaintiff and the defendant's appeal against it must be considered as an appeal against an appellate decree and must bear Court-fee accordingly. Pat RAGHUNATH DAS v. JHARI SINGH, 3 P. L. J. 99 100 by legal representative of deceased party—Procedure.

A legal representative of a deceased party is not entitled to appeal as such legal representative without first obtaining an order of the Court bringing him on to the record in that capacity. A BANARSI DAS v. SHRODARSHAN DAS SHASTRI, 16 A. L. J. 94 451

presentation of, to wrong Court, whether saves limitation 489

Right of appeal, when can be exercised.

In order to entitle a person to appeal, he must be a party to the suit in which he seeks to appeal against a decree and he must be a person aggrieved by the decree.

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that an alienation of ancestral land made by their father shall not affect their reversionary rights. It appeared that one K. had already brought a suit for pre-emption of the land and on the present suit being filed he was made a defendant at his own request. Both suits were tried together and the plaintiff's suit was decreed and K.'s suit was dismissed. K. appealed in both cases and succeeded. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal:

Held, that inasmuch as K. was a party to the declaratory suit and had a right of pre-emption Appeal (Civil)—concl'd.

which he was seeking to enforce and was aggrieved by the decree granted to the plaintiffs that the sale should not affect their reversionary rights after the death of the vendor, he had a right to appeal. P FAUJOO v KARAM DIN, 84 P. W. R. 1918 181

Appeals, consolidation of—Appellate Court, power of—Omission of prayer for consolidation in lower Court, effect of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151.

An Appellate Court has inherent power to consolidate appeals, though it is not conferred by Statute, and Courts can, if necessary, invoke the provisions of section 151, Civil Procedure Code, for the purpose.

Courts should, however, consider whether there is a fit case for consolidation having regard to the loss of revenue in Court-fees by allowing consolidation.

The absence of a request for consolidation in the lower Court does not bar consolidation in appeal where the award was split up in the lower Court without notice to or knowledge of the party. M VENGU NAIDU v. DEPUTY COLLECTOR OF MADURA DIVISION, 34 M. L. J. 279 468

Appeal (second)—Appellate Court, whether can interfere with finding 65

—False case set up by both parties—Procedure.

Where according to the finding of the first Appellate Court both the plaintiff and the defendant have set up a false case, the way in which the High Court ought to deal with the matter in second appeal is to decide the case upon the facts which have been found by the lower Appellate Court, irrespective of the original cases respectively made by the parties in their pleadings. C HARSHANKAR OJHA v. GOURI SHANKAR, 22 O. W. N. 149 795

—Finding of fact based on conjecture, whether binding—Suits, several, tried together.

A finding of fact based not on the evidence but on surmise and conjecture is open to question in second appeal. C DHARUPAD CHANDRA KOLEY v. HARINATH SINGHA ROY, 27 C. L. J. 563; 22 O. W. N. 826 660 —Finding of fact based on conjecture, whether final—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 59—Succession to occupancy holding.

In deciding the question of succession to an occupancy holding under section 59 of the Punjab Tenancy Act conjecture must not be allowed to take the place of legal proof.

Where, therefore, in a suit in which the plaintiffs claim to succeed to an occupancy holding on the ground that they are the collateral heirs of the deceased tenant, the findings of fact arrived at by the lower Appellate Court are based on conjectures, they are not judicial findings and cannot be accepted as final in second appeal. P SULTAN AHMAD v. PALA, 102 P. W. R. 1918 800

—, whether maintainable when Court exercises discretion as to the award of costs in arbitrary manner 948

—Negligence, wilful, whether question of law or of fact.

In a case where wilful negligence is alleged, the question whether there is any evidence at all to go to the Jury is a question of law, but if there is such evidence, the question whether wilful negligence has been established, is a question of fact. Where there is evidence to go to the Jury, the High Court will not interfere with the finding of fact whether there was or was not wilful negligence. PAT EAST INDIAN RAILWAY CO. v. JAGO RAM, 4 P. L. W. 369; (1918) PAT. 178 197

Appeal (second)—concl'd.

—Point not taken in lower Courts or in Chief Court, whether can be given effect to.

A point of law, which is patent upon the record but which is not raised either in the lower Courts or in the Chief Court, can be given effect to by the Chief Court suo motu in second appeal. P ALLAN DIN v. FATEH DIN, 31 P. R. 1918; 54 P. W. R. 1918; 27 P. L. R. 1918 101

Audi alteram partem, applicability of.

There is no exception to the rule audi alteram partem, unless such an exception is made by legislation. N VITHOBA v. SEGU 882

Autrefols acquit, plea of 261

Award, oral, on voluntary submission, nature of—Allocation of hypothecation bond to a party—Suit on bond, maintainability of—Title, whether conferred by award—Execution of further conveyances, whether necessary—Registration, want of, effect of.

A suit on a hypothecation bond allotted to the holder by an oral award of arbitrators passed on a voluntary submission is maintainable without the execution of further instruments following on the award.

An award may be oral and it is as binding on the parties as a written award.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—An award by arbitrators is as binding in its nature as a judgment of Court and a right of suit accrues to a party to whom a bond is allowed by virtue of such award.

An oral award may also be enforced as an oral partition which is effective without writing or registration.

Per Napier, J.—The only method by which an award can be made efficacious for process by the Court is by making the submission a rule of Court, and unless this is done, and enforcement can be had under the processual law, it cannot be said to operate as a judgment of Court. Even if it is equivalent to a judgment for some purposes, in the sense that it may have the same effect in barring suits, it is not a judgment in any real meaning of the word, far less is it a decree.

An oral award can, however, pass title without any further action by the parties on any other footing, as, by the submission, the arbitrators are constituted the parties' agents for the purpose of doing such things as are specifically or by implication embodied in the terms of the submission. M AMIR BIBI v. ABOKIAM, 34 M. L. J. 184 813

Benami transaction—Mortgage—Tainted origin of money lent, effect of—Fraud, intended but not effected—Suit, maintainability of, by real beneficiary.

Where a mortgage was taken benami with money having a tainted origin in the name of N. for a fraudulent purpose for plaintiff's benefit, but the fraud was not effected:

Benami transaction—conclld.

Held, per Wallis, C. J.—That the plaintiff could sue to enforce the mortgage as the fraud contemplated was not, in fact, effected.

Per Oldfield, J.—That the suit was maintainable, however tainted was the origin of the money lent, and that no further proof was necessary for the claim than that the ostensible mortgagee had the funds, whatever their origin, and invested them for plaintiff's benefit in a manner which was innocent in itself. M. RAJAGOPALACHAR V. SUNDARAM CHETTY, 33 M. L. J. 696 333

Benamidar, whether can sue for possession of immoveable property.

A benamidar is not competent to maintain a suit for possession of immoveable property. PAT GUYAN DHANGER V. GONDAR 794

Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation (XI of 1825), s. 4, sub-s. 4—Alluvion and diluvion 929*Bengal Court of Wards Act (IX B. C. of 1879), s. 54—Notice, service of—Procedure.

Section 54 of the Bengal Court of Wards Act requires that notices should be served upon the Manager of a Ward's estate through the Collector and any notice served otherwise is void. PAT JANKI KUER V. BANWAMALLE RAMANAUJEAR, 3 P. L. W. 218 404

Bengal Estates Partition Act (V B. C. of 1897), ss. 10, 11, 12 895*Bengal Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (VIII of 1869), ss. 59, 64, 65—Non-transferable holding, whether can be sold in execution of decree for rent in District of Sylhet.

In execution of a decree for rent in a case in the District of Sylhet governed by the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, whether the decree is a decree for the co-sharer landlord's share of rent or a decree for the whole rent due on the holding which is non-transferable, the holding cannot be sold under the provisions of section 59 or section 64 or 65 of the Act. C. ALOK CHAND PAL V. JALURAM NAMASUT, 22 G. W. N. 563 762

—ss. 64, 65 762

Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (XI of 1859), s. 52—Permanent tenure sold at revenue sale—Howla, whether affected by sale.

Within a resumed khass mahul there was a nim-osat taluk (i. e., permanent tenure, of which the last settlement had taken place in 1908. Under this nim-osat taluk there had existed a howla from 1853. The nim-osat taluk was sold in 1912 at a revenue sale under Act XI of 1859:

Held, that the sale of the nim-osat taluk did not affect the howla which had been in existence from before the last settlement of the nim-osat taluk. C. SRISTIDHAR GHOSH V. KENDARESWAR BISWAS 892

Bengal, N.-W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s. 21 (a) —Suit valued at more than Rs. 5,000—Appeal preferred to District Judge—Jurisdiction—Consent of parties, whether confers jurisdiction—Objection, when to be taken.

Bengal, N.-W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act—conclld.

A suit for recovery of money on the basis of a mortgage valued at more than Rs. 5,000 was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge who decreed it ex parte and dismissed an application by the defendant for re-hearing under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code. The defendant preferred an appeal to the District Judge against the order dismissing his application under Order IX, rule 3. The parties did not raise any objection as to the jurisdiction of the District Judge, who decreed the appeal:

Held, (1) that under section 21, clause (a) of the Bengal, N.-W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act, the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal and his order was a nullity;

(2) that the fact that the plaintiff did not raise any objection as to jurisdiction in the appeal did not estop him from raising it before the High Court, inasmuch as where there is an inherent want of jurisdiction, the consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction and objection can be taken at any time. PAT RAGHU SINGH V. USUF ALI, 4 P. L. W. 445 920

Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation (VIII of 1819), s. 14, proceedings under—Money paid to stop sale, whether recoverable—Collector, powers of.

In proceedings under section 14 of the Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation, 1819, the Collector acts not in a judicial but in a ministerial capacity. Those who pay money under such proceedings are not to the same position as persons who pay a claim brought against them in an ordinary suit which they have a full opportunity of resisting and who, not having availed themselves of such opportunity then, are debarred from doing so hereafter. Whether or not he contests the claim, a talukdar to stop a sale under section 14 has to deposit the full amount claimed and such deposit does not preclude him from thereafter raising the question of title in an ordinary suit. P. C. JOYTI PRASHAD SINGH DEO BAHADUR V. KUMUD NATH, 16 A. L. J. 569; 5 P. L. W. 64; (1918) M. W. N. 441; 24 M. L. T. 66; 23 C. L. J. 165; 8 L. W. 186 827

Bengal Regulation XVII of 1806, s. 8—Mortgage by way of conditional sale—Foreclosure, proceedings—Notice, service of—Evidence—Redemption.

—

In order to prove that the equity of redemption of a mortgage by way of conditional sale has been extinguished by proceedings taken under section 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806, the mortgagee must establish that he caused the mortgagor or his legal representative to be served with a copy of his own written application for foreclosure and also with a notice or perwana under the seal and official signature of the District Judge, warning him that the mortgage would be finally foreclosed in the event of his failing to redeem within a period of one year.

The records of the proceedings taken under the Regulation cannot be accepted as prima facie proof of the fact of service of notice. A. RAM BARAN RAI V. HAR SEWAK DUBE 488

Bengal Regulation XVII of 1806—
concl'd.

s. 8—Mortgage by way of conditional sale—
Mortgagor continuing in possession after default—Adverse possession—Foreclosure proceedings—Suit for possession by mortgagee—Limitation.

In the case of a mortgage by way of conditional sale where, under the terms of the mortgage-deed, the mortgagee is entitled to possession of the mortgaged property without first taking out foreclosure proceedings the right to possession of the mortgagor determines on the date of default but where under the deed, the mortgagee as such has no right to possession, the right to possession of the mortgagor does not determine and his possession does not become adverse until the foreclosure proceedings have been perfected and the year of grace has expired.

A mortgage-deed by way of conditional sale dated the 28th June 1898 provided that the mortgage money shall be paid after three years and in case of default the mortgagee shall be at liberty to take possession by issuing foreclosure notice under Regulation XVII of 1806 but that if he did not elect to do so, the mortgagor would continue to pay him interest until the mortgage was redeemed. The mortgagor made default and on the 17th of June 1913 the mortgagee gave him notice of foreclosure, which was served on the 7th of September 1913 so that the year of grace expired on the 7th of September 1914. The mortgagee then brought a suit for possession as owner on the 9th of February 1915:

Held, (1) that the mortgage having continued even after the date of default, the mortgagor's right to possession did not determine and his possession did not begin to be adverse to the mortgagee till the expiry of the year of grace, so that the suit was not barred by time under Article 144 of the Limitation Act;

(2) that Article 135 of the Limitation Act had no application to the case.

Proceedings under Regulation XVII of 1806 are purely ministerial proceedings devised to give warning to the mortgagor of the impending disappearance of his right to redeem the mortgage and avoid a conditional sale, and cannot in themselves confer any new period of limitation on a claim which otherwise would be barred by time. P RATAN DAS v. GURAN, 52 P. W. R. 1918; 25 P. L. R. 1918. 563

Bengal Regulation XI of 1825, s. 4

(1)—Alluvion—Accretion when can be claimed by owner of adjoining land—Boundary line, original ascertainable, effect of.

Plaintiff sued for possession of some land, on the ground that it had formed contiguous to his fields by alluvial deposits in the bed of the river which adjoined his occupancy holding. The accretions took place in successive steps in four years. It was contended for the defendants that the land could not be claimed by the plaintiff inasmuch as the Bengal Regulation XI of 1825, section 4, did not apply to the case, the accession not having accrued by gradual, slow and imperceptible means:

Held, that the plaintiff must succeed, as the only requirement in section 4 of the Bengal Regulation is that the accretion should be gradual, not that it should be slow and imperceptible. All accessions by gradual alluvion are treated alike irrespective of the rate of formation.

Bengal Regulation XI of 1825—concl'd

The fact that the original boundary was known or ascertainable does not render the law of accretion inapplicable. N GOVINDRAO v. GANPATHI, 14 N. L. R. 97. 425

Bengal Revenue Sales Act (XI B. C. of 1859), s. 37—"Protected interests"—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 1—Settled raiyat holding land at fixed rate of rent under permanent lease, whether can acquire right of occupancy.

Contract or no contract, every raiyat who is a settled raiyat of a village and obtains a raiyati interest in other lands in that village acquires a right of occupancy in those other lands. Consequently, a settled raiyat of a village holding land within the village under the terms of a permanent lease at a fixed rate of rent has a right of occupancy in the land which is not annulled by a sale for arrears of revenue of the estate comprising the village. C LAKHI CHARAN SAHA v. MOKAR ALI, 27 C. L. J. 293. 25

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 5, 104 H—Landlord and tenant—Tenant, status of—Tenure or raiyati interest—S. 104 H, scope of, suit under.

The mere fact that a tenant has sub-let his land is not decisive of the question, whether he is a tenure-holder or a raiyat.

The test to be applied to determine the status of a tenant is the purpose for which the right of tenancy was originally acquired.

The statutory presumption under sub-section 5 of section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no application when the terms of the original grant of a tenancy are known.

In cases where the origin of the tenancy is unknown or where the terms of the grant are ambiguous, the mode of user of the land and the evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties may furnish a valuable clue to determine the original purpose of the tenancy.

In a suit under section 104H, Bengal Tenancy Act, it is not sufficient for the Court to hold that the entry in the settlement rent roll as to the status or the rent is erroneous. The Court must affirmatively determine the exact conditions and incidents of the tenancy as also the rent to be settled on such basis.

Where an amalgamah, which sanctioned the entry of the tenant on the land demised, recited that the mauzar as mentioned therein were settled with the tenant for bringing them under cultivation and directed him to extirpate wild beasts and by clearing out judgies and raising embankments at his own expense to carry on cultivation and tillage and enjoy the crops thereof, and the regular lease which followed did not indicate any intention to alter the nature of the tenancy, but authorised the grantee to continue to enjoy the profits of the land by bringing it under cultivation either by himself or by making settlement with tenants for a term of nineteen years at a progressive rate of rent.

Held, that notwithstanding the land settled exceeded 2000 bighas in area the settlement was of a raiyati holding and not of a tenure. C SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. DIGAMBAR NANDA, 27 C. L. J. 334. 43

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

— S. 5—Tenure-holder or raiyat, test of—Area exceeding 100 bighas—Presumption that tenant is tenure-holder—Purpose for which lease is granted—Cultivation by sub-lessee.

Fixity of rent is no criterion for determination of the question whether a person is a tenure-holder or a raiyat, for a tenure may be held at a fixed rent equally with a raiyati holding.

In determining the status of a tenant, viz., whether he is a tenure-holder or a raiyat, two elements have to be borne in mind, first, the purpose for which the land was acquired, and, secondly, the extent of the tenure or holding.

Defendant was assignee of a lease of over 100 bighas of land granted by plaintiff's predecessor for cultivation, without any restriction as to the agency to be employed in such cultivation:

Held, that under the circumstances of the case the presumption arising under sub-section (5) of section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that the tenant was a tenure-holder and not a raiyat, since the area exceeded 100 bighas, was not rebutted by proof of the purpose for which the right of tenancy was originally acquired. P C DEBENDRA NATH DAS v. BIRUDHENDRA MANSINGH BHARAMAKHAR ROY, 5 P. L. W. 1; 27 C. L. J. 543; 22 C. W. N. 674; 16 A. L. J. 522; 23 M. L. T. 384; (1918) M. W. N. 379, 20 Bom. L. R. 743; 35 M. L. J. 2.4

— S. 21

— S. 22—Lease of share in joint proprietary right—No specific plot mentioned in lease for cultivation—Tenure-holder—Occupancy right, acquisition of, by lessee—Part proprietor, whether can create ryoti right.

Where a lease is executed in respect of a certain share in a Zemindari and no specific land is mentioned in the lease which the lessee has to cultivate, the lease creates only a tenure.

A tenure-holder cannot acquire a right of occupancy in the lands comprised in his ijara or farm while holding the village as an ijaradar or a farmer.

In order to determine whether the right conferred by a lease is that of a tenure-holder under the Bengal Tenancy Act, the intention of the parties has to be looked into. The principal object of giving the lease of an entire village or a share therein is to enable the lessee to collect rents from tenants. The fact that the lessee may bring under cultivation some lands in the village will not alter the character of the tenure created by the lease. There can be no lease for the purpose of cultivation in a village where no lands to be cultivated are specified in the lease.

A lessor, who is a part proprietor in an ijnoli or joint village, has no right to create any right in respect of any specific lands in the village to the prejudice of the other co-proprietors without their consent.

A co-proprietor in a village cannot acquire any occupancy or non-occupancy right in the village. PAT STONEWIGG v. DWARKA SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 428

— S. 46—“Agreement,” meaning of—Tender of agreement, how to be made—Notice accompanying agreement, whether necessary.

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

The word “agreement” in section 46 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not mean an agreement strictly so called but means an agreement which the landlord proposes that the tenant should execute.

What the landlord has got to do under the section is to tender a document containing the terms of the proposed agreement, but it is not necessary that a notice to the tenant should accompany the document.

Where a landlord filed in Court under section 46 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the draft of a proposed agreement duly stamped, but the Court, thinking it safer not to part with the stamped document, served on the tenant an identical copy but without a stamp on it along with a notice:

Held, that there was perfectly good tender of the agreement as required by section 46 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, even though the notice was not in accordance with the terms of the Act as there is nothing in section 46 which requires a notice to be served along with the agreement. C PORT CANNING AND LAND IMPROVEMENT CO. LTD. v. NAYAN CHANDRA PARAMANIK, 22 C. W. N. 558; 24 C. L. J. 87

— S. 49, whether applies to under-raiyat with right of occupancy—Under-raiyat, whether can acquire right of occupancy.

An under-raiyat can by usage or custom obtain a right of occupancy.

Section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act cannot apply to an under-raiyat who has got a right of occupancy. C GOPAL MANDAL v. TAPAI SANKHARI, 23 C. L. J. 84

— S. 52—Additional rent for excess land, suit for—Burden of proof—Conduct of one defendant, whether affects others.

In a suit under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for additional rent, the burden of proving an increase in “area for which rent has been previously paid” is on the landlord. Speaking generally, he may discharge the burden in two ways:—

(1) By proving that the tenant is in possession of excess land outside the boundaries of land originally settled with him, for instance, land obtained by encroachment or alluvial increment.

(2) By proving that at the original settlement of the land rent was fixed at a rate per bigha or other unit of measurement or at differential rates according to the quality of the land and so forth and that in fact and substance the agreement was that the tenant should pay at that rate or at those rates for all the land of which he was put in possession according to its true area, and by further proving that the existing rent is less than the rent payable under such agreement.

The rent might be a consolidated rent, even if it was calculated at so much per measured or estimated bigha. The question would depend on the true intention of the parties, to be gathered in the absence of a written instrument from all the circumstances. Where, however, it is proved that the tenant is holding land outside and beyond the original boundaries, the question as to the rent being a consolidated rent cannot well arise except possibly in connection with land gained by alluvion.

Where several suits instituted by the landlord for additional rent under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act against several tenants were tried together without objection by the tenants-defendants, and one of the latter did not produce the chitta which was in his possession:

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

Held, that as the evidence given, so far as it was general in its character, applied to all the suits and all the defendants or sets of defendants were sailing in the same boat, and none of them dissociated himself from the defendant who did not produce the chitta or at any rate displayed any anxiety to forego any advantage that might accrue from his conduct, they were all alike affected by his conduct in the suit.

In a suit under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for additional rent for excess area when the landlord proves the existence of an excess area, a case is made out for the increase of rent which must be met by the tenants. C. DHIRUPAD CHANDRA KOLEY v. HARINATH SINGHA ROY, 27 C. L. J. 563; 22 C. W. N. 826 660 — ss. 52, 195—Patnidar, whether can apply for abatement of rent.

A patnidar is entitled to make an application under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for abatement of rent. Section 195 of the Act does not prevent section 52 from applying to the case of a patnidar. C. RANJIT SINHA v. ABDUR RAHIM KHAN CHOWDHURY 190

— s. 67—Landlord and tenant—Interest on rent, date of accrual of.

Under the Bengal Tenancy Act interest on rent accrues, not from the expiration of the dates on which the instalments are payable according to the kists stipulated in the contract of lease, but from the expiration of the quarters of the agricultural year in which the instalments fall due. C. SRISH CHANDRA RAY v. JADUNATH KUNDU 532

— ss. 76, 155—Landlord and tenant—Improvement, what is—Dwelling house, erection of, by tenant.

The clauses which specify what constitutes improvements within the meaning of section 76 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are not exhaustive.

A tenant is entitled to effect on his holding any improvement which would add to the value of the holding.

The fact that a tenant has a house in an adjacent mouza does not deprive him of his right to erect upon his occupancy holding another house for the purpose of making a residence for himself and his family.

Pat MAHADEO RAI v. SHEOGULAM MAHTO, 2 P. L. J. 634 332

— ss. 88, 188—*Division of holding—Recognition of division by landlord—Rent receipt given by gumashita, whether binding on landlord—Burden of proof—Express consent in writing, meaning of—Contract of division between co-sharer and tenant, whether binding on entire body of landlords—Distribution of rent, recognition of—Estoppel.*

The mere acknowledgment of receipt of rent less than the total jama, without any indication that it is in respect of a portion only of the holding, cannot constitute a consent to a division of the holding within the meaning of section 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act even when continued over a number of years; but if it should clearly appear on the face of the receipt itself that the rent is paid in respect of a particular portion only of the holding this may be sufficient acknowledgment to bind the landlord.

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

Where a landlord repudiates the authority of a gomashita to give a receipt which recognises the sub-division of a tenure or holding, the onus of proof is ordinarily upon the landlord inasmuch as the relations between himself and his servant are a matter peculiarly within his knowledge under section 106 of the Evidence Act.

The "express consent in writing" required by section 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act may be given by means of a rent receipt, and in each case the adequacy of the consent must be gathered from all the circumstances. A receipt showing the area of the transferred portion and the rent paid therefor should be sufficient to constitute express consent within the meaning of the section.

Section 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refers to a sole landlord or the entire body of joint landlords where there are more landlords than one. A division which does not bind the whole body of landlords does not come within the scope of the section.

There is no provision in the Bengal Tenancy Act which requires a landlord to recognize a distribution of rent. The landlord is authorised to do so, but the authority is derived not from the Act but under the general law as an incident to the ownership of property. Pat SRIKISHEN PRASAD v. JEONASI KUR 4 P. L. W. 316; (1918) PAT. 210 294

— ss. 102 (dd), 106—Suit under s. 106—Dispute between neighbouring proprietors—Question for determination.

In a suit under the provisions of section 106, Bengal Tenancy Act, to amend a Record of Rights in which the dispute is between two neighbouring proprietors, and which comes within the provisions of section 102 (dd), the only question between those rival proprietors that can be gone into, is the question as to which of them was in possession of the land in question at the date of the final publication of the Record of Rights. C. MAHARAJ BHADUR SINGH v. BHAGWAN DAS 781

— s. 103 B 65

— s. 104 H 43

— s. 106 781

— s. 116—*Khudkasht, whether zerait.*

Khudkasht does not necessarily mean zerait or private lands of the proprietor within the meaning of section 116 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Pat DEONATH MISRA v. AMAR SINGH 418

— s. 148 A, suit under, form of—Suit by co-sharer landlord for separate share of rent, or in the alternative for total rent, nature of—Decree, form of.

Co-sharer landlords, who by arrangement with the tenants collect their shares separately and have in previous years brought separate suits for recovery of their dues, are competent to sue jointly for the total amount due to them under the terms of the original lease, which can be enforced by all the co-sharers together without the consent of the tenants. But if a plaintiff seeks to avail himself of the special provisions of section 148A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, he must in his plaint seek to recover the entire amount due to himself and his co-sharers.

Bengal Tenancy Act—conclld.

A co-sharer landlord sued for rent and alleged, in the first paragraph of the plaint, that he had separately collected his share of the rent from the tenant-defendant in previous years. In the second paragraph he stated that he had demanded his separate share of the rent from the tenant but to no avail. He added, in the third paragraph, that he was not aware whether his co-sharers (whom he joined as defendants) had separately realised their shares of the rent. In the first clause of the fourth paragraph he prayed that a decree might be made in his favour for his share of the rent; then followed a second alternative clause to the effect that if it was found that the tenant had not paid the rent due to his co-sharers, he might be granted leave to amend the plaint so as to secure a decree for the entire sum:

Held, that this was not a suit contemplated by section 143 A of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

The nature of the decree to be made in the suit depends upon its true character. If it is a suit for the share of the rent recoverable by the plaintiff separately by reason of the fact that he has on previous occasions collected that share of the rent separately from his co-sharers, the decree will be a money decree if, on the other hand, it is a decree in a suit properly framed under section 143A, the decree will operate as a rent decree capable of execution under the special procedure prescribed by the Bengal Tenancy Act. C BAIKANTHA NATH SEN v. RAMAPATI CHATTERJEE, 27 C. L. J. 101 767

—s. 155 332

—s. 181—Jagir, whether service tenure.

The words "Jagir khudkash land" do not necessarily mean a service tenure within the meaning of section 181 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. PAT DEONATH MISHRA v. AMAR SINGH 418

—s. 188 294

—s. 195 190

—Sch. III, Art. 3—Dispossession of tenant by landlord—Limitation for suit to recover possession of holding—Recognition of ryot's interest in holding, effect of.

After the dispossession of a ryot by some of the co-sharer landlords, his right to redeem the holding was recognised by the Court in a mortgage suit by another of the co-sharer landlords:

Held, that such recognition by the Court did not extend the period of two years' limitation which the raiyyat had under Article 3, Schedule III, of the Bengal Tenancy Act for bringing a suit for recovery of possession of the holding. C GIRISH CHANDRA MITRA v. GIRIBALA DEBI 937

—Art. 6 712

Bombay Bhagdari and Narvadari Act (V Bom. of 1862), s. 3—Award dividing recognised sub-division of Bhag, validity of.

An award the result of which would be to effect further division in a certain recognised sub-division of a Bhag is void under section 3 of the Bombay Bhagdari and Narvadari Act.

The substance and effect of the transaction is what must be looked to for the purpose of determining, whether it is within the mischief which the Legislature had in view in passing the Bombay Bhagdari and Narvadari Act. If the transaction clearly amounts to an alienation of an unrecognised sub-division of a share in a narva, its real nature cannot be disguised by calling it a compromise. B NAGAR KASHI PATIL v. BAI DRULI, 20 Bom. L. R. 342 577

Bombay Bhagdari and Narvadari Act—conclld.

Bombay District Municipalities Act (III Bom. of 1901), ss. 113, 122

—Bye-laws of Surat City Municipality, Ch. XIV, Bye-law 10 (3), whether ultra vires—Municipality, power of, to charge fees for shop-boards projecting over public street.

Under section 113 of the Bombay District Municipalities Act it is open to a Municipality to prescribe the extent to which and the conditions under which shop-boards may be allowed to project over public streets. Bye-law 10, sub-clause (3), of Chapter XIV of the Bye laws framed by the Surat City Municipality, therefore, which provides that projections over public streets may be permitted on payment of a prescribed fee is not ultra vires of the Municipality. B NAGINDAS CHHABLDAS v. EMPEROR, 20 Bom. L. R. 348; 19 Cr. L. J. 599 503

—s. 122 503

Bombay District Police Act (Bom. IV of 1890), s. 43—District Magistrate, order by, under s. 43—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

An order passed by a District Magistrate under section 43 of the Bombay District Police Act is an executive order and not the order of an inferior Criminal Court, and consequently cannot be interfered with by the High Court in revision even though it is ultra vires.

The aggrieved party has in such a case a remedy under sections 13 (2) and 50 of the Bombay District Police Act by petition to the Commissioner.

A District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to eject any person from property under section 43 of the Bombay District Police Act without first taking temporary possession himself and his order of ejection or exclusion can only operate for the period of his temporary possession. S DHARMIBAI v. EMPEROR, 11 S. L. R. 113; 19 Cr. L. J. 588 396

Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. V of 1879), s. 74

—s. 76 492

—s. 203—Executive order of Revenue Officer—Appeal, right of, by aggrieved person not party to inquiry—Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 10.

Under section 203 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, the right of appeal against an executive order of a Revenue Officer is vested in every person aggrieved by the order, irrespective of his being a party to the inquiry wherein the order was passed. S MULCHAND TILOKCHAND v. MURADALI, 11 S. L. R. 124 335

Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 10

Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law, questions of, decision of—Vinaya—Athagatha.

Questions of Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law which come before the Civil Courts must be determined not merely by the canonical text of the Vinaya, i. e., the Palidaw, but the Athagatha and other commentaries must also be considered and the provisions of Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law—conold.

the Dhammathats should also be taken into account as throwing a valuable light on the established custom of the country. L B U AWRATHA v U THU DATHANA 923

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Adoption—

Divorced woman, whether can adopt.

Under the Buddhist Law as regards the power to adopt, a woman who is divorced from her husband and has divided the joint property with him is in the same position as a single woman.

An adoption is to a great extent a matter of intention and where an attempted adoption by a married woman causes a divorce between her and her husband but the intention to adopt continues after the divorce and full effect is given to it, there is a good adoption without any formal declaration. L B AUNG MA KHAING v. MA AH BON, 9 L. B. R. 163 737 —Divorce—Second marriage, without chief wife's consent, whether entitles chief wife to divorce.

The chief wife of a Burmese Buddhist may object to her husband taking a second wife, and may claim a divorce if he does so without her consent. Her right, however, is subject to certain exceptions mentioned in sections 219, 232, 265—47 and 311 of the Digest, wherein the husband is allowed to take a second wife when the first wife is barren or has borne only female children, or is suffering from certain diseases.

In the case of such a divorce the property should be partitioned as in the case of divorce by mutual consent. L B MAUNG HME v. MA SEIN 953 —Marriage of minor girl—Consent of father, whether necessary.

There cannot be a valid marriage of a minor Burmese Buddhist girl without her father's express consent. L B MAUNG BA HAN v. MA TIN 831

—Religious gift, whether requires registration 926

Burden of proof 294, 550, 888
Bye-laws of Surat City Municipality 503

Carriage of goods—Non-delivery of goods, action for—Landing agent or carrier, liability of—Privity of contract—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 31, applicability of.

In the case of continuous carriers the authorities establish (1) that when goods have to be carried with the aid of different transport agencies in order to arrive at the destination to which they are booked, the carrier with whom the contract is made at one end is, in the absence of any contract limiting his liability to his own transport system, liable for the loss or destruction of the goods on portions beyond his own system or in consequence of acts or default of persons other than his own servants; (2) that in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the consignor cannot hold the company with whom he does not contract liable for damages when all that can be complained of is non-feasance, though such company may be liable in tort for breach of duty arising from the mere fact that it has undertaken the liability of carrying goods or property belonging to another; (3) when there is an agreement between two companies the effect of which is to constitute one company the agent of the other and the traffic is carried for the joint benefit of both the companies, either company may be sued at the option of the consignor

Carriage of goods—conold.

The 'carrier' in its general sense means a person or company who undertakes to transport the goods of another person from one place to another for hire.

Article 31 of the Limitation Act is not restricted in its application to common carriers. It applies to carriers who come within the above definition.

M MYLAPPA CHETTIAR v. BRITISH STEAM NAVIGATION CO. LTD., 34 M. L. J. 553; 8 L. W. 46 485

—Railway Company, whether bound to re-weigh goods and give certificate of shortage—Consignee's refusal to take delivery—Damage to goods after refusal, liability for.

A Railway Company is not bound to re-weigh the goods and give a certificate of shortage on the demand of the consignee. If the consignee refuses to take delivery on the Company declining to re-weigh the goods and give a certificate of shortage, the goods remain at his risk so that any deterioration or damage caused to the goods after the date of his refusal to take delivery falls on him. C JAGAN NATH MARWARI v. EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY, 22 C. W. N. 902 933

C. P. Court of Wards Act (XXIV of 1899), s. 16 (2), (b), interpretation of—Contract by guardian, not for benefit of minor, whether can be specifically enforced.

The words "for the preservation and benefit of such property" in section 16 (2) (b) of the Court of Wards Act should be interpreted in the light of the usual powers of guardians to bind the estates of minors.

No decree for specific performance of an agreement for transfer made by his guardian should be passed against a minor unless the Court is quite certain that the agreement was for the benefit of the minor and that it would be for his benefit that it should be enforced. N PURANLAL v. VENKATRAO GUJAR 192

C. P. Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), s. 39 470

—ss. 82, 83, 39—Record of Rights, whether complete before notification under section 39—Ejectment, suit for, against recorded tenant—Burden of proof 470

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 70 669

—s. 94, scope of—Dispossession by non-lambardar-mortgagee—Limitation for suit.

Ono K. who was the owner of a 13-annas 4-pies share in a village mortgaged the share on 18th February 1895 with the defendant who obtained a sale decree and put the mortgaged property to sale and having himself purchased it obtained possession thereof in 1909. The plaintiff who was the owner of the remaining share, had already sold it to B. on 7th May 1907. The plaintiff filed the present suit on 4th May 1912 to recover possession of the land on the ground that by the transfer of his 2-annas 8-pies share he became an occupancy tenant of the village sir and ordinary tenant of the khudkasht. It was contended for the defendant that the right of the plaintiff as an occupancy tenant, if any, had become extinguished under sections 35 (4) and 94 of the C. P. Tenancy Act

C. P. Tenancy Act—concl.

Held, that as the defendant took possession in 1909 qua mortgagee and not qua lambardar, section 94 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, which has reference only to relations between landlords and tenants, did not apply to the case. N BHAKMCHAND GOKALCHAND v. HARPRASAD 184

S. 97—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Suit between landlord and tenant—Person other than landlord joined as co-defendant.

The policy of the C. P. Tenancy Act, as declared by section 97 of the Act is that all questions concerning the right of a tenant as such of an agricultural holding which arise out of the relationship of tenant and landlord should, except so far as appeals are concerned, be tried by a Judge who is also a Revenue Officer.

The mere fact that some one who is not a landlord is joined as a co-defendant in a suit between a landlord and tenant does not take away the operation of section 97 of the C. P. Tenancy Act and such a suit is triable only by a Judge who is also a Revenue Officer. N KAMA v. BHAJANLAL CHANTAN-LAL 654

Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876), applicability of, to immovable property outside Chota Nagpur.

The Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876, has no application to immovable property outside the limits of Chota Nagpur. P C JOYTI PRASAD SINGH DEO BHADUR v. KUMUD NATH, 16 A. L. J. 519; 5 P. L. W. 64; (1918) M. W. N. 441; 24 M. L. T. 66; 28 C. L. J. 165; 8 L. W. 186 827

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI B. C. of 1908), ss. 4, 68, 139—Prodhān, whether tenant—Suit for ejectment of prodhān—Jurisdiction—Estoppel, whether cures want of jurisdiction.

The holder of a prodhani pattah is not in the position either of a non-occupancy raiyyat or of an occupancy raiyyat. He is in the position of a quasi service tenure-holder, that is, he is a tenure-holder of a kind but not one within the definition of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.

There is no provision in the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act to justify a Court, constituted to hear suits under that Act, to eject a tenure-holder.

Section 139 (6) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act gives jurisdiction to the Deputy Commissioner to deal with disputes as between parties claiming the office of prodhān coupled with possession of land attached to such office in a civil proceeding between parties other than landlord and tenant, which would otherwise be apparently outside the scope of the Act.

A suit to eject a prodhān does not fall within the provisions of this sub-section nor is it covered by sub-section (8) of section 139. The Deputy Commissioner has, therefore, no jurisdiction under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act to hear such a suit.

In cases where there is an inherent absence of jurisdiction no subsequent action or conduct of the parties can validate the proceedings. PAT TATA IRON AND STEEL CO., LTD. v. RAGHUNATH MAHTO (1918) PAT. 65 72

— ss. 68, 139 72

Christian Marriage Act (XV of 1872), ss. 3, 68—‘Professing Christian religion’, meaning of—Act, scope of—S. 68, applicability of—Christian marrying according to Hindu rites—Offence.

Per Knox, J.—The Christian Marriage Act has to be so construed that no case be held to fall within it which does not fall both within the reasonable meaning of its terms and within the spirit and scope of the enactment. No violence must be done to its language in order to bring people within it, but rather care must be taken that no one is brought within it who is not within its express language.

It is not competent to a Court to extend the words of an enactment by construction.

The interpretation to be placed upon the words of section 68 of the Christian Marriage Act must be one which harmonises with the context and promotes in the fullest manner the policy and object of the Legislature.

The word ‘means’ in section 3 of the Christian Marriage Act is an inclusive term and, therefore, no one except a person who professes the Christian religion, comes within the purview of section 68 of the Act.

A person is not a ‘person professing the Christian religion’ within the meaning of Act XV of 1872, simply because he is baptised as an infant, when he has no possibility of saying to the world what is the faith to which he belongs, nor can any importance be attached to the fact that he attends a Christian school. The dressing as a Christian, especially in the Bhangi class, is not conclusive on the point either.

A person cannot be said to profess the Christian religion if at the time of his marriage he performs devi ka puja.

Quære.—Whether section 68 of Act XV of 1872 was intended to penalise marriages other than those intended to be or purporting to be marriages under the Act.

Per Walsh, J.—A person, who on the eve of his marriage resists all pressure and persuasion to be married as a Christian by a Christian ceremony and who, having by birth and connection other religious associations, deliberately decides to marry a sweeper according to sweeper rites and does public worship to Hindu gods in the presence of his relatives and friends, is not ‘a person professing the Christian religion’ within the meaning of section 3 of the Christian Marriage Act.

The object of Act XV of 1872 is not to prevent people marrying as they wish, but to enable them to protect themselves and their posterity by a lawful and binding marriage if they wish to be married as Christians.

There is no express prohibition preventing a professing Christian from doing violence to his faith and marrying a non-Christian by a non-Christian ceremony.

Section 68 of the Christian Marriage Act does not make it criminal for a professing Christian to marry by a ceremony which is void under section 4 of the Act.

It refers to a class of persons who solemnize or profess to solemnise a Christian marriage under the Act not being authorized by section 5 to do so. A MAHA RAM v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 414; 19 Cr. L. J. 615 519

— s. 68 519

City of Bombay Police Act (IV Bom. of 1902), ss. 106, 107

511

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 17, Exp. III

900

— s. 257 A

16

— ss. 313, 315

109

— s. 335—Court sale—Resistance to possession by third party—Delivery, order for, to purchaser, without enquiry into merits, effect of—Non-enforcement of order within statutory period, effect of—Suit for possession—Title based on sale certificate, whether liable to question—Estoppel.

An order under section 335, Civil Procedure Code of 1882, is final, if no suit is instituted questioning its correctness within a year, in the sense that it cannot be re-opened after a year, that is, in cases where the order upholds the auction-purchaser's right to possession, if there is an application for delivery within the time allowed by law, the party against whom the order is passed cannot be heard to say that he will not deliver possession as he has a better title. But where the order is unexecuted and the resister remains in possession, he is not estopped from pleading, in defence to a suit for possession, that the plaintiff has no title to recover.

The Civil Procedure Code of 1908 does not provide for the investigation of the claim of an objector who does not derive title under the judgment-debtor. The provision to that effect in section 335 of Act XIV of 1882 has not been reproduced in the new Code. M YAMAJALA SANJEYUDU v. NAKKA VENKADE, 23 M. L. T. 233

24

— s. 617

201

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 (2), 47, 109 (a)

— Appeal to His Majesty in Council—'Decree', meaning of—Execution, determination of question in, whether final order or decree—Remand, order of, whether appealable to His Majesty in Council—Interlocutory order.

Per Dawson Miller, C. J.—A decision on a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree and which is a matter in controversy in the suit, must be deemed to be included in the definition of a decree given in section 2 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code provided the judgment conclusively determines the rights of the parties in that matter.

An order of remand can be a subject of appeal to His Majesty in Council provided the question involved in the order is a cardinal point in the case.

Plaintiffs obtained an Order in Council for possession of certain shares in a mahal. In the meantime, however, the mahal had been partitioned and the plaintiffs had been allotted shares other than those for which they were suing. They prayed for execution against the substituted shares but the executing Court rejected their application on the ground that they could not ask for the ascertainment of the shares allotted to them in the execution department. On appeal, the High Court directed the executing Court to hold the necessary enquiries and to execute the order with reference to the substituted shares.

Held, that the order of the High Court conclusively determined the rights of the parties in a matter which went to the whole root of the proceedings and was, therefore, a decree within the meaning of section 109 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Per Chapman, J.—The order of the High Court was an interlocutory order directing procedure and was, therefore, not a final order within the meaning of section 109 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code.

PAT RAJ NATH GOENKA v. RAMESHWAR SINGH, (1918) PAT. 81; 3 P. L. J. 339; 5 P. L. W. 45

192

— ss. 2 (2), 100, O. IX, r. 8—Decree—Dismissal in presence of one of several plaintiffs, whether Decree—Appeal, whether lies—Appeal, second, maintainability of.

On a date fixed for the hearing of a case one of the plaintiffs appeared and made an application for adjournment. The Court rejected the application and on the same day passed the following order "No further step is taken. The case is dismissed with costs".

Held, that as one of the plaintiffs was present the order of dismissal amounted to a decree and was not one of dismissal for default and an appeal lay against it to the District Judge and from the latter's order a second appeal lay to the High Court. PAT JUGESHWAR RAI v. RAILAL BARADUJ, 4 P. L. W. 366

189

— s. 2 (2), O. XVII, rr. 2, 3—Suit dismissed for plaintiff's failure to produce evidence, whether decree or order.

An application for adjournment on the part of the plaintiff having been refused, the Court passed the following order:—"As there is no evidence on the side of the plaintiff and some of the defendants, and though other defendants are ready but adduce no evidence, let the suit be dismissed."

Held, that the order was a decree inasmuch as it was a final decision of the suit so far as the Court was concerned. It was nonetheless so because the suit was dismissed in consequence of the plaintiff's failure to produce evidence. C PRAMOTHA NATH SAHA v. SASHIMUKHI DEBI

200

— s. 2 (15), Sch. II, paras. 1, 3—Arbitration—Reference by Pleader, validity of—Pleader, authority of.

The position of a Pleader is that of an agent in relation to his client and his power is, therefore, created entirely by the vakalatnamah given to him by his client.

A Pleader has no right to compromise on behalf of his client unless expressly authorised to do so; nor is he empowered to refer a matter to arbitration except by an express authority in that behalf. A vakalatnamah in general terms is wholly insufficient.

The words "all the parties interested" in paragraph 1 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code mean that all the parties interested in the litigation only need be parties to the application for reference to arbitration.

It is a question of fact in each case as to who are the parties interested in the litigation. PAT JAIPAL TEWARY v. TAPEWARI TEWARY

321

— s. 9, O. XXII, r. 4—Appeal and cross-objections by respondent—Death of respondent pending appeal—Omission of appellant to bring legal representative on record—Legal representative, application by, to be brought on record in memorandum of objections, effect of—Appeal, whether abates—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

The omission by an appellant to bring on record the legal representative of a deceased respondent will not cause the abatement of the appeal if the latter, on his own initiative, has brought himself on the record in the memorandum of cross-objections filed by the deceased. The effect of the legal representative being added in the memorandum of objections is, in effect, to make him a party to the appeal.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The appeal and memorandum of objections are not disconnected and independent proceedings, but are part of the same proceedings.

Plaintiffs sued to establish their right to recite prabandams or holy verses in a temple and in the procession of a temple deity and a certain rank or precedence in such procession. They also claimed an injunction restraining the 6th defendant from receiving the teerthams and being ranked above them. The Court dismissed the suit as not being one of a civil nature, but disallowed 6th defendant's costs. Plaintiffs appealed and 6th defendant filed cross-objections against the portion of the decree disallowing his costs. The 6th defendant died pending the disposal of the appeal and the plaintiff-appellant did not bring his legal representative on record within the time allowed by law, but the latter brought himself on record in the memorandum of objections. The Appellate Court confirmed the Munsif's decree:

Held, (1) that the appeal did not abate by reason of appellant's omission to bring the deceased respondent's representative on record, as he was on the record in the memorandum of objections which is substantially the same proceeding as the appeal;

(2) that as there was no obligatory duty on plaintiffs to recite the prabandam, the suit was not cognizable by the Civil Court under section 9, Civil Procedure Code. M. VATHIAR VENKATACHARIAR v. PONAPPA AYYENGAR, 7 L. W. 614

959

406, 975

—S. II

—S. II, O. II, r. 2, O. XXIII, r. I—

Res judicata—Dismissal of suit on pleadings without decision on merits, whether operates as res judicata—

'Withdrawal of suit, leave for, on payment of costs,' meaning of—Costs, payment of, whether condition precedent to grant of leave—Power-of-attorney granted to mortgagee for realization of dues to mortgagor—Suit for cancellation of power and accounts, dismissal of—Fresh suit for redemption, maintainability of.

Where a suit is dismissed on the pleadings without any decision being rendered on the merits, there is no bar of res judicata.

Where leave to withdraw a suit is granted on payment by the plaintiff of defendant's costs, the payment of costs is not a condition precedent to the institution of a fresh suit and non-payment will not disable the plaintiff from filing a fresh suit.

Plaintiff executed a mortgage to one R. on 12th July 1892. On 8th July 1898 he executed a power-of-attorney to R. empowering R. to collect rents from plaintiff's tenants and appropriate the net income towards the mortgage-deed. In 1910 plaintiff sued R. for cancellation of the power and for accounts. That suit was dismissed on the ground that plaintiff should have sued on the mortgage. Afterwards he filed a suit on the Original Side of the High Court for cancellation of the power and for accounts alleging that the mortgage had become discharged. That suit was dismissed on the ground that it was barred as res judicata. On appeal, the Appellate Court permitted the plaintiff to withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit on payment of defendant's costs. The plaintiff without paying the costs of that suit brought the present suit for redemption of the mortgage:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred as res judicata inasmuch as, in neither of the previous suits, was there any decision on the merits;

(2) that the non-payment of costs in the second of the two prior suits was not a condition precedent to the order granting leave and did not bar the institution of the present suit;

(3) that the suit was not barred under Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. M. DASARATHY NAIDU v. PALALA KUMARAMULLU, 7 L. W. 557; (1918) M. W. N. 427

969

—S. II—Res judicata—Erroneous decision on question of law, whether res judicata.

An erroneous decision on a question of law between the parties to a suit may nevertheless amount to res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties.

In a previous suit between the parties it was decided on an issue of law that the defendants were liable to pay interest on arrears of rent. In a subsequent suit for arrears of rent and interest the claim for interest was resisted on the ground that the defendants were thikadars and were, therefore, not liable under the provisions of section 141 of the Oudh Rent Act to pay interest on arrears:

Held, that the matter, having been in issue in the former suit and having been heard and finally determined, was conclusive in the subsequent suit as to the liability of the defendants to pay interest, even although the earlier decision was a wrong decision in law. O. BHAGWATI PRASAD SINGH v. PARMESHWAR DUTT, 5 O. L. J. 16

252

—S. II—Res judicata in execution proceedings—Objection not taken at one stage, whether can be taken at later stage.

An objection that a decree is barred by limitation cannot be taken in an execution proceeding if it was not taken in a previous execution proceeding when it could and should have been raised, provided the judgment-debtor had been properly served with notice of execution in the previous proceeding. The objection, for instance, would not be res judicata as against a judgment-debtor who was a Ward of Court and who was not properly served with notice of the previous proceeding as required by section 54 of the Bengal Court of Wards Act. PAT JANKI KUER v. BANWAMALLI RAMANATHIAR, 3 P. L. W. 218

404

—S. II, O. IX, r. 13—Res judicata—

Fraud—Suit to set aside decree obtained by fraud—Question of fraud already considered in proceedings to set aside ex parte decree, effect of.

The decision on the question of fraud in a proceeding under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, for setting aside an ex parte decree will operate as res judicata on the question of fraud raised in a subsequent suit between the same parties for setting aside the ex parte decree in only so far as that fraud consisted in the suppression of service of summons. C CHANDRA KUMAR ROY CHOWDHURY v. ANWINI KUMAR DAS 250

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— S. 11—Res judicata—Mortgage—Redemption suit by one co-mortgagor—Subsequent suit by another co-mortgagor—Co-mortgagor suing to redeem share of mortgaged property.

A decree was passed in a suit for redemption by one of several co-mortgagors, in which the other co-mortgagors were impleaded as defendants. The decree directed that if the plaintiff failed to pay the money within a period of six months the decree would become a nullity. It did not provide for redemption by the defendants-co-mortgagors in case the plaintiff made default. The plaintiff failed to comply with the order of the Court, and subsequently some of the other co-mortgagors brought a suit for redemption:

Held, that the suit was not barred by the rule of res judicata inasmuch as the plaintiffs in the subsequent suit were not claiming under the plaintiff in the previous suit. O BHAIROO BAKSHI SINGH v. RAGHUBANSA KUNWAR, 5 O L. J. 43 300 — SS. 11, 47—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code (Act XI of 1882), s. 617—Partition decree—Accounts, whether can be claimed in execution—Reference, invalid, opinion expressed in, whether binding on parties.

In a suit for partition the parties believed that some of the villages which were the subject-matter of the suit could not be partitioned. A consent decree was passed under which some of these villages were left under the management of the plaintiff and others under that of the defendant. The decree also contained the following direction: "Accounts should be rendered once in a year and that in the month of April and the produce shall be divided according to the shares at the time." The parties had been seeking accounts from each other year after year in execution:

Held, that accounts could not be claimed in perpetuity in execution of a decree in evasion of the law of procedure and in evasion of the Court Fees Act.

In the year 1904 on the objection of one of the parties to render accounts, a reference was made to the Judicial Commissioner in which he expressed an opinion that it was too late to re-open the interpretation of the decree:

Held, (1) that as the reference was incompetent, under section 617 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, any opinion expressed upon such a reference could not operate as res judicata, and did not amount to an adjudication binding on the Courts in subsequent stages;

(2) that even if it was an adjudication the Court was not bound to perpetuate an error. N YESHWANT-RAO v. DATTATRAYA KRISHNA 201

— S. 11—Res judicata—Pro forma defendant against whom no relief is claimed, position of.

The decision in a case does not operate as res judicata against a pro forma defendant who was not a necessary party to the suit and who was impleaded not because any relief was claimed against him, but because he might assist the Court in the adjudication of the claim against the real defendant. PAT SUGRIVE MISSER v. JOGI MISSIR 318

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— S. 11—Res judicata—Refusal of Court to decide issue.

There can be no res judicata under section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code unless the issue was heard and finally decided by the Court.

The refusal of the Court to determine an issue raised in a case does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit. PAT DHAKESWAR PRASAD NARAIN SINGH v. POOKHAR PANDAY, 4 P. L. W. 299; (1918) PAT. 152 326 — SS. 13 (b), (d), 44—Foreign Court, judgment of—Execution in British India—Mistake of law, effect of—Burden of proof, wrong view of, whether 'opposed to natural justice.'

A wrong view of a Foreign Court as to onus of proof will not have the effect of rendering its judgment one 'not given on the merits' within the meaning of section 13 (b), Civil Procedure Code, or of rendering the judgment erroneous on the face of it.

A foreign judgment is not liable to be vacated merely on the ground of its containing a mistake of law. There must be something in the procedure anterior to the judgment which is repugnant to 'natural justice'. A mere incorrect view of law by a foreign Court will not give the British Indian Courts jurisdiction to say that the judgment is opposed to 'natural justice' within the meaning of section 13 (d), Civil Procedure Code. M RAMA SHENOI v. HALAGNA, 34 M. L. J. 295; 41 M. 205 703 — SS. 19, 20, 21—Contract for supply of goods—Goods not ordered sent with goods ordered—Return of goods not ordered by buyer—Claim for value of goods ordered and damages for negligent re-transmission of goods not ordered—Place of suing—Cause of action—Jurisdiction—S. 21, applicability of, to usurpation of jurisdiction of foreign Courts.

Defendants, who were residents of Sagaram in the Mysore State, contracted with the plaintiffs, residing at Kumbakonam in British India, for the supply of certain articles by the latter. The plaintiffs sent the goods ordered by the defendants along with goods not ordered. The defendants having returned all the goods, the plaintiffs instituted the present suit at Kumbakonam for the value of the six articles ordered and of the other articles also on the ground that they were negligently re-transmitted causing loss to the plaintiffs:

Held, (1) that the cause of action arose at, and the suit was properly filed, at Kumbakonam in respect of the goods ordered, as the proposal by defendants was impliedly accepted at that place;

(2) that the cause of action in respect of the other articles was distinct, and the defendants' liability being for damages for alleged negligence, the cause of action arose at Sagaram and it was not competent for the Kumbakonam Court to take cognizance of that portion of the claim;

(3) that section 21, Civil Procedure Code, did not apply to usurpation of the jurisdiction of a foreign Court. M MANJAPPA v. RAJAGOPALACHARIAR, (1918) M. W. N. 378; 24 M. L. T. 95 779

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— s. 20—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 17, Exp. 111—Cause of action—Place of suing—Money payable on death in Lahore—Death occurring at another place—Jurisdiction.

Plaintiff's mother who resided in Lahore became a member of the Punjab Mutual Hindu Family Relief Fund, Lahore. She died at Lyallpur where the plaintiff resided. The Fund's moneys which went to relieve distress on the death of members, were payable under the rules in Lahore. The Fund also carried on business at Lyallpur through an agent. Plaintiff brought a suit to recover the moneys from the Fund at Lyallpur:

Held, that the Lyallpur Court had jurisdiction to hear the suit against the Fund on the grounds, (1) that the death of its member which was part of the cause of action occurred at Lyallpur, and (2) that the defendant Fund carried on its business at Lyallpur through an agent. PUNJAB MUTUAL HINDU FAMILY RELIEF FUND, LAHORE v. SARDARI LAL, 29 P. L. R. 1918

900
401

— s. 21, applicability of

— s. 24, cl. (1) (b) (ii), O. XLVII, r. 2—'Competent to try and dispose of the same,' meaning of—Jurisdiction of Courts, territorial changes in—New Courts, establishment of, with jurisdiction over cases from specified date—Review, petition for, to Court exercising jurisdiction before establishment of new Court—Transfer to new Court, power of District Judge to—New Court, whether 'successor' of Court which entertained petition—Transfer, whether ultra vires.

The Court of a District Judge has no power to transfer suits or petitions filed in a Court subordinate to it to another subordinate Court newly established thereafter, which is only empowered to hear cases presented to it from a specified date after its establishment.

The latter Court is not a Court 'competent to try and dispose of the same' within the meaning of clause (1) (b) (ii) of section 24, Civil Procedure Code, nor can it be regarded as 'successor' to the Court which originally entertained the suit or petition within the meaning of Order XLVII, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code.

The Subordinate Judge of Kumbakonam issued notice, on a review petition presented to him, on 19th November 1915, to the opposite party to appear on 27th November 1915. The petition not having been disposed of on the latter date, the District Judge transferred the petition to a new Small Cause Court established at Kumbakonam on 1st January 1916 with jurisdiction to try all Small Cause suits from that date.

Held, that the order of transfer was ultra vires. M. VAITHILINGAM CHETTY v. KALIAPERUMAL MUDALI, (1918) M. W. N. 291; 24 M. L. T. 32

13
703

— s. 44

— s. 47

192, 201

— s. 47—Defendant exonerated wrongly described as party in decree, whether party to suit—Separate suit, right of.

A defendant, whose name appears in the decree without having been struck off previously from the record, is a party with respect to whom the prohibition of a separate suit enacted in section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Civil Procedure Code applies, notwithstanding that he has been exonerated by the decree passed in the suit without an adjudication on the controversial questions between him and the plaintiff. M. MEDIPETTI VENKATASAMI v. KUNCHALLA CHIDAMBARAM, 23 M. L. T. 208

671

— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 32—Injunction, suit to enforce, whether lies—O. XXI, r. 32, cl. (5), whether applies to mandatory and prohibitory injunctions—Limitation, whether applicable to application for enforcement of injunction.

The enforcement of an injunction is a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree by which the injunction was granted; therefore, a separate suit for enforcement of an injunction is prohibited by section 47, Civil Procedure Code.

The plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants for the demolition of a wall in so far as it was above the height limited by a permanent injunction awarded against the defendant by a decree made in the plaintiff's favour:

Held, that the suit was not maintainable and that the remedy of the plaintiff was by an application for execution of the decree under rule 32, clause (5) of Order XXI, Civil Procedure Code.

The expression "the act required to be done" in clause (5) of rule 32, Order XXI, Civil Procedure Code, means what has to be done to enforce the injunction.

The power given by clause (2) of section 47, Civil Procedure Code, is a discretionary power which may not be exercised by the High Court in certain cases.

Per Richardson, J. (Beauchroft, J. dubitante)—(Clause 5 of rule 32, Order XXI, Civil Procedure Code, clearly applies to injunctions, both mandatory and prohibitory. C. SACHI PRASAD v. AMAR NATH RAI, 27 C. L. J. 506

864

— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 96—Sale in execution of mortgage-decree—Properties not included in sale-certificate, delivery of, to purchaser—Suit by mortgagor for re-delivery, maintainability of—Suit, whether can be converted into application under s. 47.

Where, under a sale held in execution of a mortgage decree, lands not included in the sale certificate but which by mistake are assumed to be so included are delivered to the purchaser, the mortgagor cannot claim their re-delivery by a separate suit. The question whether the lands so delivered are correctly included in the sale certificate or not can only be determined by the executing Court on an application under section 47, Civil Procedure Code.

An order directing delivery of possession to a purchaser under Order XXI, rule 96, Civil Procedure Code, is a judicial order.

A suit cannot be treated as an execution application where the effect of doing so would be to prejudice the defendant in his plea of limitation. M. KATHIRAYASAMI NAICKER v. V. RAMABADRAN NAIDU, 35 M. L. J. 27

608
494

— s. 48

— s. 48—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182 (7)—Execution—Mortgage decree directing mortgaged properties to be sold and in case of deficiency balance to be realised from other properties and persons of judgment-debtors—Limitation, commencement of.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

A mortgage decree directed that the mortgaged properties should be sold and that if the sale-proceeds proved insufficient, the balance should be realised from the other properties and the persons of the judgment-debtors. An application for execution of the latter part of the decree was made more than twelve years after the date of the decree:

Held, (1) that under section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code time began to run from the date of the decree, and not from the date when the mortgaged properties were sold and that the application was, therefore, barred by time;

(2) that the direction in the decree was not a direction to pay money at a certain date within the meaning of clause (7) of Article 182 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act, as the date of the sale of the mortgaged properties was not certain. P C KHULNA LOAN COMPANY, LIMITED v. JNANENDRA NATH BOSE, 22 C. W. N. 145 436

— s. 54—Bengal Estates Partition Act (V B. C. of 1897), ss. 10, 11, 12—Partition of revenue-paying estate—Civil Court decree for partition, execution of—Collector, power of—Partition, whether can be re-opened.

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to execute a decree for partition of a revenue-paying estate, provided that it does not assume jurisdiction to partition the liability for the land revenue. In the event of a party applying to the Collector for a partition of the land revenue after partition has been effected by the Civil Court, it would be open to the Collector to re-consider the allotment of the shares granted in the Civil Court proceeding.

There is no principle of law which enables a Civil Court to re-open a partition properly made under a Civil Court decree otherwise than by proceedings by way of review. The effect of the final decree of a Civil Court for partition is to put an end to the co-tenancy and to vest in each person or group a sole estate in a specific property or allotment. The law does not provide for a suit in the Civil Courts under which these separated estates can be divested and a co-tenancy re-created for the purpose of making a fresh partition. PAT DEBI SARAN SINGH v. RAJNARS NATH DUBEY, (1918) PAT. 134; 5 P. L. W. 9 895

— s. 60 46
— s. 60 (c)—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), ss. 20, 21—Occupancy holding—Agriculturist, house of, whether transferable—Execution.

The house of an agriculturist is liable to sale in execution of a decree on foot of a mortgage made by him, when such house is not an appurtenance to his holding which he is forbidden by law to transfer. A NIBHAY LAL v. KALLIN 546

— ss. 64, 73, O. XXI, r. 89—Sale in execution, setting aside of, effect of, on creditor claiming rateable distribution—Decree-holder, whether can use attachment for execution of another decree—Alienation before re-attachment, effect of.

Where a sale is set aside under Order XXI, rule 89, Civil Procedure Code, the result is that there are no assets realised under which other creditors of the judgment-debtor can claim rateable distribution.

The attaching decree-holder in such a case cannot use the attachment for the satisfaction of other decrees obtained by him. He can only bring the property to sale a second time, if there has been no alienation of it by the judgment-debtor in the meantime. M GOTATAI VIGNESWARUDU v. VENKATA SURYANARAYANAMURTHY, 7 L. W. 573 782

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— s. 65 46
— s. 65—Auction-purchaser, right of, to claim profits from date of sale.

An auction-purchaser of a share in a village is entitled to claim profits from the date of the sale, and not only from the date when mutation is effected in his name in the village papers. O HASHMAT ALI v. MAHEWA ESTATE, 5 O. L. J. 31 248

— s. 73 782
— s. 73—Rateable distribution—Sale-proceeds of moveables realised by Nazir, whether assets received by Court.

Moveables belonging to a judgment-debtor were sold by auction by the Civil Nazir on different dates, and on each of these dates the Nazir drew up a list of the goods sold and of the prices realised showing the total receipts for each date separately:

Held, that the sale-proceeds realised on each date became assets received by the Court within the meaning of section 73 of the Civil Procedure Code, so that an application for rateable distribution could take effect only in respect of the sale-proceeds realised after the date of such application. P SURJAN SINGH-BUDH SINGH v. PRAG DAS-MANGAL SAIN, 33 P. R. 1918 108

— s. 92—Trust, public, for religious purposes—Endowment, deed of, silent as to nature of trust—Circumstantial evidence, weight of—Proof, nature of—Persons having right to worship in public temple, position of—Trustee not guilty of mismanagement or misappropriation—Scheme for better management of trust—Court, discretion of.

Where a deed of endowment did not expressly state whether the temple built by the executant was intended for private or for public worship, but it was found from extrinsic evidence that the executant was anxious to obtain religious benefit for her soul, that the temple had been from its very beginning open to the public for worship and that the customary religious festivals had been celebrated therein in a public manner:

Held, that under the above circumstances, the trust must be taken to be a public trust created for religious purposes.

Persons having a right to perform worship in a temple intended for public worship, are competent to institute a suit under section 92, Civil Procedure Code.

Where a Court does not find a trustee to be guilty of neglecting the trust or misappropriating its property, it has nevertheless full discretion to frame a scheme for the better management of the trust if under the circumstances such a course is deemed to be in the interests of the trust. O LAKSHMI KUNWAR v. MURARI KUNWAR, 5 O. L. J. 97 213

— ss. 97, 99 24
— s. 100 189
— s. 101 24

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— s. 102—'Cognizable,' meaning of—Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 35, effect of amendment of 1914 upon—Suit for value of trees, carried away—Trial as regular suit—Appeal, second, maintainability of—Amendment of Art. 35 before filing of second appeal, effect of.
A suit to recover the value of trees cut and carried away was filed in the Small Cause Court and was afterwards transferred to the regular file as a question of title was involved in the suit. Against the decree of the trial Court there was an appeal to the District Court, and from the decree of the latter Court a second appeal was filed in the High Court. It was objected that, under section 102, Civil Procedure Code, no second appeal lay. It was contended in answer that as the second appeal was filed after the amendment of Article 35 of Schedule II of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act in 1914, the second appeal was maintainable:

Held, that, as the appeal was against a decree in a suit of the nature cognizable by Small Cause Courts, no second appeal lay.

The word 'cognizable' in section 102, Civil Procedure Code, is restricted to the nature of the proceeding prior to decree and not to its character at the time of the second appeal.

The principle of law that a right to prefer an appeal, being a vested right cannot be affected by legislation, is equally applicable to parties who have acquired a right to a judgment being regarded as final and conclusive. M SUBRAMANIA Aiyar v. NAMA SIVAYA ASARI, 23 M. L. T. 255; (1918) M. W. N. 238

— s. 104 (2), O. XLIII, r. 1 (j)—Petition by auction-purchaser to set aside sale, dismissal of, in appeal—Appeal, second, whether lies.

No second appeal lies against an order passed in appeal upon a petition by an auction-purchaser to set aside a sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property. M SUNDARA SINGH v. PAZHAMALAI PADAYACHI 701

— s. 109, O. XLI, r. 23—Decree reversed on preliminary point—Remand for re-trial on merits, whether "final order"—Leave to appeal to Privy Council.

An order of the High Court, setting aside a decision of the lower Court that the trial of the suit is barred by res judicata, and remanding the suit for re-trial on the merits, is an ordinary order of remand which does not decide any of the questions between the parties, except that the suit is not barred by the rule of res judicata, and is not a "final order" within the meaning of section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code in respect of which leave to appeal to the Privy Council can be granted. PAT DABBY v. TAFAZUL HUSSAIN, (1918) PAT. 1; 4 P. L. W. 342

— s. 109 (a) 290
— s. 110—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 10, applicability of, to suit for accounts by minor against Administrator, whether substantial question of law.

In view of the state of authorities in India on the question of the applicability of section 10 of the Limitation Act to a suit by a minor against the administrator of his estate for accounts, the question is a substantial question of law within the meaning of section 110 of the Civil Procedure Code. PAT JANANDAN PRASAD THAKUR v. JANABHATI THAKURAIN 182

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— s. 115 653, 834
— ss. 115, 151, O. XLI, r. 23—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 13—Remand, order of—Refund of Court-fee—Court, duty of—Revision—High Court, powers of—Scope of s. 151.

Where an Appellate Court disposes of an appeal under rule 23 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code, the provisions of section 13 of the Court Fees Act automatically come into operation and the Court is bound to grant a certificate under that section. The refusal of the Court to grant the certificate amounts to a refusal to do what the law specifically says the Court must do and is either an illegality or a material irregularity within the meaning of section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Per Beaman, J.—Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code is intended to empower Courts to deal with their own decrees and orders and is not intended to give authority to superior Courts by way of conferring supplemental jurisdiction to that conferred by section 115 of the Code. B BHAUSING RAGHO v. CHAGANIRAM HARCHAND, 20 Bom. L. R. 348 552

— s. 115—Revision—Jurisdiction—Mistake of law, whether ground for revision.

Where a Court has jurisdiction to determine a matter and in the exercise of its jurisdiction it makes a mistake in law, that does not entitle the party against whom the decision is given to come to the High Court in revision.

Plaintiff brought a suit on a promissory-note executed by the defendant. Defendant pleaded infancy, whereupon the Court of first instance dismissed the suit. On appeal the Subordinate Judge found that the plaintiff was a minor but that he had fraudulently misrepresented his age, so that he was estopped from setting up his minority as a defence. It, therefore, decreed the suit. The suit being of small cause nature, the defendant applied in revision to the High Court:

Held, that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in holding the minor liable on the finding of fact arrived at by it, but that the mistake being a mere mistake of law the High Court could not interfere in revision. A DHARA SINGH v. GAYAN CHAND, 16 A. L. J. 441 761

— s. 145—Surety making himself liable for decretal money in case dispute not settled—Suit compromised—Decree based on compromise, whether can be executed against surety.

In an application for execution of a decree against the sureties of the judgment-debtor, it appeared that the sureties had made themselves liable to pay the decretal amount only in case the defendants did not settle the dispute and judgment was passed against them, but that the plaintiff had entered into a compromise with the defendants according to which the latter had made themselves liable to pay the total amount of money claimed by the plaintiff by certain instalments set forth in the deed of compromise:

Held, that as the decree was passed on the basis of the compromise without any mention being made of the sureties, it could not be executed against them under the terms of the surety bond. P R. K. KAPUR v. SHANKAR DAS, 9J P. W. R. 1918 992

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— s. 151 552, 468

— s. 151, O. XLV, r. 4—Consolidation of appeals to Privy Council—High Court, power of, to consolidate—Security for costs.

It was not intended by Order XLV, rule 4, to limit the powers of the High Court to consolidate cases to the purposes mentioned in that rule alone.

The power of consolidation is an inherent power of the High Court, which can be exercised in consolidating appeals to the Privy Council for the purpose of security for costs and to save expenses. PAT HAR PRASAD RAI v. BRIJ KISHEN DAS, 3 P. L. J. 44; (1918) Pat. 259 551

— s. 151, O. XXI, rr. 18, 19—Execution of decree for smaller sum, whether can be issued against party to whom larger sum is payable by applicant.

By a decree in a partition suit A became entitled to recover the sum of Rs. 2,130 from B. A preferred an appeal against that decree, which was dismissed and he became liable to pay to B Rs. 506 by way of costs of the appeal. Thereafter A applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council but this application was rejected and he was directed to pay to B further costs to the extent of Rs. 80.

Held, that on the principles embodied in Order XXI, rules 18 and 19, and in section 151, Civil Procedure Code, B was not entitled to take out execution for the smaller sums of Rs. 506 and Rs. 80 payable to him by A when a larger sum payable by him to A against whom he sought execution was due and remained unpaid. C BEJIN BEHARI SEN v. KRISHNA BEHARI SEN 246

— O. I, r. 8—Representative suit, leave for—Damages, claim for, maintainability of, in representative suit—Form of order—Objectors, position of—Leave, grant of, without reference to objectors—Scheme of management of trust, prayer for, validity of.

Leave to file a representative suit under Order I, rule 8, Civil Procedure Code, may be granted as on behalf of a community or body of persons even though some persons object to it. The order need not be restricted to the grant of leave on behalf of the persons not opposing.

Though leave cannot be granted to file a representative suit for damages, the prayer may be allowed in combination with other reliefs sought. The plaintiffs may be allowed to claim damages, not in their representative capacity but on account of the acts by which they were individually aggrieved.

A scheme of management of trust property may be prayed for in a representative suit, subject to objections when the scheme is actually framed.

Leave was granted under Order I, rule 8, Civil Procedure Code, to the plaintiff, a leading Mirasidar, to file a suit on behalf of 200 co-Mirasidars as trustees of a forest land for a declaration that the property belonged in common to them on trust, for an injunction restraining the defendants from trespassing on it, for damages and, if necessary, for a scheme of management. M KATHA PILLAI v. KANAKASUNDARAM PILLAI, 24 M. L. T. 20; 8 L. W. 160 423

— O. II, r. 2—Cause of action—Suit on non-existent cause of action, whether bars fresh suit on true cause of action.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The essential thing to be borne in mind in applying Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, is that the cause of action in the subsequent suit should be the same as the cause of action in the previous suit and not that the cause of action in the subsequent suit should have been made the subject of litigation in the former suit.

Where a suit is brought upon either a non-existent cause of action or upon a false cause of action, it will not bar the institution of a suit upon the true cause of action, because there is no identity of causes of action between the two suits.

A right which a litigant possesses without knowing or even having known that he possesses it cannot be regarded as a 'portion of his claim' within the meaning of rule 2, Order II. M DABARTHY NAIDU v. PALALA KUMARAMULLI, 7 L. W. 557; (1918) M. W. N. 427 969

— O. V, r. 15, O. XXX, r. 3—Munim, whether a member of family—Direction by Court to issue notice to party and his Pleader—Service on party's munim, whether sufficient.

A munim is not a member of the family of his employer within the meaning of Order V, rule 15, Civil Procedure Code.

In a suit for recovery of money the Court directed that notice should issue to the parties and their Pleaders that they should attend on a certain date. It appeared that no notice was served on the plaintiff's Pleader, but one was served upon the munim of the plaintiff's firm. The plaintiff not having appeared on the date fixed the suit was dismissed in default.

Held, that inasmuch as the Court actually directed that the notices should be served upon the plaintiffs themselves as well as upon their Pleaders, the service on the munim, even if he was the person having the control or management of the plaintiff's business, was not sufficient and that the Court had no power to dismiss the suit for default. P FIRM, RAM GOPAL KANHIA LAL v. NARAIN DAS 932

— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of plaint, when to be allowed.

An application for amendment of a plaint in second appeal was refused by the High Court on the ground that if the amendment were granted, the plaintiff would be able to start afresh on allegations wholly inconsistent with those made in the original plaint. C PADMA LOCHAN PATAR v. GIRIS CHANDRA KIL, 27 C. L. J. 392 241

— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of plaint, whether permissible on verbal suggestion in final reply.

An amendment which would have the effect of altering the nature of the suit, cannot be allowed upon a verbal suggestion made in final reply. S LOUIS DREYFUS & Co. v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 11 S. L. R. 103 173

— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings—Case closed for judgment.

Plaintiff brought a suit for possession of a site on the ground of his having been the owner of the same. The case was closed for judgment for 30th November 1916. The plaintiff applied to the Court on 25th November 1916, praying that a right of way six cubits broad should be given to him. The Trial

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Court held that the plaintiff was not the owner of the site, but it directed the defendant to remove his hut so as to allow a right of way as claimed by the plaintiff:

Held, that the plaintiff should not have been allowed to amend the plaint after the case had closed for judgment. N CHAINU v. MANBODH 894

— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings — Discretion of Court, principles governing.

Amendments of pleadings should be allowed when asked for by a party, provided the opposite party is not taken by surprise or precluded from adducing evidence or raising the necessary issues. Where, however, a party is agitating only a technical claim or the character of the suit is likely to be altered or where there is inordinate delay in asking for amendment, the Court would be justified in refusing to grant an amendment. The main considerations to be borne in mind are that multiplicity of suits should be avoided and the interests of substantial justice should be advanced.

Plaintiff sued for recovery of 2 out of 5 shares in one plot or in the alternative 2 out of 12 shares in that and another plot. Mesne profits were reserved for a separate action. The trial Court decreed only the first prayer, but on appeal the District Judge granted the second prayer. Before the appeal was heard, plaintiff had filed a suit to recover mesne profits in respect of the property decreed to him. After the disposal of the appeal, he applied for amendment of the plaint by substituting a claim for mesne profits of 2 out of 12 shares in both plots:

Held, that the amendment should be allowed. M RAMASWAMI REDDI v. GNGA REDDI 649

— O. VI, r. 17—Plaint, amendment of, for enhanced damages 556

— O. VII, r. 10 471

— O. VII, r. 10—Plaint, return of, for presentation to proper Court—Presentation to Court indicated, whether bars right of appeal—Pre-emption, suit for, valuation of—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 3 (1).

A party who complies with an order of Court returning a plaint to be filed in the proper Court by filing it in the Court indicated in the order does not forfeit his right of appeal against the order returning the plaint. M NARAYAN NAIR v. CHERIA KATHIRI KUTTY, 34 M. L. J. 397 89

— O. VIII, r. 5—Written statement—Omission to deny allegation of title in plaint, effect of.

Where, in a suit for possession of land, the defendant in his written statement did not specifically deny the allegation made by the plaintiff in his plaint that the property sued for formed a portion of a certain taluq and the Munsif, holding that there was a constructive admission by the defendant of the plaintiff's title as alleged in the plaint, decreed the suit without considering the evidence adduced on both sides on the question of title:

Held, that the lower Appellate Court was justified in reversing the decision of the Munsif on the ground that there was no such admission on the part of the defendant as would warrant a decision in favour of the plaintiff's title, specially as the trial Court had required proof of the plaintiff's title in spite of the so-called admission by the defendant. C NAJA MIA v. ABDUL KADAR 878

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— O. IX, r. 8 189
— O. IX, r. 13 250
— O. IX, r. 13, O. XLIII, r. 1 (d)—

Compromise decree, application to set aside, by person not party to decree, nature of—Application rejected—Appeal, whether lies.

Per Curiam (Richardson, J., dubitante).—An application to set aside compromise decree on the ground that the applicant was no party to the compromise and that he had given no authority to file the petition of compromise, is an application within the scope of Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code. An appeal lies from an order refusing such application. C BASIRUDDIN v. SADHU TAXTI, 22 C. W. N. 571 690

— O. XVII, r. 1 (1)—Adjournment, power of Court to grant—Order refusing adjournment, whether appealable—Appellate Court, discretion of, to interfere with order refusing adjournment.

Under rule 1 (1), Order XVII, of the Civil Procedure Code, a Court may at any time grant an adjournment if sufficient cause is shown; but no appeal is allowed from an order refusing adjournment and even where the refusal is impeached in an appeal from the decree, an Appellate Court is generally disinclined to interfere with the trial Judge's exercise of his discretion. N LAXMAN RAO v. VITHORA 898

— O. XVII, rr. 2, 3 200

— O. XVIII, r. 5—Deposition not read out in presence and hearing of Judge, admissibility of.—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 80, 91.

The provisions of Order XVIII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code, are adequately complied with if the depositions of witnesses are read over to them in a place within the sight of the presiding Judge and from which the witnesses can draw the attention of the Judge to any mistakes or omissions discovered by them.

Where, therefore, the deposition of a witness was read out by the Court clerk in a room next to the Court and at a distance of 30 feet from the Judge's seat:

Held, that the deposition was admissible in evidence and complied with the provisions of Order XVIII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code.

An irregularity in recording a deposition may be considered in determining the value of the document as evidence but it is not a sufficient ground for shutting it out altogether.

Neither section 80 nor section 91 of the Evidence Act renders such documents inadmissible in evidence. If the document is not in all particulars what it purports to be, the presumption permitted by section 80 would be rebutted. M MEANGO v. BAVIAH, (1918) M. W. N. 239; 7 L. W. 435; 19 Cr. L. J. 603 507

— O. XVIII, r. 5, non-compliance with provision of, whether makes deposition inadmissible—Object of provision—Deposition not read over to witness, whether admissible in evidence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 80.

The provision in Order XVIII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code, requiring a deposition to be read over to the witness is in its nature directory; non-compliance with it does not make the deposition entirely inadmissible in evidence (even in a prosecution for perjury in respect of the deposition) and the deposition can be proved in some way other than by calling in aid the provisions of section 80 of the Evidence Act.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Per Beachcroft, J.—The object of the provision of rule 5 of Order XVIII, Civil Procedure Code, requiring a deposition to be read over to a witness is to ensure accuracy. Non-compliance with it may create doubts as to whether the record correctly represents what the witness said, but it cannot affect the admissibility of the document in evidence if the making of the document is otherwise proved. C ELAHI BAKSHA v. EMPEROR, 27 C. L. J. 377; 22 C. W. N. 646; 19 Cr. L. J. 498 258

O. XX, r. 15—Partnership—Death of partner—Accounts, suit for, by surviving partner against representative of deceased partner, maintainability of.

The personal representative of a deceased partner is bound to give an account of what has been received on behalf of the partnership, but he will only be liable for the portion he represents to the extent of the assets he receives. The mere fact that a minor representative is personally unable to give the accounts will not absolve him from the obligation of getting the accounts prepared by the persons who were conversant with what took place and what money was received and spent and who were acting either for the deceased partner during his life or for the minor and the estate of the partner after his death.

Where a surviving partner sued the representative of a deceased partner for accounts, alleging that a much larger sum in connection with the partnership business was received by the deceased partner's estate than the plaintiff had received and that there would be a balance payable to him upon taking accounts:

Held, (1) that the suit was maintainable;

(2) that the proper procedure for the Court was to pass a preliminary decree directing that each party should furnish an account of what had been received and what had been spent. A SHANKAR LAL v. RAM BAHU, 16 A. L. J. 805 31

O. XX, r. 15—Partnership, suit for dissolution of—Decree—Time from which partnership is declared dissolved—Discretion of Court, nature of—Date of judgment, whether dissolution can commence from.

The discretion given to a Court by Order XX, rule 15, Civil Procedure Code, to fix a date from which a partnership is to be declared dissolved is a judicial and not an arbitrary discretion.

Ordinarily the Court should direct dissolution from the date of any notice 'given' in that behalf by one of the partners or from the date of the plaint, and where the parties have been at arm's length since the filing of the plaint, it should not declare that the partnership should stand dissolved from the date of the judgment. M SAMBASIVA AYYAR v. GANAPATHI AYYAR 727

O. XXI, r. 2—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 257A—Agreement by decree-holder to give time for discharge of decree not certified to Court—Breach of contract—Execution of decree in violation of agreement—Damages, suit for, maintainability of.

No suit lies for damages for breach of an agreement by a decree-holder to give time to the judgment-debtor for satisfaction of the decree where the agreement has not been certified to Court under Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, and there is no consideration to support it. M SIRTU SEETRAMAYYA v. TADAPALLI SODENMA, 7 L. W. 503; 24 M. L. T. 16; (1918) M. W. N. 292 16

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XXI, r. 2—Execution—Satisfaction of decree not certified to Court—Decree-holder purchasing property at auction sale—Purchase, validity of—Fraud.

During the course of an execution proceeding the decree was satisfied out of Court but the satisfaction was not certified to or brought to the notice of the Court. The decree-holder brought an equity of redemption belonging to the judgment-debtor to sale and purchased it himself. The judgment-debtor then brought a suit for redemption in respect of the property without having got the sale set aside:

Held, that the execution sale was a nullity inasmuch as by failing to certify the satisfaction of the decree to the Court, the decree-holder had committed a fraud on the Court, and that, therefore, the judgment-debtor was entitled to redeem the property. O GHASI RAM v. DALEU SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 92 222

O. XXI, r. 7, O. XXII, r. 6—Execution—Decree passed against deceased defendant, validity of—Decree, whether can be executed.

No Court can make a decree against a dead man, and a decree so made is a nullity. No question of the jurisdiction of the Court to make the decree arises in such a case.

It is a good answer to an application for execution against the alleged representatives of a judgment-debtor to show that the judgment-debtor was dead at the time the decree was made, and that such a decree is void and incapable of execution as against the deceased. A SHIPAT NARAIN RAI v. TIBBENI MISRA, 16 A. L. J. 327 21

O. XXI, rr. 17, 22—Sale in execution without notice to or substitution of legal representative of deceased judgment-debtor, whether invalid against other judgment-debtor—Sale of part of attached properties—Proceeds sufficient to satisfy decree—Subsequent sale of other lots, validity of.

One of several judgment-debtors died after their properties were duly attached in execution of an ex parte decree passed against them. The widow of the deceased judgment-debtor made an application for setting aside the ex parte decree, which was dismissed for default. Thereafter the decree-holder, without making an application to execute the decree against the widow of the deceased judgment-debtor and without serving a notice on her under Order XXI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code, put up the attached properties to sale after due publication of sale processes, and they were sold to a stranger to the decree on two successive days. An application made by all the judgment-debtors including the widow of the deceased judgment-debtor to set aside the sale having been dismissed, an appeal was preferred to the High Court by the judgment-debtors excepting the widow:

Held, (1) that as the widow of the deceased judgment-debtor was not a party to the appeal, the mere fact that the sale might have been capable of being avoided or void against the widow on account of the failure of the Court to issue a notice under Order XXI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code, could not affect the sale as against the other judgment-debtors—more especially when the appeal was preferred only on their behalf and the widow was satisfied with the judgment of the lower Court, holding that the interest of her husband was liable to be sold in execution of a decree according to which each of the judgment-debtors was liable to pay the whole decretal amount;

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

(2) that the question whether the sale was invalid was res judicata between the purchasers in execution and the widow of the deceased judgment-debtor by reason of the decision of the Courts below, namely, that the interest that her late husband had in the property was liable to be sold in discharge of his judgment-debt so that it could not be re-opened by the other judgment-debtors in support of their contention that the whole sale was invalid on account of irregularity in conducting it as against the widow.

Order XXI, rule 17, Civil Procedure Code, has nothing to do with the invalidity of the sale made to a stranger who bought without notice of the fact that the amount realised by a previous sale of other lots of the property attached was more than sufficient to satisfy the decree in execution. C

SURENDRA NATH SAHA v. BOLA RAM PODDAR 699

— O. XXI, rr. 18, 19 246

— O. XXI, r. 22 699

— O. XXI, r. 32 864

— O. XXI, rr. 32, 34—Compromise decree, breach of terms of—Damages, suit for, maintainability of—Cause of action.

A judgment-debtor, who does not voluntarily satisfy a decree, does not commit an actionable wrong for which the decree-holder can recover compensation by a separate suit.

Where, therefore, the defendant, who was under an obligation under the terms of a compromise decree to endorse certain promissory notes in plaintiff's favour, failed to do so, with the result that the promissory notes became barred:

Held, that plaintiff's remedy was to proceed in execution under Order XXI, rule 32 or rule 34, and not to seek compensation by a separate suit. M

MUTHU KARAU VENA ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR v. KANAKASABAI PILLAI, (1918) M. W. N. 333; 7 L. W. 563; 24 M. L. T. 34 689

— O. XXI, r. 34 689

— O. XXI, r. 35 (1)—Execution—Application for actual possession, maintainability of, after dismissal of execution case granting formal possession—Partition suit.

A decree-holder in a partition suit, who has been given formal possession of the portion of the properties allotted to him in an execution case which was dismissed after the delivery of the formal possession, can maintain a fresh application in execution for actual possession of the property under sub-rule 1 of rule 35 of Order XXI, Civil Procedure Code. C

KHETRA MOHAN KUNDU v. JOGENDRA CHANDEA KUNDU 7

— O. XXI, r. 57—Attachment in execution

—Sale proclamation, improper statement of value in —Sale set aside—Attachment, whether revives.

Where a sale is set aside for any reason other than default on the part of the decree-holder, the attachment, which has been obtained prior to the first sale being set aside, revives to support a second or subsequent application for execution and no fresh attachment is necessary. In other words, once an attachment is properly and legally obtained and the property attached is put to sale and the sale is afterwards set aside, the antecedent attachment revives and by reason of its revival supports a second application for leave to issue execution, unless the ground upon which the sale was set aside was default on the part of the decree-holder.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Obiter dictum.—When the parties are seriously at issue with regard to the valuation of the property offered for sale, it is the duty of the Court to go into the matter and determine the value in a judicial manner. PAT MAHAHARAT DUTTA v. SURJA KANTA, 3 P. L. J. 310 589

— O. XXI, r. 63 494

— O. XXI, r. 63—Execution—Attachment—Claim.

Under Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, the burden is on the plaintiff to establish his claim. M RAMA SHENOI v. HALLAGNA, 34 M. L. J. 295; 41 M. 205 703

— O. XXI, r. 89 782

— O. XXI, rr. 89, 90, 91, 92 46

— O. XXI, rr. 89, 92—Sale in execution, setting aside of—Deposit by judgment-debtor in treasury, whether deposit in Court—'Court', meaning of.

The deposit under Order XXI, rule 89, of the Civil Procedure Code of the purchase-money plus 5 per cent. compensation to the auction-purchaser, is an indulgence to the judgment-debtor. The auction-purchaser is entitled to the benefit of his purchase, unless the rule is strictly and completely complied with. Whether or not the section has been completely complied with, is a question which the Court has jurisdiction to decide and if in the exercise of such jurisdiction, it comes to an erroneous conclusion, the High Court is not entitled to interfere with its order in revision.

A judgment-debtor deposited the sum necessary for getting a sale set aside under Order XXI, rule 89, in the treasury owing to the Civil Court being closed on that day. On the re-opening of the Court he applied under the above rule, stating that he had already deposited the money in the treasury. The Court refused to set aside the sale on the ground that the deposit had not been made in the Civil Court:

Held, that as the word 'Court' in Order XXI, rule 89, means Civil Court, the Court had jurisdiction to decide whether the deposit had been made in Court and that the order of the Court, even if it was erroneous, could not be interfered with in revision.

The Code gives a right of appeal to an auction-purchaser against an order setting aside a sale, as he is the party mainly affected by the order. A FAZAL RAB v. MANZUK AHMAD, 16 A. L. J. 433 773

— O. XXI, r. 90 46

— O. XXI, r. 90—Execution—Sale—Irregularity, effect of—Sale, whether can be set aside.

An execution sale cannot be set aside on the ground of irregularity under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code, if there is nothing to warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference, that the inadequacy of price was the result of the irregularity.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

C TAIMUDDI BEPARI v. SHAIKH LAKPAT BEPARI 212

— O. XXI, r. 91 46

— O. XXI, r. 92 46, 773

— O. XXI, r. 93—Auction-purchase, remedy of, for recovery of purchase-money, on failure of suit for possession—Suit for possession under Act XIV of 1882, dismissal of, after repeal of Act, effect of—Suit for purchase-money, maintainability of—Interest, rate of, proper.

A Court-sale purchaser, whose suit for possession of the property put up for sale has failed, is not entitled to recover the purchase-money by suit, but can do so only by petition under Order XXI, rule 93, Civil Procedure Code.

Where, however, the suit for possession was instituted while Act XIV of 1882 was in force and was dismissed after its repeal by Act V of 1908, the plaintiff's right to re-payment of his purchase-money must be deemed to have accrued to him before the change in the law and the right having been preserved to him under the new enactment, a suit to enforce that right is maintainable.

The right dates from the purchase of the property and is primarily to the property, and secondarily in the alternative and contingently to re-payment, the latter branch of it becoming enforceable only on failure in respect of the former. The alternative and contingent right is preserved to the purchaser under section 6 (c) of Act X of 1897.

A new rule of limitation must be read subject to an implied exception in cases where its provisions would absolutely destroy the right of suit which was in existence when that rule came into force.

In a suit for recovery, by a Court-sale purchaser, of the purchase-money, the Court should not award a higher rate of interest than six per cent. up to date of suit. M TIRUMALAISAMI NAIDU v. SUBRAMANIAM CHETTIAR, 40 M 1009 109

— O. XXI, r. 96 608

— O. XXI, r. 96—Formal possession, effect of, against stranger to decree.

Formal possession, the nature of which is described in Order XXI, rule 96, of the Civil Procedure Code, is no possession at all against any party whose rights are not affected by the decree. O TASAUDUQ HUSAIN v. AFGHAR HUSAIN, 21 O. C. 70 606

— O. XXI, rr. 100, 101—Dispossession from immovable property—Application for restoration of possession, dismissal of, for applicant's failure to produce evidence—Order, whether under r. 101—Suit, regular, brought more than one year after date of order, whether barred.

The defendants obtained possession of the fields in suit in execution of a decree for foreclosure. Plaintiff's predecessors applied to the executing Court complaining of their dispossession by the defendants and asking to be restored to possession. The application was dismissed as applicants failed to produce or summon witnesses. More than one year after they instituted a regular suit for possession:

Held, that no order had been passed under Order XXI, rule 101, of the Civil Procedure Code which would be conclusive in the absence of a suit instituted within the period allowed by Article 11 (a) of the Limitation Act.

However short and summary the investigation may be, an order under rule 101 of Order XXI of the Civil Procedure Code must be based upon the merits of the application, that is, an opinion on such facts as are before the Court as to whether the applicant was in possession or not. A mere dismissal in default or for non-prosecution is not an order under rule 101.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The test as to whether an order has properly been passed under rule 101, Order XXI, is whether there was an investigation and the order was passed as the result of the investigation. N BHIMBAO PATEL v. MARTAND, 14 N. L. R. 66 102

— O. XXII, r. 3 (2) 963

— O. XXII, r. 4 959

— O. XXII, rr. 4, 9—Appeal—Death of respondent—Legal representative not brought on record—Abatement of appeal—Application to set aside abatement—Sufficient cause—Ignorance of appellant.

It is the duty of a person who is prosecuting an appeal to keep himself informed of the existence of his adversary, and unless special reasons are shown why this duty has not been performed, an application to set aside an abatement of the appeal by reason of the legal representative of a deceased respondent not having been brought upon the record within the period of limitation allowed for that purpose should not be entertained.

A mere plea of the ignorance of the appellant that a respondent had died is not a sufficient cause for setting aside an order of abatement under Order XXII, rule 9 of the Civil Procedure Code.

In cases of this kind the question of sufficient cause should be determined with reference to the facts of each case. O MUHAMMAD ARKABI v. JALU, 21 O. C. 68 594

— O. XXII, r. 6 21

— O. XXII, r. 9 594

— O. XXIII, r. 1 969

— O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit, leave for—Judgment, statement in, concerning point not raised, desirability of.

A suit brought to recover a jote on the footing that it was a kaemi jote was dismissed by the trial Court as well as by the Appellate Court on the ground that the jote was not kaemi. The question whether the plaintiffs had acquired an occupancy right was left open by the trial Court but the Appellate Court, while affirming the decision of the trial Court, stated in its judgment that if the question of occupancy right had been before it the plaintiff's suit would be barred by limitation:

Held, that the question of limitation as well as of the right of occupancy should be left open, as the plaintiffs might be prejudiced by the statement in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court in case they brought a suit to enforce the right of occupancy.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs could not be allowed to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. C AMBIKA CHARAN CHAKRAVARTY v. SARAT CHANDRA BANU 913

— O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to bring fresh suit, application for—Defect curable by amendment of pleadings—Leave, whether should be granted.

An application for leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit under Order XXIII, rule 1, of the Civil Procedure Code should not be granted if the defect on the basis of which the leave to withdraw is asked for can be cured by amendment of the pleadings. O RAMESHWAR BAKSH SINGH v. RASUL BEG, 21 O. C. 66 603

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— O. XXIII, r. 3 230
 — O. XXIV, r. 2 638
 — O. XXX, r. 3 932
 — O. XXX, r. 9, applicability of—Partnership—Suit by one partner against another or between firms having common partners for recovery of monies due on accounts, maintainability of.

No suit lies as between partners or between firms having common partners for recovery of monies without asking for accounts.

Order XXX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, contemplates the possibility of suits between a firm and one or more of the partners therein and suits between firms having one or more partners in common, but it does not profess to lay down when and under what circumstances such suits would be entertained and it is not within the scope of the Civil Procedure Code to lay down any such proposition. M LAKSHMANAN CHETTY v. NAGAPPA CHETTY, 34 M. L. J. 403 86

— O. XXXII, r. 3 (4)—Minor—Guardian ad litem, appointment of—Notice, service of, on natural guardian—Fraud—Negligence of guardian ad litem, effect of—Decree set aside on ground of fraud, effect of.

Order XXXI, rule 3, clause 4, of the Civil Procedure Code, requires that a notice for the appointment of a guardian ad litem should be served upon the natural guardian of the minor.

Where a guardian ad litem of a minor defendant is guilty of negligence and no attempt is made by him to protect the interests of the minor in the suit, the decree obtained in the suit will not bind the minor.

Where a decree which cannot be split up is set aside on the ground of fraud at the instance of one of several judgment-debtors, the entire decree must be set aside. Pat BHAIRO PRASAD SAHU v. RAM CHANDRA PRASAD, 4 P. L. W. 373 253

— O. XXXIII, rr. 1, 3, 5—Companies, right of, to sue in forma pauperis—'Person', meaning of—Explanation to rule, scope of—Liquidator of Company, right of, to appear for Company, though personally not a pauper—Commission, payment of, to liquidator, whether disqualification.

Order XXXIII of the Civil Procedure Code applies to suits by Companies and Nidhis and the latter can take advantage of its provisions if they are paupers.

The word 'person' in the Order has the same meaning as in the General Clauses Act unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context and includes any Company or Association or body of individuals, whether incorporated or not.

The explanation to rule 1 of the Order simply allows deduction of the value of wearing apparel where the applicant has such apparel. It cannot be construed to mean that only persons who, in law, can possess wearing apparel, can sue as paupers.

Under rule 3 of the Order, the liquidator can fulfil all the obligations of a pauper petitioner required under the Order and can appear for the

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Company and present the petition in person.

The real question for the purpose of Order XXXIII being who is the actual plaintiff and whether he is a pauper within the meaning of the explanation to rule 1 of the Order, a liquidator can act for a pauper Company though he is not personally a pauper.

The payment of commission to the liquidator does not make him a person interested in the subject-matter of the suit within the meaning of Order XXXIII, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code. The provision only applies to agreements between a pauper and a third person with reference to the subject-matter of the suit. M PERUMAL KOUNDAN v. VENKATASAMI NAYUDU, 31 M. L. J. 421; 41 M. 624 164

— O. XXXIII, rr. 3, 5 164
 — O. XXXIII, r. 5 (d), scope of—Pauperism, enquiry into—Jurisdiction to determine doubtful questions of law—Limitation, decision on question of, legality of.

Order XXXIII, rule 5 (d), Civil Procedure Code, applies only to cases where the allegations of the petitioner do not show a cause of action and it precludes an elaborate enquiry into doubtful and complicated questions of law during the enquiry into pauperism.

A question of limitation cannot be determined at the stage contemplated by Order XXXIII, rule 5, especially if its decision depends on the taking of evidence. M GOVINDASAMI PILLAI v. MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, KUMBakonam, 34 M. L. J. 399; 41 M. 620 95

— O. XXXIV, r. 1—Redemption suit—Suit withdrawn as against one of several mortgagees—Maintainability of suit.

Where in a redemption suit the plaintiff withdraws his claim as against one of the mortgagees, the suit should be dismissed for non-joinder of necessary parties. Pat DHURI PATAK v. TIMAL SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 391 650

— O. XXXIV, r. 5 (2) 76
 — O. XXXIV, r. 5, sub-r. 2 657

— O. XXXVIII, r. 5, Appendix F, Form 6, Sch. II, para. 16—Surety bond for property sought to be attached before judgment—Suit referred to arbitration—Decree in terms of award—Surety, liability of.

When a suit is referred to arbitration and the Court pronounces judgment for the amount of the award, the amount is "adjudged" by the Court.

A surety gave security under Order XXXVIII, rule 5 of the Civil Procedure Code for the value of the property sought to be attached before judgment. The suit was referred to arbitration and a decree having been made in the terms of the award, it was sought to be executed against the surety.

Held, that the reference to arbitration was an ordinary incident in the suit and the amount awarded was in a judgment against the defendant and was one for which the surety was liable. S UMERMAL JANIMAL v. FIRM OF BROJRAJ-HASSOMAL, 11 S. L. R. 122 429

— O. XL, r. 1—Mortgage decree—Execution—Receiver, appointment of—Objection by person not party to suit, rejection of—Appeal, whether lies—Revision—High Court, power of interference of

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

A Receiver was appointed in execution of a mortgage decree. The petitioner who was not a party to the suit objected to the Receiver taking possession of the property on the ground that his father had taken a lease of the property and that he was entitled to retain possession, because although the lease was subsequent to the mortgage, yet he had paid off debts and other charges prior to the decree in the suit under which the sale had been held, and that he was entitled to retain possession of the property as holder of prior charges. The objection was overruled, on the ground that the lease had no existence in the eye of the law having been made during the pendency of the mortgage suit. The objector appealed to the High Court and also filed an application for revision:

Held, that the objector, not having been a party to the suit, had no right of appeal to the High Court.

Held, in revision, however, that the lower Court's order overruling the objection, must be set aside, (a) because the objector not being a party to the execution proceedings was not bound by the order appointing the Receiver and the lower Court had, therefore, no jurisdiction to overrule his objection unless it was satisfied that the claim was not made bona fide or was made really on behalf of one of the parties to the case, and (b) because the lower Court had not dealt at all with the claim that the objector was entitled to a prior charge. PAT INDERDEO NARAIN SINGH v. GOURI SHANKER, (1918) PAT. 138; 4 P. L. W. 414 177

O. XL, r. 1—Receiver, appointment of, principles followed in—"Just and convenient", effect of the substitution of the words, in new Code—Discretion of Court in appointing Receiver—Appellate Court, interference by.

The intention of the Legislature in substituting the words "just and convenient" in place of the phrase "necessary for the realization, preservation, or better custody or management, of any property moveable or immoveable the subject of a suit or attachment," in Order XL, rule 1, of the new Civil Procedure Code, was to bring the law in India into conformity with that in England.

The power of appointing a Receiver should be exercised in India in accordance with principles already settled by the Court of Chancery in England, subject to such modifications as conditions peculiar to India may suggest.

These principles are the preservation of the estate pending litigation on a consideration of the merits of the conflicting titles, the risk to the tenants and other circumstances of the case. The Court, however, is always reluctant to dispossess a party in actual possession under a prima facie title.

An order directing a Receiver to manage a partnership business where all the partners are not parties to the suit is ultra vires.

A Court of Appeal, though slow to interfere with the discretion of the lower Court in the appointment of a Receiver, would interfere if satisfied that that discretion has not been exercised in accordance with settled principles of law.

It would be mischievous to appoint a Receiver as a matter of course without regard to the principles governing such appointments.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The appointment of a Receiver is unnecessary where there is no allegation of any act of waste or mismanagement but on the contrary there are partners in the estate other than the litigating parties who are interested in seeing that the property is kept safe and regular accounts are kept of the business. S MIKANBAI v. DASSIMAL GANGARAM, 11 S. L. R. 115 224

O. XLI, rr. 5, 6—Appeal—Stay of execution, application for, pending disposal of appeal—Stay of sale—Powers of Appellate Court—Jurisdiction.

An Appellate Court has power, on an original petition presented to it, to direct stay of sale of immoveable property in execution of the decree under appeal before it. The inherent powers of the Appellate Court recognised by Order XLI, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code, are not cut down or limited by the special and exceptional power conferred on the executing Court by Order XLI, rule 6. M LAKSHMANAN CHETTY v. PALANIAPPA CHETTY, 34 M. L. J. 470; 7 L. W. 612; 24 M. L. T. 18, (1918) M. W. N. 502 30

O. XLI, r. 22—Cross-objections, failure to file—Respondent, right of, to support decree

A party who is content to accept the lower Court's decision can resist an appeal from that decision on the ground that the decree errs in favour of the appellant. In such a case the respondent, not having appealed nor filed cross-objections, cannot ask that the decree should be altered in his favour, but he is entitled to urge that if he can show that the decree errs in favour of the appellant it should not be disturbed. P MOHAMMAD ALI v. PARMANAND, 48 P. W. R. 1918 232

O. XLI, r. 23 290, 552

O. XLI, rr. 23, 27—Appellate Court, power of—Lower Court refusing to record evidence—Remand, order of, validity of—Procedure.

Where an Appellate Court considers that certain evidence refused to be recorded by the lower Court ought to have been recorded, it has no power to remand the suit for re-hearing ab initio under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, but can direct any additional evidence to be recorded, under Order XLI, rule 27. O FIDA ABHAS v. RAHIM BAKHSI, 5 O. L. J. 139 832

O. XLI, r. 27 832

O. XLIII, r. 1 (a) 471

O. XLIII, r. 1 (d) 690

O. XLIII, r. 1 (j) 701

O. XLIV, r. 1—Appeal in forma pauperis—Application rejected—Applicant, whether entitled to pay Court-fee on appeal.

An application under Order XLIV, rule 1, of the Civil Procedure Code, asking for leave to appeal in forma pauperis was rejected under the proviso to the rule. The applicant then filed a petition praying that he might be permitted to pay Court-fees on his memorandum of appeal. The petition was rejected on the ground that the appeal had already been dismissed:

Held, (1) that what was rejected under the proviso to Order XLIV, rule 1, was the application for permission to appeal in forma pauperis, and that the memorandum of appeal was still before the Court;

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

(2) that the Court refused to exercise its jurisdiction in not allowing the Court-fees to be paid on the memorandum of appeal. A MUHAMMAD FARZAND ALI v RAHAT ALI, 16 A. L. J. 303

— O. XLV, r. 4 29
 — O. XLVII, r. 2 551
 — Appendix F, Form 6 13
 — Sch. II, paras. 1, 3 429
 — paras. 14, 15—Arbitration 321

— Award by some out of several arbitrators, validity of.

The parties to a dispute referred it to six arbitrators agreeing that the verdict should be, if necessary, the verdict of the majority. The arbitrators recorded the evidence of the parties, but no decision was arrived at. Thereupon two of the arbitrators withdrew, and the remaining arbitrators, after notice to the defendants but in their absence, recorded afresh the evidence offered by the plaintiffs and gave an award:

Held, that the award, being based upon fresh proceedings and fresh evidence taken by four out of six arbitrators, was invalid and illegal. A KALI CHARAN PANDE v. GUPT NATH MISRA, 16 A. L. J. 807

— paras. 14, 15, 21—Arbitration, reference to, out of Court—Revocation of submission by guardian of minor—Award binding minor, validity of—Absence of guardian in proceedings before arbitrators, effect of—Arbitrators, duty of—Misconduct. 34

The principles of Order XXXII, rule 11, Civil Procedure Code, apply to references to arbitration made out of Court.

Where the guardian of a minor, on whose behalf a reference was made to arbitration, has been grossly negligent or has acted fraudulently in conducting the proceedings before the arbitrators, it is open to the minor to impeach the award by a suit instituted through a guardian or when he attains majority.

The Court may also refuse to file the award on objection taken on behalf of the minor.

Where a reference on behalf of the minor is revoked by the guardian and the arbitrators nevertheless proceed with the reference, it is the duty of the guardian to watch the proceedings on the minor's behalf, and any award passed binding the minor without his being duly represented is liable to be vacated at his instance. It is the duty of the arbitrators to see that the minor is properly represented.

For Abdur Rahim, J.—An award cannot be said to be ipso facto invalid because it is not shown to be advantageous or beneficial to the minor.

An award that is invalid under the law governing minors, as where it is passed on a reference out of Court without the minor being duly represented, comes within the expression 'or otherwise invalid' in paragraph 15 (c) of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, and the Court can, for that reason, set aside the award.

There is no distinction between void and voidable awards so far as paragraph 15 of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, is concerned. The rule itself states the circumstances under which an award becomes void in cases dealt with in paragraph 14, suggesting that awards which can be set aside under rule 15 are not to be treated as void awards.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The words 'or otherwise invalid' in paragraph 15 (c) of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, are not ejusdem generis with the other cases mentioned in the clause, but are meant to include all cases of invalidity on grounds other than those mentioned.

For Oldfield, J.—Under paragraph 21 (1), Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, the Court must be satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and must, therefore, enquire into the validity of the reference. In such enquiry the question of benefit to the minor can be raised.

An award passed on a reference out of Court binding a minor who was not in fact represented in proceedings before the arbitrators, should be set aside under paragraph 15 (1) of the Schedule as for the arbitrator's misconduct.

An arbitrator fails in his duty and is guilty of misconduct if he does not secure for each party an opportunity to present his case, and he should even go beyond strict legal requirements to do so.

An arbitrator should refrain from passing an award, so long as he is deprived of the power to pass a just one, and should either adjourn the proceedings in case a change in the representation of the minor is probable, or, if one is not probable either generally or within the time, if any, fixed for the award he should refuse to act. M LAKSHMINARAYANA TANTRI v. RAMACHANDRA TANTRI, 74 M. L. J. 71; 23 M. L. T. 89

— Sch. II, para. 14 (c), scope of—Arbitration, reference to—Award, erroneous view of law in—Court, whether can set aside award—Reference as to right to succession of Hindu alleged to be congenitally blind—Award giving life-interest, legality of. 763

An award cannot be set aside under clause (c) of paragraph 14 of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that the arbitrators have given an erroneous decision on a point of law.

Clause (c) of paragraph 14, of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code, should be confined to cases like those where the arbitrator perversely and manifestly misapplies a rule of succession or applies to the parties a rule by which they are not bound. Where the arbitrator has applied his mind honestly and has arrived at a decision to the best of his ability, the fact that the Judge might take a different view is not a ground for holding that the award is illegal on its face.

Where a reference was made to arbitrators as to the right of inheritance of the plaintiff who was alleged by defendants to be congenitally blind, and the arbitrators awarded to plaintiff a life-interest in a fourth share in the properties subject to its becoming an absolute interest in case the plaintiff married:

Held, that the award was not liable to be set aside under paragraph 14 (c) of Schedule II, Civil Procedure Code. M MADEPALLI VENKATASAMI v. MADEPALLI SURAMMA, 34 M. L. J. 323; 24 M. L. T. 60

Civil Procedure Code—1908—conold.

— Sch. II, para. 16 429
paras. 17, 20, 21, scope and applicability of—Application to file award made before delivery of award—(Order, whether appealable—Material irregularity in proceedings of arbitrators—Revision.

Paragraph 20 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code prescribes the procedure to be followed in respect of an application for filing an award which has already been made without the intervention of the Court, and does not apply to a case where up to the date of filing of the application the arbitrators have not made their award.

Where, therefore, the parties to a dispute entered into an agreement to refer it to arbitration and after the commencement of proceedings by the arbitrators but before the delivery of any award, the plaintiff made an application under paragraphs 17, 20 and 21 of the Second Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code, whereupon the Court made an order directing the award to be filed in Court:

Held, that the order was not one under paragraphs 20 and 21 and was not, therefore, appealable.

A revision lies against a decree based upon an arbitration award on the ground of material irregularity, but that material irregularity must have reference to the proceedings of the lower Court and not to those of the arbitrators. P. ALLAH DIN v. BASHAH BEGAM, 90 P. W. R. 1918 647

— paras. 20, 21 647
para. 20—Arbitration—Dispute about partition of joint property—Private reference to arbitration—Award settling shares of parties—Application to file award in Court, whether maintainable.

An award which does not partition agricultural land but merely settles the shares of the parties therein, may be filed in Court:

Where, therefore, a dispute relating to the partition of joint property including agricultural land, was privately referred to arbitration and one of the parties applied under paragraph 20 of the second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code for the filing of the award in Court:

Held, that inasmuch as the award did not actually partition the agricultural land, there could be no objection to the filing of the award. P. JOYIND LAL v. MUNI LAL, 81 P. W. R. 1918 166

— para. 21 647, 763
Sch. III, para. 11—Sale-deed, executed but not registered—Collector, permission granted by, before registration, validity of.

Plaintiff sued for possession of property under a sale-deed executed during the pendency of an attachment when the execution proceedings were before the Collector, who accorded his sanction to the sale after the execution but before the registration of the sale-deed:

Held, that permission having been granted while the sale was complete for want of registration, the sale was not void. N. PARWATRAO v. RAMJI 240

Company—Liquidation—Question decided by liquidating Court, whether can be re-opened by regular suit.

The Legislature never intended that matters should be decided twice over, once by the liquidating Court Company—conold.

and then again by the regular Courts. Therefore, a question which has once been settled by the liquidating Court, cannot be re-opened by a regular suit. P. KISHEN DAS v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DOARA BANK, LTD., 40 P. R. 1918; 60 P. W. R. 1918 84

Compromise, whether binding on person not party to it—Execution—Sale set aside on compromise between auction-purchaser and mortgagee—Surplus sale-proceeds taken away by judgment-debtor, whether liable to be refunded by order of Court on compromise—Appeal—Revision.

No one can be bound by a compromise to which he is not a party.

After the sale of a raiyati holding in execution of a rent-decree, the mortgagee of the holding, who in execution of his mortgage-decree had purchased the holding, applied to have the sale set aside under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code. A compromise was effected between him and the auction-purchaser of the holding and was given effect to by an order of the Court which was as follows:—

“The application for setting aside the sale is granted in terms of the rotenamah and the sale is set aside. The judgment-debtors will deposit the surplus sale-proceeds taken by them at once for payment to the petitioner”:

Held, that the order relating to the refund of the surplus sale-proceeds was not binding on the judgment-debtors who were no party to the compromise and was not capable of execution as against them, that there was no jurisdiction to make the order in the first instance and there was no jurisdiction to enforce it.

Held, also, that no appeal lay to the High Court on behalf of the judgment-debtors but the matter was one for revision by the High Court. C. ABDUL KARIM v. MEHRUNESA 33

Construction of document—Grant, deed of, interpretation of—Under-proprietary rights, whether conferred—Perpetual lease.

Where a deed of grant, which was executed by the superior proprietors of a village and wound up with a declaration that it had been drawn up as a deed of perpetual lease, put the grantee in possession of a specified share in the village and of all rights attaching thereto; declared expressly that the grant made to him was for generation after generation, provided that the grantee as lessee was to deposit a certain amount of money per year in the Government Treasury for malguzari and in addition to pay the lessors another sum per year by way of malikana; stipulated that the grantors were to have mutation made in favour of the grantee by setting his name recorded in khana milkiat; and gave the lessee the powers of distraint, of suing for arrears of rents and of ejecting tenants:

Held, that the deed conferred upon the grantee rights of a perpetual lessee and not of an under-proprietor.

In construing a deed the terms of which appear to be clear enough and which purports to be nothing more than a deed of lease, it is not permissible to attribute to the lessor an intention to confer rights of transfer unless there are express words to that effect or unless such an intention is necessarily implied in the language of the grant. O KALKA SINGH v. SURAJ BALI LAL, 5 O. I. J. 60 208

Construction of document—concl'd.

—Sale-deed, whether can be treated as deed of gift on failure of consideration.

Where a deed purporting to be a deed of sale fails for want of consideration, it is not open to the Court, in the absence of any indication in the deed itself, to treat it as a deed of gift.

A deed must be construed by what appears within the four corners of the document itself and the Court cannot go outside the deed for the purpose of showing the intention of the maker. PAT CHULHAI v. BALA BUKSH SETHI, 3 P. L. W. 206; (1917) PAT. 369 330 —Sale or mortgage - Consideration, non payment of, effect of.

Where a document is in the form of an outright sale, the executant is precluded from showing that it is in fact a mortgage but he is entitled to show that the consideration has not been paid, and he is entitled to retain possession until the consideration is paid. L B HARDUM SINGH v. MU. PO HTU 931

—"Up to" or "Until" a certain day, meaning of 305

Contempt of Court—High Court, power of, to punish summarily for contempt—Advertisement for demonstration against Judge, whether contempt—Apology, effect of.

Per Peacock, C. J.—An advertisement published in a newspaper for a demonstration against a Judge for acts done in Court may be a contempt of Court as well as defamation, although it cannot be said that in every case a demonstration got up in order to obtain an expression of public opinion concerning the acts of a Judge would be a contempt.

If anonymous letters are sent to the press containing false statements, the press is responsible for them if the name of the author is not given up.

To say that a sentence is "cruel" may be a contempt of Court, though it would be no contempt if the remark is merely that the sentence is a severe one.

Per Macpherson, J.—The High Court has power to proceed by way of contempt even when the contempt is not committed in Court or during the pendency of a suit.

Per Curiam.—The fact of his making an apology does not entitle the person charged with contempt of Court to his discharge as a matter of right. C In the matter of BANKS AND FENWICK, 26 C. L. J. 401; 19 CR. L. J. 449 113

—what constitutes—High Court, power of, to punish contempt summarily when committed out of Court—Printer and publisher of newspaper, liability of, for contempt—Directors of limited company carrying on newspaper, liability of, for contempt—Civil and criminal contempt, distinction between—Construction of writings alleged to be contempt of Court—Secondary evidence of returns in custody of Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, whether admissible.

Per Sanderson, C. J., and Mookerjee, J.—In deciding whether an article published in a newspaper is or is not a contempt of Court, the question is not whether the article in fact obstructed or interfered with the due course of justice but whether it is "calculated" to obstruct and interfere with the due course of justice.

Contempt of Court—cont'd.

An allegation against a litigant that he is attempting to get a Bench constituted in such a way as would in his opinion give him a favourable decision, is calculated to obstruct or interfere with the course of justice and is, therefore, a contempt.

Per Curiam.—The High Courts in India are superior Courts of Record. The offence of contempt of Court and the powers of the High Court to punish it are the same in India as in the superior Courts in England and the High Court has power to punish summarily a contempt of Court committed by the publication of a libel on the Court or on the Judges when the Court is not sitting.

The printer and publisher of a newspaper is liable for contempt even though he was not aware of the subject constituting such contempt.

The jurisdiction which the Court has in respect of a contempt of Court should be exercised with great care and should only be exercised when the case is beyond all reasonable doubt, and this should especially be the case when the proceedings are at the instance of the Court itself.

Per Woodroffe, J.—In contempt cases the Court does not seek to vindicate any personal interest of the Judges but the general administration of justice, which is a public concern. Proceedings for contempt by scandalising the Court are not obsolete.

All proceedings, whether in respect of civil or criminal contempts, are of a criminal nature when their object is to punish by fine or imprisonment. But it does not follow that the procedure in such cases is in all respects the same as in an ordinary criminal case. In fact both the offence of contempt as also the jurisdiction and procedure under which it is tried are sui generis. There is but one rule of evidence which in India applies both to civil and criminal trials, and that is contained in the definition of "proved" and "disproved" in section 3 of the Evidence Act.

One cannot escape either contempt or libel merely by relying upon a rumour.

It is a contempt of Court to prejudice or attempt to prejudice a litigant before it and to interfere with the course of justice.

The question whether persons in the position of directors of a company carrying on a newspaper are responsible for contemptuous articles published in the paper must depend upon the facts of each case.

Per Mookerjee, J.—In ascertaining the true meaning of articles published in a newspaper and alleged to be contemptuous, the obvious course to pursue is to read the offending articles as they stand and to attach to the words used their natural meaning without the assistance of a laborious commentary. The meaning and intent are to be determined by a fair interpretation of the language used and by a consideration of the general tone of the writing. Disclaimer on the part of the publisher as to intentional disrespect to the Court is not a sufficient defence when the purpose and meaning of the writing is obviously of a contrary import. No doubt if the language is fairly capable of an innocent interpretation, the Court will not read into it a sinister import. But if the intent is fairly clear, liability to punishment for contempt of Court cannot be successfully avoided by the use of a transparent artifice.

Contempt of Court—contd.

Contempt by a speech or writing may be by scandalising the Court itself or by abusing parties to an action or by prejudicing mankind in favour of or against a party before the cause is heard.

A criminal contempt is conduct that is directed against the dignity and authority of the Court. A civil contempt, on the other hand, is failure to do something ordered to be done by a Court in a civil action for the benefit of the opposing party therein. Consequently in the case of a criminal contempt as the primary purpose is the vindication of the public authority by the punishment of an act committed against the majesty of the law the proceeding conforms as nearly as possible to proceedings in criminal cases. In the case of a civil contempt the proceeding in its initial stages at least may be deemed as instituted at the instance of a party and thus to possess a civil character. But here also refusal to obey the order of the Court may render it necessary for the Court to adopt punitive measures against the persons who have defied its authority; at that stage at least the proceedings may assume a criminal character.

A proceeding to punish for contempt has the essential qualities of a criminal proceeding, whether the proceeding is initiated primarily to vindicate the Court's authority or solely as a coercive or remedial measure to enforce the rights of the litigants or for both these purposes combined.

Supplementary evidence cannot be given so as to prejudice the position of an accused.

It cannot be held as a matter of law that the directors of a limited company which owns a newspaper are liable to be committed for contempt of Court on account of a libel published in the paper.

Per Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ.—Secondary evidence of the returns filed with and in the custody of the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies is admissible, as such returns constitute public records of private documents within the meaning of section 74 (2) of the Evidence Act.

The term "record" includes a collection of documents.

A Division Bench (Mookerjee and Cuming, JJ.) held in an appeal that the Calcutta Improvement Trust had no power under the Calcutta Improvement Act to acquire land compulsorily for the purpose of recoupment. In three other cases Greaves, J., sitting on the Original Side, decided that the Trust had such power. When the appeals from Mr. Justice Greaves were about to be heard by the High Court hearing appeals from the Original Side, the following two articles were published in the "Anurita Bazar Patrika" newspaper in its issues of the 18th and 22nd May 1917, respectively:

"There is a mischievous rumour afloat, which should be contradicted. It is stated that a vigorous attempt is being made to get up a Bench to consider the appeal on the judgment of Mr. Justice Greaves in connection with the acquisition of surplus land by the Calcutta Improvement Trust according to somebody's choice. We do not believe that it is possible for any one, far less the Chairman of the Trust, to secure a Bench after his own heart as a counterpoise to the Mookerjee and Cuming Bench. We are sure the interest of every ratepayer is safe in the hands of the Hon'ble Judges, and we do not think that any Official of the Trust can go so far."

Contempt of Court -concl.

"Something like consternation prevails on account of the proposed new constitution of the Appellate Bench of the Calcutta High Court before which appeals against the awards of the Improvement Trust are to be heard. It is known to the reader how this Bench was originally composed of Sir Asutosh Mookerjee and the Hon'ble Justice Cuming, and how latterly it has come to be presided over by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Woodroffe. Rumour has it that for purposes of hearing Improvement Trust appeals the Bench is going to be strengthened by the appointment of Mr. Justice Chitty. Now what neither the public nor ourselves can understand is this special arrangement for such a Special Bench. If it is contended that two Hon'ble Judges of the highest Court in the land are not competent to decide in appeal cases in which the Improvement Trust is concerned, a contention, however, which we do not believe the Chief Justice will care to advance, why should there be a Special Bench of three and not a Full Bench of five, on which at least two Indian Judges could find seats? As a matter of fact, as landowners in Calcutta are mostly Indians, and as Indian Judges are likely to know more of conditions, practices, etc., prevailing here, it is but meet that the Appellate Bench in the present circumstances should be so composed as to associate Indian Judges with their European colleagues. The withdrawal of Sir Asutosh has given rise to rather unsavoury impressions in the public mind, since this proposed arrangement is to follow close upon the heels of his judgment in the case of Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. Chandra Kanta Ghosh, (36 Ind. Cas. 749; 24 C. L. J. 246; 44 C. 219; 21 C. W. N. 8). Be that as it may, we have perfect faith in the present Chief Justice and believe that as soon as Sir Lancelot Sanderson understands the public feeling in the matter, his Lordship will either form a Full Bench or at least associate an experienced Indian Judge with himself for the hearing of Improvement Trust appeals."

Held, (1) that the articles might legitimately be read together to determine their scope and purpose, even though they were proved not to have been written by the same person;

(2) that the articles were calculated to bring the Court and the Chief Justice who was responsible for its administration into contempt, and not only to destroy confidence in the Court but also to undermine and impair its authority and that as such they constituted a contempt of Court. C AMRITA BAZAR PATRIKA, In the matter of, 21 C. W. N. 1161; 26 C. L. J. 459; 45 C. 169; 19 Cr. L. J. 580

338

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 2—'Promise,' meaning of.

Prima facie the word 'promise' in section 2 of the Contract Act means, in reference to bonds, a person in whose favour the document is executed. M ANKALAMMA v. BELLAM CHENCHAYYA, 7 L. W. 221; 34 M. L. J. 815; 23 M. L. T. 215; 41 M. 637

419

s. 15—Coercion—Refusal to convey equity of redemption except on certain terms.

A mortgagee, who refuses to reconvey the mortgaged property to the mortgagor except on certain terms, cannot be said to be unlawfully detaining or threatening to detain any property within the meaning of section 15 of the Contract Act. C BENGAL STONE COMPANY, LTD. v. JOSEPH ISAAC JOSEPH HYAM, 27 C. L. J. 78 738

Contract Act—contd.

— s. 16 101
ss. 16, 74—Undue influence—Penalty—Interest, high rate of, whether allowable.

Without any evidence of undue influence exercised or unfair means adopted by the lender, a rate of interest agreed to by the borrower cannot be disallowed as being penal unless it is so high as to shock the conscience of the Court. C KASI NATH MITRA v. BHIKAN CHARAN MAITY 778

— s. 23, applicability of, to voidable contract—C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 70—Tenancy land sold as khudkasht—Registration contrary to law—Dispossession of vendee by landlord—Misrepresentation, damages for, suit for, maintainability of.

Plaintiffs purchased under a registered sale-deed from the defendant 4-pies share in a village and 34-68 acres of land, which was described as his khudkasht. The land being the tenancy land of the defendant's predecessor-in-interest could not be transferred without the consent of the landlord, who dispossessed the plaintiff by an order of the Revenue Officer under section 71 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act. The plaintiffs filed the present suit for compensation for breach of the covenant in the sale-deed which described the land as khudkasht. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that, the registration of the sale-deed being contrary to the provisions of section 70 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, the agreement was unlawful under section 23 of the Contract Act, as it had the effect of defeating the provisions of the law, and no damages could be claimed in respect of such an agreement:

Held, (1) that a transfer of occupancy and ordinary tenant rights being voidable and not absolutely void, it could not be held to be unlawful within the meaning of section 23 of the Contract Act;

(2) that even if the registration of the instrument was contrary to law, this did not affect the question of damages to which the plaintiffs were entitled for breach of the covenant in the sale-deed.

Where a vendor sells land as belonging to him and it turns out that his title was defective, he is liable to damages for breach of agreement, whether the vendee knows of the defect in the title or not. The vendee is entitled to rely upon the covenant contained in the deed and is not bound to exercise due diligence in discovering the facts. Mere knowledge or suspicion regarding the defect in title does not prevent an express or implied covenant from operating. It is only when there is a contract to the contrary that the implied covenant does not apply. N SHALIGRAM SADASHO PANDI v. NARAIN 669

— s. 23—Public policy—Agreement to serve creditor till debt paid off, whether slavery bond—Money paid under agreement against public policy, whether can be recovered.

The plaintiff advanced a sum for marriage expenses to two brothers on their executing a bond, by which they agreed in consideration of the sum advanced that one of them should always work for the plaintiff. It was further stipulated in the bond that interest at the rate of 2½ per cent. per mensem that would accrue on the principal was not to be paid in cash but was to be liquidated by the services of the one or the other of the two brothers whom the plaintiff undertook to feed but not to clothe:

Contract Act—contd.

Held, that it was doubtful whether the agreement was opposed to public policy as a slavery bond as under its terms while one brother was working for the plaintiff it would be possible for the other brother to earn money elsewhere and in course of time to pay off the principal debt.

A suit is maintainable for the recovery of a sum of money actually advanced pursuant to an agreement which is opposed to public policy. C ANANDIRAM MANDAL v. GOZA KACHORI, 27 C. L. J. 459 965

— ss. 23, 24—Public policy—Compounding felony—Unlawful consideration—Specific performance of agreement to sell land.

The plaintiff sued for specific performance of a contract by which the husband of the defendant agreed to convey to her certain land for a consideration of Rs 150. Annexed to the contract was a term that, in the event of a criminal prosecution for criminal breach of trust instituted by the plaintiff against the said intending vendor not being withdrawn, the contract was not to be enforced.

Held, (1) that if the concluding term of the contract had been complied with or could be complied with, then part of the consideration was void on the ground of being opposed to public policy;

(2) that if the term could not be complied with, then the whole contract became unenforceable for failure of an essential condition and that in either view the suit must be dismissed.

No one can contract on the footing of part of the consideration being the compounding of a felony. B BANI RAMCHANDRA SALVI v. JAYAWANTI GOVIND PANDIT, 20 Bom. L. R. 331 566

— s. 25 727

— s. 38 638

— s. 43, applicability of 732

— ss. 62, 63, 73—Contract—Novation—Debt, agreement for payment of, at new place—Cause of action—Jurisdiction—Money due on accounts—Interest, claim for, as damages, in absence of agreement, legality of.

Plaintiff and 2nd defendant were partners. First defendant received Rs. 2,500 as an advance from 2nd defendant, promising to supply cotton at Palladam within the jurisdiction of the Tirupur Munsif's Court. As the 1st defendant failed to supply the cotton or to return the advance plaintiff and 1st defendant looked into the accounts, and 1st defendant's liability was fixed at Rs. 2,000 and it was agreed that this liability should be discharged by the 1st defendant sending cotton to Virudupatti within the jurisdiction of the Satur Munsif's Court, to be sold by the plaintiff's man who should realize the Rs. 2,000 due by 1st defendant from the sale-proceeds. Plaintiff filed a suit in the Satur District Munsif's Court on 1st defendant's default and also claimed interest by way of damages:

Held, that interest could not be claimed as compensation under section 73 of the Contract Act

Contract Act—contd.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The new agreement to pay the amount due at Virudupatti was a novation of the original contract within the meaning of section 62 of the Contract Act and the Satur Munsif's Court had jurisdiction to try the suit.

Per Phillips, J.—The agreement was itself a new one and in supersession of the old one and was not a mere agreement to pay a debt at a place other than that mentioned in the original agreement and the cause of action, therefore, arose within the jurisdiction of the Court of the District Munsif of Satur.

Quere—Whether, even where the question is one affecting jurisdiction, failure of justice must be shown to justify the interference of an Appellate Court under section 21, Civil Procedure Code.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A new contract changing the place of performance falls under section 62 of the Contract Act and no independent consideration is necessary to validate the same.

Per Phillips, J.—Where no interest is provided for in the agreement of parties and when it is not a case of damages for breach of contract, interest cannot be claimed as compensation under section 73 of the Contract Act. M VASUDEVA MUDALIAR v. VELAPPA NADAR, (1917) M. W. N. 779; 6 L. W. 717; 22 M. L. T. 512 401

— s. 70, scope of—Act done primarily for doer's benefit incidentally benefiting another—Irrigation channel, repair of, benefiting both repairer and third party—Contribution, claim for—Refusal of defendant to pay for repairs—Charge, enforceability as—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 61, 120—Regulation XXVII of 1802, s. 32—Collection of cost of repairs by Collector, effect of.

Section 70 of the Contract Act does not apply to cases where a person does an act for his own benefit and that act incidentally benefits his neighbour or any other person. In such cases the latter need not pay for the extent of the benefit derived by him from the act.

A person claiming contribution from another under section 70 of the Contract Act must prove that he did some act for the latter. An act cannot be described as done by one person for another, unless it can be shown that, but for the existence of that other's interest, it would not have been done.

Plaintiffs, the lessees of the Sivaganga Zemindari, executed certain necessary repairs to a tank which irrigated their lands and the defendants' lands and also the lands of other persons. Before commencing the repairs they intimated to defendants their intention to do so and called upon them to bear their rateable share of the expenses. Defendants replied that they did not want the repairs and refused to pay any portion of the expenses. The plaintiffs, however, completed the repairs, and filed the present suit for contribution against the defendants, relying on section 70 of the Contract Act. They prayed also that the amount that may be decreed to them may be made a charge on the defendants' properties.

Held, (1) that as the repairs were executed by the plaintiffs mainly for their own benefit, though the defendants were also incidentally benefited by them, the latter were not liable for a proportionate share of the expenses under section 70 of the Contract Act;

Contract Act—contd.

(2) that, even if defendants were liable, plaintiffs were not entitled to a charge on their property;

(3) that Article 120 and not Article 61 of the Limitation Act was applicable to the case.

Per Oldfield, J.—Article 61 of the Limitation Act can be applied to cases under section 70 of the Contract Act where the payment made by the plaintiff produced an immediate benefit to the defendant, as in cases of payments of Government revenue or of decree amounts, but the Article will not apply when the benefit will only arise at a subsequent stage and plaintiff's cause of action will not be complete until that subsequent stage is reached. To such cases Article 120 must be applied.

Per Abdur Rahim, J.—The fact that the Collector has levied some portion of the expenses for repairs from defendants by coercive process under section 32 of Regulation XXVII of 1802 will not affect their non-liability under section 70 of the Contract Act.

M VISWANADIA VIJIA KUMARA BANGAROO v. R. G. ORR 786

— s. 73 401

— s. 73, illus. (a)—Contract for delivery of goods—Breach—Market, absence of, at place of delivery—Goods not for sale but for use—Damages, measure of.

The measure of damages in case of breach of a contract for delivery of goods, where there is no market at the place of delivery and where the goods are not to be re-sold but are intended only for the buyer's use, is that contained in illustration (a) to section 73 of the Contract Act, i.e., the sum by which the contract price falls short of the price for which the purchaser might have obtained goods of like quality at the time when the goods ought to have been delivered.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Section 73 of the Contract Act mentions two alternatives, the latter alternative being an additional right to be availed of at the plaintiff's option.

Illustration (a) to the section authoritatively interprets what the Legislature meant by the phrase 'loss or damage which naturally arose in the usual course of things from a breach of the contract' in a 'no-market' case also. The language of the illustration is absolutely general and wide and it makes no exception on account of special circumstances, such as (a) where the party complaining of the breach could get some other substitute for the goods ordered, (b) where he was made a gift of the articles as substitute on the day fixed for delivery and (c) where there was no market at all for the goods at the place of delivery. M ISMAIL SAIT & SONS v. WILSON & Co., 23 M. L. T. 320; (1918) M. W. N. 399 942

— s. 74 778, 901

— s. 74—Interest, enhanced, whether penalty. The mere fact that for certain reasons the parties to a mortgage agreed on very low interest to begin with, is no sufficient reason for holding an agreement to pay enhanced interest at a reasonable and normal rate later on to be penal. P MUHAMMAD ALI v. PARMA NAND, 48 P. W. R. 1918 232

— s. 74—Lease—Deposit—Forfeiture of deposit in event of breach—Interest, claim for, at 24 per cent. per annum from date of suit—Penalty.

Under a rental agreement executed by the defendant to the plaintiff the latter deposited 6 months' rent as advance, stipulating for its forfeiture in case of breach by him of the terms of the lease. In a suit for rent due and for a declaration that the deposit had been forfeited in accordance with the defendant's undertaking under the lease and for interest at 24 per cent. per annum from date of suit:

Contract Act—contd.

Held (1) that section 74 of the Contract Act was not applicable to the forfeiture of deposit and that the clause for forfeiture was not a penalty;

(2) that the claim for interest at 24 per cent. per annum from date of suit was penal and should be disallowed.

In determining whether the amount stipulated to be forfeited is in the nature of a penalty, the Court must be guided by the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the amount. M VENKATACHARI v. RAM-LINGA TEYAN, (1918) M. W. N. 197; 7 L. W. 404. 417

— s. 133

429

— s. 176—Pawnee, sale by, of pawned articles

—Notice, reasonable, what is.

Section 176 of the Contract Act does not contemplate that the pawnee should give the pawnor information of the actual date, time and place of sale. The section does not mean that a sale should be arranged beforehand and that due notice of all the details should be given to the pawnor. All that the law intends is that the pawnee should give the pawnor a reasonable time within which to exercise his right of redemption and proceed to sell if the property be not redeemed.

The pawnee's right to sell is analogous to the seller's right of re-selling granted under section 107 of the Contract Act and the two rights must be exercised in more or less the same method.

A pawnee of certain articles of jewellery gave notice to the pawnor that unless the money was paid within a fortnight, the jewellery would be sold without further reference to him. The notice did not mention the actual date, time and place of the intended sale. The articles were sold but the full amount of the debt was not realized. In a suit by the pawnee for the balance, it was contended that the notice given was not a reasonable notice of sale within the meaning of section 176 of the Contract Act.

Held, that the notice given was a reasonable notice of the intended sale within the meaning of the section. A KUNJ BEHARI LAL v. BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL BANK, 16 A. L. J. 390. 462

— ss. 184, 248—Principal and agent—

Minor, whether can act as agent—Firm, liability of, for acts done by managing minor member—Minor, liability of, on attaining majority.

Where on the application of an active minor member of a firm who did most of the business of the firm, shares in a Limited Liability Company were allotted to the firm:

Held, (1) that as a minor can act as an agent under section 184 of the Contract Act, the fact that at the time of the application the member was not sui juris did not vitiate the contract between the Company and the firm and that the firm was, therefore, liable on the shares;

(2) that as the minor did not give notice within reasonable time after attaining majority of his

Contract Act—conclld.

repudiation, he was also equally liable. P GOPI MAL-DURGA DAS v. JAIN BANK OF INDIA, LIMITED, 38 P. W. R. 1918; 17 P. L. R. 1918.

— s. 247

— s. 248

— ss. 252, 254 (6)—Partnership—Dissolution, right to, how far affected by terms of partnership contract—Court, power of, to decree dissolution.

A partner's claim to a decree for dissolution rests, in its origin, not on contract, but on his inherent right to invoke the Court's protection on equitable grounds, in spite of the terms in which the rights and obligations of the partners may have been regulated and defined by the partnership contract.

It is not, therefore, a contravention of section 252 of the Contract Act for a partner to seek dissolution, or for the Court to decree it, though the partnership agreement contemplates the continuance of the partnership beyond the date at which the suit is instituted. It is to meet the precise predicament of a partnership not terminable at will that the Court's power to decree dissolution is conferred in the events enumerated in section 254 of the Contract Act. P C REHMAT-UN-NISSA BEGUM v. PRICE, 22 C. W. N. 601; 16 A. L. J. 513; 27 C. L. J. 623; 5 P. L. W. 25; 23 M. L. T. 400; 8 L. W. 53; 20 Bom. L. R. 714.

— 254 (6)

Contribution suit

Co-owners—Rent, collection of, by fractional co-owner—Payment of Government revenue—Contribution, suit for, of proportionate share of revenue payable by other co-owners—Set-off of defendant's share of collections, plea of, validity of.

Plaintiffs owned a 1/15th share in a mith, and the defendant owned the remaining 14/15th share. Plaintiffs paid the peishkush and sued defendant for the share of the peishkush paid by them which he was bound to pay. The defendant pleaded that plaintiffs were bound to give him a fourth of the amount of rent collected and he claimed a set-off of such amount as against his share of the peishkush. The plaintiffs contended that the total amount collected by them did not exceed their share of the rent and that defendant was bound to meet the common charge, viz., the Government revenue.

Held, that the plaintiffs should be deemed to have made the collections on behalf of all owners, each co-owner being entitled to his fraction in that amount in proportion to his share and that defendant was, therefore, entitled to the set-off claimed.

Per Sadavica Aiyar, J.—Where a co-sharer expressly intends to collect rents for his own share alone and is paid by the tenants expressly for that share he must be deemed to have collected his own share and not for all the co-owners. M SIVANARASA REDDI v. DORAISAMI REDDI, 8 L. W. 91. 463

Co-sharers—Surrender of tenancy lands to one co-sharer—Notice by other co-sharers to vacate their shares—Suit for possession—Delay, unreasonable, effect of.

The ordinary tenancy lands in suit were at first held by the 1st defendant as sub-tenant. After having acquired a share in the village he got a surrender from the tenants and the fields were held by him as khudkasht. The plaintiffs, who were co-sharers in the village, gave a notice to the 1st defendant calling on him to vacate their shares in the land but the notice did not contain any offer to contribute the plaintiffs' share of the cost of acquisition. The plaintiffs brought the present suit for joint or exclusive possession of their share of the fields about 2 years after the notice and nearly 4 years after the entry in the khassra about the surrender:

Co-sharers—concl'd.

Held, (1) that there had been unreasonable delay in bringing the suit;

(2) that as the notice was of a threatening nature describing the possession of the defendant as wrongful and making no offer to contribute towards the cost of acquisition and as the defendant had been in occupation of the field as sub-tenant for many years, it was not a case in which the plaintiffs could get a decree for joint physical possession. The remedy of the plaintiffs was to have a partition effected. N BAPU v. SITTU 902

Costs—Court exercising discretion in arbitrary manner—Appeal, second, whether maintainable.

Where a lower Appellate Court exercises its discretion as to the award of costs in an arbitrary manner and not according to judicial principles, a second appeal lies from its decree.

Plaintiff, a minor, sued through her brother as next friend for a declaration that she was not the lawfully wedded wife of the defendant and obtained a decree with costs, the Court holding that no valid marriage had taken place between the plaintiff and the defendant as alleged by the latter and that the plaintiff had never lived with the defendant as his wife. (On appeal the District Judge, while agreeing with the lower Court on all points, held that the defendant had been badly treated as the customary separation for the abduction of his sister by plaintiff's brother had been denied to him and that therefore the plaintiff's next friend must pay the defendant's costs.)

Held, that inasmuch as the defendant's allegations as to the alleged marriage had been found to be false, the District Judge's order as to costs was wholly unjustifiable and must be set aside. P FAZAL NUR v. MUHAMMAD HASSAN, 97 P. W. R. 1918 948

Discretion, exercise of—Solicitor acting on his own behalf, costs of.

The High Court is averse to interfere with the discretion of a Judge on the question of costs, but the discretion must be exercised judicially. The ordinary rule is that a party who succeeds upon a particular issue gets the costs of that issue, unless there is a good cause for depriving him of the costs of that issue and unless the issues in the case are so closely connected that they cannot be separated one from the other.

A solicitor, who is a party to a suit and acts on his own behalf, is entitled to the same costs as if he had employed a solicitor, except in respect of items which the fact of his acting directly renders unnecessary. C BENGAL STONE COMPANY, LTD. v. JOSEPH ISAAC JOSEPH HYAM, 27 C. L. J. 78 738

Court-fee payable on appeal against decree for possession and remand for ascertainment of mesne profits 100 —payable when co-mortgagor sues to redeem share of mortgaged property.

Court-fee—concl'd.

Where a co-mortgagor who is entitled to redeem a share of the mortgaged property sues for redemption, the Court-fee payable is to be calculated on the amount of the mortgage debt which is chargeable on the share which the plaintiff is entitled to redeem. O BHAIROO BAKSHI SINGH v. BAGHUBANSA KUNWAR, 5 O. L. J. 43 300

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7

(iv) (c)—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 39—Suit to avoid registered deed—Court-fee payable.

A plaintiff suing for the cancellation of a document under section 39 of the Specific Relief Act is not entitled to reduce the Court-fee payable on his plaint by an assertion that the suit falls under Chapter VI of the Act.

On an adjudication under section 39 of the Specific Relief Act that a deed is void the Court is required by law, if the instrument has been registered, to send a copy of its decree to the officer in whose office the instrument has been registered, and this forwarding of the copy of the decree to the Registrar is a consequential relief upon which an ad valorem Court-fee must be paid. PAT NOOWOOGAR OJAIN v. SHIDHAR JHA, 3 P. L. J. 194 238

—s. 7 (v)—Madras Civil Courts Act (III of 1873), s. 14.

The proper valuation of a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption is, in accordance with section 14 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, that fixed in the manner provided by section 7 (v) of the Court Fees Act. M NARAYAN NAIR v. CHERIA KATHIRI KUTTY, 34 M. L. J. 317 89

—s. 7 (v) (a)—Suit for possession on basis of mokarrari deed—Court-fee payable—Mokarrari lease, whether land

A suit for possession of immoveable property on the basis of a mokarrari lease is purely one for possession of immoveable property within the meaning of section 7, clause (v) of the Court Fees Act.

A mokarrari lease of a definite share in a revenue-paying estate is land within the meaning of section 7, clause 5 of the Court Fees Act. PAT BINI KULSUM v. SYED MUHAMMAD HAMID 928

—s. 13 552

—s. 19, cl. (xvii)—Petition of appeal by prisoner presented by his Pleader, whether requires to be stamped.

A petition of appeal presented by a prisoner not personally but through his Pleader is exempted from Court-fees under clause (xvii) of section 19 of the Court Fees Act. N EMPEROR v. MAROTI TELI, 14 N. L. R. 77; 19 C. L. J. 494 158

—Sch. I, Art. I, Sch. II, Art. 17

—Cross-objection—Court-fee payable.

There is no reason to assume that the words "or cross-objection" have been omitted from Article 17 of Schedule II of the Court Fees Act. Therefore, a cross-objection in a suit for a declaration must bear ad valorem Court-fee under Article 1, Schedule I of the Court Fees Act. PAT DAROGA RAUT v. PAREMA KURR, 3 P. L. J. 197; 4 P. L. W. 368 568 —Art. 1—Cross-objections, memorandum of—Court-fee payable.

A memorandum of cross-objections filed by a respondent must be properly valued and bear Court-fees ad valorem.

Court Fees Act—contd.

A respondent who files a memorandum of cross-objections is not excused from the payment of Court-fees thereon, insofar as the appellant has paid more than adequate Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal. C SECRETARY OF STATE v. DIGAMBAR NANDA, 27 C. L. J. 443 939

— Sch. II, Art. 17 568
 — Sch. III, Annexure B (4)—Probate duty—Trusts created by Will, whether liable to duty.

The deduction allowed under Schedule III, Annexure B, item (4), for property held in trust not beneficially, applies only to property which the testator was possessed of or entitled to not beneficially but as trustee for any other person or persons and not to trusts created by the Will of the testator. PAT CHANDRAHATI KUAR v. COLLECTOR OF DAH BHANGA, 2 P. L. J. 611 578

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 7 (2)—Notification declaring boundary between two districts, construction of.

A notification issued under section 7 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, declared that for the purposes of criminal jurisdiction the deep stream of a river running between two contiguous districts was to be considered the boundary between those districts:

Held, that the intention of the notification was not to define the boundary between the two districts as on the date of the notification, but to declare that until a further notification was made the boundary line between the two districts was to be the deep stream of the river as found at any particular time. O KAYAMUDDIN v. DWARKA, 5 O. L. J. 145; 19 Cr. L. J. 671 1007

— s. 107 (2), proceedings under, whether can be transferred by District Magistrate.

Proceedings initiated by the District Magistrate under the special powers conferred upon him by section 107 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, need not be continued to the end in his Court but may be transferred by him to the Court of some subordinate Magistrate otherwise competent to deal with the matter. C BAKHAL MANDAL v. EMPEROR, 27 C. L. J. 314; 19 Cr. L. J. 496 160

— s. 125 397
 — s. 145—Dispute regarding right to tap tree—Jurisdiction.

The right to tap a tree is a question which may be the subject of proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code.

Where on a Police report that there was an apprehension of a breach of the peace regarding the right to tap a tree, the Magistrate initiated proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code and directed that a passage may be left in a wall which was being built by the second party to enable the first party to tap the tree, the only way to cut the tree lying over the wall:

Held, that the order of the Magistrate was entirely without jurisdiction. PAT JIBLAL MAHTO v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 316 848

— s. 145—Rejection of material evidence—Jurisdiction, refusal to exercise—Revision.

Ordinarily the rejection of evidence might not be accepted as a good ground for revision of an order under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, but the rejection of material evidence offered by a party would amount to a refusal to exercise jurisdic-

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

diction vested in the Court by section 145. PAT PAITALI SINGH v. GANAPATI KUAR, 19 Cr. L. J. 529 337

— s. 145, cls. (5), (6)—Jurisdiction of Magistrate to deal with lands not subject-matter of dispute—Order under cl. 6 in favour of persons who are not parties but who are directed to come in under cl. 5, validity of.

In a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to deal with land which is not in dispute between the parties and to declare the same to be in the possession of persons who are not parties to the proceedings.

In such a proceeding the Magistrate exceeds his jurisdiction if he makes an order under section 145, clause (6), in favour of persons who are not parties to the proceeding and who have not filed any written statement or taken any part in the proceedings except to address the Court through their Pleader, and who were directed by the Magistrate to come in for a limited purpose, viz., under section 145 clause 5. C RADHAMOHAN RAI v. NAIMUDDIN MOLLA, 19 Cr. L. J. 653 845

— ss. 155, 164, 172—Police Officer investigating non-cognisable offence—Diary, whether necessary to be kept—Statements recorded under s. 164—Procedure.

A non-cognisable case can, under section 155 of the Criminal Procedure Code, be investigated by a Police Officer only under the orders of a Magistrate of the first or second class who has power to try such case or commit the same for trial. But when such order is given and the Police Officer proceeds in accordance therewith to make an investigation, such investigation is made under Chapter XIV, which includes both sections 155 and 172.

It is incumbent upon a Police Officer, who investigates a non-cognisable case under the orders of a Magistrate, to keep the diary for which provision is made in section 172 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the omission to keep such diary deprives the Court of the very valuable assistance which such diaries can give, if legitimately used.

The indiscriminate use of the provisions of section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code is to be deprecated. No statement should be recorded under that section unless the person making it is a free agent and voluntarily agrees to have his statement taken down. P HIRA LAL v. EMPEROR, 18 P. W. R. 1918 Cr.; 16 P. R. 1918 Cr.; 19 Cr. L. J. 517 277

— s. 162 272
 — ss. 164, 172 277

— s. 164 (3)—Confession—Certificate as to voluntary confession, omission of, effect of—Admissibility of confession.

Where a Magistrate in recording a confession refuses to make the memorandum referred to in section 164 (3), Criminal Procedure Code, on the ground that in his opinion the confession has not been voluntarily made, such confession cannot form part of any judicial record and is, therefore, inadmissible in evidence. O RAM SUDH v. EMPEROR, 5 O. L. J. 70; 19 Cr. L. J. 507 267

— ss. 195, 476—Qualifications mentioned in s. 195, whether incorporated in s. 476—Courts in the Presidency towns, power of, to act under s. 476,

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Per Curiam (Fletcher, J., dubitante).—Section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, does not apply to an offence committed before a Court in presidency towns. Consequently it is not competent to the High Court, acting under section 476, to direct the prosecution of a person for the offence of forgery or abetment of forgery brought to its notice in the course of hearing an appeal in a Probate case.

The qualifications mentioned in section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, are to be treated as incorporated in the provisions of section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. C In the matter of A VAKIN, 19 Cr. L. J. 638 686

— s. 195—Sanction to prosecute for forgery—Document not before Court granting sanction—Delay in applying for sanction, effect of—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

Before granting sanction to prosecute an accused person for forgery it is desirable that the Court should examine the alleged forged document.

Inordinate and unexplained delay in making an application for sanction to prosecute is a sufficient ground for refusing the sanction.

The High Court has power to interfere with an order of a Civil Court refusing or granting sanction for prosecution under section 195, clause (6), of the Criminal Procedure Code and not only under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. PAT KISHEN DAYAL SINGH v. JAGLAL MANDAL, 19 Cr. L. J. 642 834

— s. 195—Sanction for prosecution granted by successor of Judge who heard case—Delay, effect of.

On the application of the defendant in a Small Cause Court suit, the successor-in-office of the Judge who had decreed the suit granted, after an inordinate delay, sanction for the prosecution of the plaintiff for perjury in respect of a false statement in his deposition. This sanction was affirmed on appeal to the District Judge:

Held, that as the Court record of the deposition was not read over to the plaintiff and he was not cross-examined on the statement, and as the sanction was granted after a long delay by a Judge who did not try the case, the sanction should be revoked, especially as this sanction, if not revoked, would be used by the defendant in terrorem both as regards execution under the decree passed against him and as regards the suit which he had brought for setting aside that decree and which was pending.

Per Smith, J.—When a person wants to prosecute criminally, he must not be dilatory. C PREM CHAND v. SONATAN SAHA, 19 Cr. L. J. 508 268

— s. 195—Sanction for prosecution for perjury—Appellate Court, power of, to accord sanction as for offence committed before it—In relation to any proceeding in any Court, meaning of—Sub-Magistrate, Court of, whether 'subordinate' to Court of Joint Magistrate.

A Sub-Magistrate is 'subordinate' to the District Magistrate within the meaning of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, and is not subordinate to a Joint Magistrate who hears appeals from orders of Sub-Magistrates only in such cases as are made over to him by the District Magistrate.

An Appellate Court cannot accord sanction for prosecution of a person for false statements made in his deposition before the Trial Court on the ground that the offence of perjury was again committed before the Appellate Court with reference to that very deposition. The offence is complete when the evidence is given and it cannot be said to be repeated afterwards because there is an appeal.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The words 'in relation to any proceeding in any Court' have reference to the original trial of the suit or the criminal case. M KOMPPELLA ANANTARAMAYYA v. CHIKKATLA TUKKADU, 34 M. L. J. 404; (1918) M. W. N. 280; 23 M. L. T. 285; 7 L. W. 533; 19 Cr. L. J. 483 — ss. 202, 203, 204—Process, issue of, postponed—Reasons, recording of—Accused allowed to appear and cross-examine prosecution witnesses before issue of process, legality of—Procedure, error of, whether vitiates proceeding—Revision—High Court, power of.

— s. 195 (7) 147

It is imperative for a Magistrate to give reasons under section 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code before postponing the issue of process against the accused.

It is not right for a Court in a judicial enquiry before process has been issued against the accused to allow the latter to attend at the preliminary enquiry and cross-examine the prosecution witnesses.

An error of procedure does not vitiate a proceeding or an order passed therein, unless it occasions a failure of justice. PAT MUSHARI RAM MANHARI v. RAJ KISHORE LAL, 4 P. L. W. 307; 19 Cr. L. J. 527 287

— s. 221 847

— ss. 223, 224, 230, 233, 234 993

— ss. 233, 235, 537—Joinder of charges—Police Officer preparing incorrect record consisting of several documents—Separate charge in respect of each document, whether necessary—Irrregularity.

Accused, a Police Inspector, was charged in one trial with having prepared certain documents incorrectly in order to screen one H. and to save him from legal punishment. He was convicted of an offence under section 218 of the Penal Code. The documents set forth in the charge were a ruqqa addressed to the officer in charge of the Police station, a first information report based upon the ruqqa, seven Police diaries relating to the investigation held in the case and the final report to the Magistrate:

Held, (1) that the various documents formed part of one continuous whole, the same purpose, namely, the saving of H. from legal punishment, running through them all, and that, therefore, the offences having been committed in the same transaction they could all be tried in the same trial under section 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code;

(2) that the documents in question together comprised the Police record of an investigation into a charge and that the accused being charged with having prepared an incorrect Police record, there was nothing defective in framing a single charge in respect of all the documents;

(3) that even if it were held that the accused should have been charged with separate offences in regard to each document, the trial was not illegal merely because one charge was framed in regard to all the documents, the irregularity being covered by

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

section 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code. P
EMPEROR v. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN, 12 P. R. 1918 Cr.
 19 Cr. L. J. 510; 23 P. W. R. 1918 270
s. 235 270
ss. 247, 259.

On the day fixed for the hearing of a complaint under sections 352 and 504, Indian Penal Code, the complainant was absent and the Magistrate passed the following order: 'Complainant absent. Accused discharged':

Held, that as there was only one case before the Court, the Magistrate must be deemed to have acted under section 259, Criminal Procedure Code, and that the order did not operate as an acquittal of the accused even in respect of the offence under section 352, Indian Penal Code. M RAGHUVALLU NAICKER v. SINGARAM, 34 M. L. J. 389; 7 L. W. 520; 19 Cr. L. J. 613 517 ss. 247, 403—Acquittal of accused on default of prosecution—Fresh complaint, whether barred—Autrefois acquit, plea of, when available.

A judgment of acquittal following on complainant's default of prosecution under section 247, Criminal Procedure Code, does not entitle the person acquitted to plead autrefois acquit on a fresh prosecution on the same facts and section 403 does not operate as a bar to the Court taking cognizance of a second complaint.

The word 'tried' in the early part of section 403 (1) should not be treated as surplusage, and the section does not apply to a case where even the particulars of the offence were not stated to the accused under section 242. M BEZWADA KOTAYYA v. KONATHALAPALLI VENKAYYA, 40 M. 977 (foot-note); 19 Cr. L. J. 497 257

ss. 247, 403, 494—Withdrawal from prosecution before service of summons, effect of—Acquittal of accused, whether operates as bar to further proceedings—Autrefois acquit, plea of.

The statutory acquittal under section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code in a summons-case operates as a bar to further proceedings on the same facts.

The provisions of section 403 clearly imply that every order of acquittal, so long as it is in force, is a bar to further proceedings except in the circumstances specified in the section itself, and the words in sub-section (1) do not affect an order of acquittal under section 494 or section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The Police filed a charge-sheet under section 447 of the Penal Code against a person before a Magistrate with second class powers, whereupon a summons was issued but before it was served the Public Prosecutor, with the consent of the Court, withdrew from the prosecution under section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the accused was acquitted as required by that section. Thereafter the person on whose field the offence of criminal trespass was alleged to have been committed, preferred upon the same facts a complaint charging the accused with offences under sections 143, 447 and 341 of the Penal Code. The accused was convicted and sentenced separately for each of the offences:

Held, (Napier, J. dissenting) that the previous order of acquittal operated as a bar to further proceedings and that the conviction was, therefore, bad in law and must be set aside.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Per Napier, J.—Section 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code is intended to reproduce what is the law in England, namely, the plea of autrefois acquit, but in order to plead autrefois acquit successfully in India, the accused must have been put in peril either before the Jury or the Magistrate. M DUDEKULA LAL SAHIB, In re, 33 M. L. J. 121; 22 M. L. T. 69; 6 L. W. 175; 40 M. 976; 19 Cr. L. J. 501 261

s. 250—Compensation to accused—Charges under different sections—Acquittal on some and conviction on others, effect of.

Section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code speaks of "the case" as a whole and contemplates a trial or inquiry ending in the unqualified acquittal or discharge of the accused. A complainant who, having a genuine grievance, wilfully exaggerates or distorts the same in order to aggravate the case against the accused is liable, in the discretion of the trial Court, to be prosecuted for any offence against the Indian Penal Code which he may have committed, but the policy of the Legislature seems to be to limit the summary jurisdiction of the Court under section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code to simple cases, in which the complainant is found to have been wholly in the wrong.

Complainant charged accused under sections 500 and 506 of the Penal Code. The accused was convicted on the former and acquitted on the latter charge and the complainant was ordered to pay compensation to the accused, on the ground that the charge of criminal intimidation was frivolous or vexatious:

Held, that the provisions of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code did not apply to such a state of facts, unless the accused was discharged or acquitted altogether. A MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. RAJA RAM SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 499; 19 Cr. L. J. 670 1006

s. 259 517
s. 260 113

ss. 297, 298, 299—Misdirection to Jury, whether ground for setting aside verdict—Functions of Judge and Jury—Forgery—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 193, 465, 467.

The accused were tried by the Sessions Judge and a Jury on charges under sections 465, 467 and 193, Indian Penal Code, on the allegations that by personating one Mir Baksha, the husband of a certain woman, before the Muhammadan Marriage Registrar, they had induced the Registrar to make an entry of the divorce of the woman by her husband, to which entry they had affixed their thumb impressions, and thereby made a false document within the meaning of sections 463 and 464, Indian Penal Code.

In his charge to the Jury, the Sessions Judge said: "If the person who put his thumb impression in the register as Mir Baksha was not really Mir Baksha, it is clear that he made a false document within the meaning of section 464 and that his intention was that fraud should be committed and also that injury should be caused to Mir Baksha. He, therefore, committed forgery."

Held, that there was a misdirection on the part of the Judge as he did not leave it to the Jury, as he should have done, to say whether on the evidence they found that the intention of the accused was dishonest and fraudulent; but that although the misdirection might have been under certain circumstances, a reason for setting aside the verdict of the Jury, yet as the verdict was not erroneous and was perfectly correct on the evidence, it should not be set aside. C EMPEROR v. ASIMODDI, 22 C. W. N. 572; 19 Cr. L. J. 649 841

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

s. 342 (4)—Oaths Act (X of 1873), s. 5—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 118—Evidence—Accused, whether competent witness—Two persons tried separately, whether can give evidence against each other.
An accused person actually under trial cannot be sworn as a witness, and if two or more persons, are being jointly tried none of them is a competent witness for or against the others. But this exception to the general rule goes no further and has no application to an accused person who is not at the time under trial. Accordingly when two persons, though they may be accused of complicity in the same offence, are tried separately, each is a competent witness at the trial of the other, and the deposition of each may be used against him in his own trial. C AKHOY KUMAR MUKHERJEE v. EMPEROR, 27 C. L. J. 91; 22 C. W. N. 405; 19 Cr. L. J. 663 999

s. 346 993
ss. 346, 350, 537—Transfer of case from file of Magistrate not competent to try it—Trial, de novo—Accused, whether can waive right—Evidence recorded by Magistrate not competent to try case, whether can be considered—Procedure—Illegality.

Where a case is transferred from the file of a Magistrate who is not competent to try it under section 346 of the Criminal Procedure Code, there must be a trial de novo of the whole case, and the whole of the prosecution evidence must be recorded afresh. In such a case the accused have no power to waive their right to a trial de novo. The evidence recorded by the Magistrate from whose file a case is transferred under this section, having been recorded by a Magistrate who was not qualified to record it, cannot be taken into consideration by the Magistrate who actually tries the case.

The failure to hold the trial de novo in such a case is an illegality which vitiates the trial and not merely an irregularity covered by section 537, Criminal Procedure Code. PAT AMBICA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 5 P. L. W. 40; 19 Cr. L. J. 625 673

s. 350 673
ss. 350, 223, 224, 230, 233, 234, 346—Case transferred from one Magistrate to another—S. 350, applicability of—Trial de novo, whether can be claimed by accused—Estoppel—Intention of Counsel, expression of, in High Court not to claim trial de novo, whether estops accused from demanding trial de novo—Cheating, charge of—Omission to specify manner in which cheating effected, whether vitiates charge—Money delivered by some persons but contributed by several persons—Inducements offered to persons contributing—Separate offences—Misjoinder of charges.

The general rule is that the decision as to the innocence or guilt of an accused person must be by the Judge who has heard all the evidence.

Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, introduces an exception to this general rule and the exception should not receive a more extended interpretation than its actual words clearly justify.

Criminal Procedure Code - contd.

The applicant was challaned and convicted on three charges under section 420, Indian Penal Code, which were tried together under section 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code, on the allegation that in his capacity as a Revenue Inspector he cheated three persons by dishonestly inducing them to deliver to him sums of money collected by them from several others, they themselves contributing to the sums their own quota of subscriptions. The applicant under orders from the Tahsildar caused a list of the tenants of a certain village to be prepared, showing the amount each of the tenants would have to pay towards the War Loan. Sometime after he offered to some of them within the hearing of others to cut down the subscriptions to half if he was paid Rs. 2 a piece, and to omit altogether the names of persons who were to pay Rs. 7-12-0 if they paid him Re. 1 each. The villagers were then told to bring the money and they met in two groups. Seven out of one group paid Rs. 2 each to K, who thus collected Rs. 16 including Rs. 2 of his own and paid the amount to the applicant, who made the necessary corrections in the list already prepared. Similarly C. collected Rs. 9 from 6 persons including himself out of the other group and paid it to the applicant who made corrections in the list as promised. The case was originally tried by the District Magistrate but on an application for transfer to the Judicial Commissioner it was sent to the file of a First Class Magistrate in the same District. In the course of his arguments in the proceedings under the transfer application the applicant's Counsel expressed his intention not to apply for a re-hearing of the case. The Magistrate, to whose file the case was transferred, held that this constituted a waiver on the part of the accused and consequently refused to grant the prayer of the applicant for a trial de novo. On appeal the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and sentence on one charge only and upheld those on the other two. The applicant urged amongst others the following grounds:—(1) that there was an illegal contravention of section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, in refusing to grant a trial de novo, (2) that there was a non-compliance with sections 223 and 224, Criminal Procedure Code, causing in fact a failure of justice and illegal misuse of section 336 inasmuch as the charges did not give necessary notice of the matter charged, (3) that the charges framed were in contravention of the provisions of sections 233 and 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code, as there were 15 persons cheated and 15 separate offences committed and the offences were wrongly combined in one trial:

Held, (1) that the statement of the applicant's Counsel not to apply for a fresh trial did not operate as an estoppel and the trial Court was wrong in refusing the applicant's demand for a trial de novo;

(2) that the omission to specify in the charge the manner in which the applicant cheated, whether by illegal act or omission, could not be regarded as material as it had not misled the accused;

(3) that all or most of the persons who parted with money having been present when the terms were proposed by the accused, the representations made and inducements offered were made and offered to each of the villagers collected there and when the applicant took the money paid by each villager he committed a distinct offence, and the trial of the case was, therefore, bad for misjoinder of charges as under section 234, the applicant could not be tried for more than three charges.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

If circumstances are deposed to against the accused by a prosecution witness, it is necessary that the Magistrate should let the accused know by questions put to him in examination which of them tell against him in his mind; it is more particularly necessary where the witness has deposed to other circumstances favourable to the accused which nullify the value of the circumstances against him. N JANGILAL v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 657

s. 403257, 261

— ss. 408, 413—Joint trial of several accused—Sentences, varying, award of—Appeal by persons sentenced to appealable terms—Right of representation of accused sentenced to non-appealable terms.

In an appeal under section 408 of the Criminal Procedure Code by some of the accused who are awarded appealable sentences in a trial in which the other accused are awarded non-appealable sentences, it is not competent to the latter to have their case examined as if an appeal lay in their case as well. M ANNABAMI NADAYAN, In re, 7 L. W. 571; 19 Cr. L. J. 623

s. 413527

— ss. 423, 438, 439—Trial of two accused for kidnapping Appeal by one—Conviction set aside and commitment to Sessions ordered—Commitment of non-appealing accused by Trial Magistrate, legality of—Reference to High Court—Revision.

Two persons were tried and convicted by a Magistrate for an offence under section 363 of the Penal Code. On an appeal by one of them, the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and sentence and ordered the appellant to be committed for trial on a properly framed charge under section 366 of the Penal Code. The case of the other accused was referred to the High Court for the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. While the reference was pending before the High Court, the Trial Magistrate proceeded to pass an order of commitment against both the accused:

Held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass the order of commitment while the conviction and sentence against one of the accused on his trial under section 366 of the Penal Code remained standing, and that the order was, therefore, illegal and must be set aside. A EMPEROR v. BHAGWANI, 16 A. L. J. 311; 19 Cr. L. J. 482

s. 423, cl. (b)—Appeal—Evidence omitted by lower Court—Re-trial, whether should be ordered—Procedure.

Where the only defect in the procedure of the Court of first instance is that certain evidence has not been brought upon the record which ought to have been there, it is quite unnecessary to do anything more than to have that evidence taken and brought upon the record. It is unnecessary to worry all the witnesses a second time and to waste public time in having them re-examined. A ISHWAR PRASAD v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 325; 19 Cr. L. J. 485

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

ss. 435, 438—Revision—Concurrent power of High Court with subordinate Courts—Procedure.

In cases where the High Court has concurrent revisional jurisdiction with a subordinate Court, the aggrieved party should in the first instance seek his remedy before the subordinate Court.

There is no ground for holding that the revisional jurisdiction of a Sessions Judge or of a District Magistrate under sections 435 and 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code is in any way trenching upon by the provisions of section 125 of the Code.

The jurisdiction of a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate under section 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code is concurrent with that of the High Court, even where the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate cannot pass a formal order but can only refer the matter to the High Court under section 438 of the Code. PAT BIPIN BIHARI MUKHERJI v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 327; 3 P. L. J. 302; 19 Cr. L. J. 589

s. 437—Charge framed in warrant case—

Plea of not guilty—Discharge of accused, effect of—Further enquiry, order for, legality of.

In a warrant case after a charge had been framed against the accused he was called upon to plead, and he pleaded not guilty. The Magistrate thereupon wrote a judgment and 'discharged' the accused. This order was set aside by the District Magistrate, who ordered further enquiry under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that the only order which the Magistrate could have passed, after a charge had been framed against the accused and he had pleaded to the charge, was either an order of acquittal or an order of conviction and as he was not convicted he must be deemed to have been acquitted and not 'discharged' and that being so the District Magistrate was not competent under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order further enquiry and the order made by him, therefore, for such enquiry was illegal. A CHHOTÉ LAL v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 384; 19 Cr. L. J. 596

s. 438146, 397

— s. 438—Acquittal—Revision by complainant—Reference by Sessions Judge for re-trial to High Court—Delay, effect of.

Eleven persons were tried by a Magistrate of the First Class for offences under section 147 read with section 347 of the Penal Code and were acquitted on the 14th of December 1916. No appeal was preferred by the Government, but the complainant filed a revision in the Court of the Sessions Judge who, observing that the Magistrate had not said in what respect he considered the prosecution story to be exaggerated, held that the case was one which should be re-tried and by his order of reference to the High Court, dated 4th January 1918, recommended that the case should be re-tried:

Held, that as the Government did not appeal, it was inadvisable to open up the matter again

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

having regard to the long lapse of time between the order of acquittal and the order of reference. A RAM SAMBHARI TEWARI v. RAJMAN NAIK, 16 A. L. J. 378; 19 Cr. L. J. 607 511

s. 439 146

s. 439—Revision—High Court, power of, to re-examine evidence—Non-appealable sentence.

A High Court, as a Court of Revision, has power to re-examine the evidence if there are prima facie good grounds for doing so, especially where the accused has been given a non-appealable sentence and has no means of vindicating his character except in revision. N TIKKAR v. PIARELAL, 19 Cr. L. J. 666 1002

s. 476 686

s. 494 261

s. 514—City of Bombay Police Act (11 Bom. of 1902), ss. 106, 107—Bonds for appearance before Police—Forfeiture—Applicability of s. 514 of Code

Bonds taken under sections 106 and 107 of the City of Bombay Police Act for appearance before the Police are not bonds taken under the Code of Criminal Procedure or for appearance before a Court and such bonds cannot, therefore, be dealt with under section 514 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. B HUBERT (RAWFORD, In re, 20 Bom. L. R. 379; 19 Cr. L. J. 607 511

s. 517 501

ss. 520, 517—Acquittal by First Class Magistrate—Order for disposal of property—Sessions Judge, whether can interfere with order—Court of Appeal.

A Court of Appeal, within the meaning of section 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is the Court to which an appeal lies in the particular case, and not the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie from the Court deciding that particular case.

A First Class Magistrate, who tried the accused on a charge of theft of certain cattle, acquitted them and directed the cattle to be given to one of the accused. The complainant applied to the Sessions Judge, who directed that the cattle be returned to the complainant:

Held, that the accused having been acquitted the Sessions Judge was neither the Court of Appeal nor the Court of Revision with respect to the case and had, therefore, no power to make an order under section 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code regarding the disposal of the cattle. B KHIMA RUKHAD, In re, 20 Bom. L. R. 395; 19 Cr. L. J. 597 501

s. 522—Criminal force, use of—Show of criminal force, whether enough.

The dispossession contemplated by section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code must be accompanied by criminal force and as a result of the criminal force used, and the mere show of criminal force is not enough for an order under that section.

The foundation of an order under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be the finding of the Court to the effect that the person in whose favour the order is made has been dispossessed of a specific property by use of criminal force, which forms the material ingredient in the matter of criminal conviction. PAT BUNDI SINGH v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 229; 19 Cr. L. J. 516 276

Criminal Procedure Code—conold.

s. 526—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—False charge of offence made with intent to injure—Competent Tribunal—Honorary Magistrate, whether competent—Unnecessary adjournments—Transfer, ground for.

A charge of an offence falling under the second clause of section 211 of the Penal Code should not be sent for trial or inquiry to an Honorary Magistrate having no experience of criminal trials, and the mere fact of the Magistrate making unnecessary adjournments in the inquiry or trial of such a case is a sufficient ground for the transfer of the case from his Court. A MAGAN LAL v. GANESH PARSAD, 16 A. L. J. 294; 19 Cr. L. J. 611 515

s. 526—Transfer of case—Magistrate, necessary witness for defence, effect of.

In applying for the transfer of a case on the ground that the Magistrate before whom it is pending is a witness for the defence, the accused must satisfy the High Court that the Magistrate will be a necessary and essential witness for the defence. C SRILAL CHAMARIA v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 632 680

s. 537 270, 673

ss. 537, 540—Prosecution evidence recorded after defence evidence closed—Procedure, legality of—Revision—High Court, interference by.

In a criminal trial after the evidence for the defence had closed, the Magistrate examined certain witnesses for the prosecution giving at the same time full liberty to the accused to cross-examine them:

Held, that in revision it was not proper for the High Court, having regard to sections 537 and 540 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to interfere with the Magistrate's order on this ground. O GUR BAKSHI TEWARI v. EMPEROR, 21 O. C. 95; 19 Cr. L. J. 630 678

s. 540 678

Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911), s. 23 513

Custom—Abadi deh—Alienation—Non-proprietors, right of, to sell sites—Mauza Tuto Mazara, District Hoshiarpur.

In Mauza Tuto Mazara, District Hoshiarpur, non-proprietors have by custom the right to sell their sites. P NANDU v. PUNJAB SINGH, 35 P. R. 1914; 62 P. W. R. 1918 96

Adoption—Gorewaha Rajputs of Mauza Bodhala, Tahsil Nawanshehr, Jullundur District—Adoption of sister's son, validity of.

Among Gorewaha Rajputs of Mauza Bodhala in the Nawanshehr Tahsil of Jullundur District, adoption of a sister's son is not allowed by custom.

One M. adopted his sister's son some 16 years before his death. His entire property was mutated in the adoptee's name in 1886, who managed it, mortgaged a part of it and gifted away a plot. In 1885 a collateral of M. and the plaintiffs died and his estate was mutated not only in the names of the plaintiffs but in the name of the adoptee also. M. died in 1896 leaving the adoptee and a widow. The widow died in 1913 a few months after which the plaintiffs brought a suit for possession:

Held, that although it was true that the collaterals could have instituted a suit for declaration that the alleged adoption should not affect their reversionary rights, they were not bound to do so, as the succession

Custom—contd.

did not open to them until the death of the widow and that, therefore, their allowing the adoptee to remain in possession of the property and to deal with part of it did not prejudice their right of succession and their acts did not amount to acquiescence in the adoption. P ABDULLA v. NABIA, 25 P. W. R. 1918 9

—Alienation by widow—Necessity—Husband's debts—Debts incurred by widow for maintenance—Anticipation of immediate wants.

A widow is justified in alienating property to pay her deceased husband's creditors and to raise money for her maintenance. The alienee is not bound to see to the application of the money. P HOTSU RAM v. SEKHA RAM, 4 P. L. R. 1918 530

—Landlord and tenant—Occupancy holding, custom of transferability of, subject to payment of nazar—Essentials of the custom—Nazar, tender of, whether necessary for validity of transfer.

In order to establish a custom of transferability of an occupancy holding subject to the payment of a customary nazar, the evidence must show that the landlord is bound to recognise the transfer when nazar of the amount or at the rate determined by custom is tendered to him.

An alleged custom of transferability of an occupancy holding on payment of a nazar which leaves the amount or rate of the nazar indefinite is void for uncertainty, for no one knows what the tenant has to pay by way of nazar and the landlord can demand what he pleases and refuse his consent unless he is satisfied.

Where there is a custom of transferability of an occupancy holding on payment of a customary rate of nazar, which the landlord is bound to accept, the transferee has no title under the custom until he has paid or tendered nazar at that rate. C MINA KUMARI SAHEBA v. ISHAMOYEE CHOWDHURANI, 27 C. L. J. 587; 22 C. W. N. 929 747 —Reasonableness of—Custom of remission of entire rent on inundated lands, validity of.

A custom set up by a tenant that the entire rent in respect of a certain quality of land must be remitted when the lands are inundated, irrespective of the extent of the flood or its destructive effect on the crops, is vague and unreasonable and therefore cannot be valid according to law.

Where the validity of a custom is challenged on the ground that it is against reason, the reason referred to is not to be understood as meaning every unlearned man's reason but artificial and legal reason warranted by authority of law. Consequently when it is said that a custom is void because it is "unreasonable," what is meant is that the unreasonable character of the alleged custom conclusively proves that the usage, even though it may have existed from time immemorial, must have resulted from accident or indulgence and not from any right conferred in ancient times.

A custom which is prejudicial to a class and is beneficial only to a particular individual is repugnant to the law of reason.

The test applied is whether the custom alleged to exist could have a lawful commencement. C SIVANARAYAN MUKHOPADHYA v. RASIK PATRA, 27 C. W. N. 422; 45 C. 475; 28 C. L. J. 148 289

Custom—concl.

—Succession—Ancestral property—Daughters or collaterals of sixth degree—Manj Rajputs of Talwandi Rai, Tehsil Jagraon, Ludhiana District.

Plaintiffs, collaterals in the sixth degree of the last male owner, a Manj Rajput of Talwandi Rai, Tehsil Jagraon, Ludhiana District, sued for a declaration that a gift of his ancestral land made by his widow in favour of his two unmarried daughters should not affect their reversionary rights. It appeared that according to the riwaj-i-am the daughters had a prior right of succession to the collaterals:

Held, that in view of the entry in the riwaj-i-am it was for the plaintiffs to establish their rights of inheritance as against the daughters of the deceased and that they having failed to do so were not entitled to obtain the relief they claimed. P SAIDA KHAN v. AMIR-UN-NISSA 966

—Succession—Self-acquired property—Banias of Palwal Tahsil, District Gurgaon—Sister versus collaterals of 4th degree.

Among Banias of Palwal Tahsil, Gurgaon District, a sister has a preferential right of succession to self-acquired property against collaterals of the 4th degree. P NARAIN v. GAINDO, 85 P. W. R. 1918 183 —Succession—Sister and sister's son—Gondals of Deowal, Tahsil Bhera, District Shahpur.

Among Gondals of Mauza Deowal, Tahsil Bhera, District Shahpur, a sister succeeds to the property left by her brother in the absence of his collaterals.

It is too broad and sweeping a proposition that a sister and a sister's son cannot under any circumstances be regarded as heirs to property in cases governed by the general customary law of the province. The onus is on them to prove their right of succession as against near and possibly even remote collaterals, but in the absence of any agnatic heirs, their right to succeed is preferable to the rights of the proprietary body or Government, especially in villages which are not homogeneous and are composed of proprietors belonging to different religions, different castes and different tribes. P MUHAMMAD YAR v. UMAR HAYAT KHAN, 14 P. L. R. 1912; 103 P. W. R. 1918 924

Damages, suit for, maintainability of 16
—Suit for—Physical injuries caused by falling of door—Damages, measure of.

In an action for damages for physical injuries caused to the plaintiff by defendant's negligence, the amount of compensation must be fair and reasonable, but an absolute compensation is not the true measure of damages. The Court should not give the value of an annuity of the same amount as the plaintiff's average income for the rest of the plaintiff's life.

An Appellate Court can form its own opinions on the reasons given by the lower Court for the award and measure of damages, but it should be slow to interfere unless, in its opinion, the damages awarded are clearly excessive or inadequate.

In an action for damages, the Court has the power to order amendment of the plaint at any stage of the suit so as to enhance the claim for damages, if the application for amendment was made at the commencement of the trial.

The plaintiff, a lad of 16 who was a student in one of the lower forms of a school, sustained severe injuries by the fall of the door of a temple of which defendant was trustee. It was proved that the boy was dull and not very intelligent and that his father was a pauper, while his brother was earning Rs. 30 a month. The Court awarded him Rs. 12,000 as damages:

Damages—concltd.

Held, that the award was excessive and it was reduced to Rs. 6,000. M VINAYAGA MUDALIAR v. PARTHASARATHY AYYANGAR, 7 L. W. 415; 23 M L. T. 312 556

Decree, construction of561

—, improper, whether should be passed.

No decree should be given by the Courts which on the face of it is improper. N GOVINDRAO v. GANPATHI, 14 N. L. R. 97 425 —, order refusing to admit appeal filed out of time, whether.

Quære—Whether an order refusing to admit an appeal filed out of time is a decree within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code. C ISWAR CHANDRA KAPALI v. ARJAN 725

—, for rent—Execution, condition imposed upon, validity of.

A Court decreeing a suit for arrears of rent has no right to impose a condition as to the mode of execution of the decree by making the decree executable only against the defaulting jama. C CHANDRA KUMAR ROY CHOWDHURY v. ASWINI KUMAR DAS 250

Defamation—Defamatory words used in complaint—Privilege, defence of—Damages, suit for, whether maintainable—English law, rule of, applicability of, to India.

So far as a civil suit for damages is concerned, defamatory words used by a party in a complaint to a Criminal Court are absolutely privileged and are not actionable.

There is no Statute in India dealing with civil liability for defamation. The rules to be applied, therefore, are the rules of equity, justice and good conscience which has been interpreted by the Privy Council to mean the rules of English Law if found applicable to Indian society and circumstances; and as there is nothing in the circumstances and society of this country that would make it improper or inadvisable to apply the English rule, what is sound public policy in England is equally sound policy in India and the rule of English Law is in accordance with the principles of justice, equity and good conscience.

There is no support for the plea that a criminal enactment can be interpreted as amending the civil law by application, though it may be anomalous that a party should be criminally punishable and yet be not civilly liable.

The civil and criminal law and procedure do not coincide but are independent of each other.

In a civil action for libel the plea of mere truth is, if established, a complete defence. In a criminal charge it is not so, for the accused has further to prove the fact that it was for the public good that the imputation was made or published. A CHUNNI LAL v. NARSINGH DAS, 16 A. L. J. 300 540

Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Bom. XVII of 1879), s. 48—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48—Execution of decree—Conciliator's certificate, time spent in obtaining, exclusion of.

The words "period of limitation prescribed" in section 48 of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act control and modify the period of time allowed for execution of a decree by section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, so that a decree-holder is entitled to exclude from the period of limitation allowed by the latter section the interval of time occupied in obtaining a conciliator's certificate.

The intention of the Legislature in enacting section 48 of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act was to secure that the judgment-creditor, compelled by the new Act to approach the conciliator for a certificate, was not to be damaged by any lapse of time before the conciliator gave him the certificate. B SHIDAYA VIRBHADRAYA v. SATAPPA BHARMAPPA, 20 Bom L. R. 360 494

Disclaimer by real owner—Transfer by ostensible owner—Taluka—Succession—Primogeniture sanad, effect of.

A person who has disclaimed a title cannot be allowed to set it up afterwards to the prejudice of third parties, who have purchased the disclaimed property from the ostensible owner in good faith and for value.

Where a primogeniture sanad had been issued to a talukdar who died before the Oudh Estates Act came into force, succession to the estate would be governed by the terms of the sanad in the case of succession under a testamentary disposition. O FAKHR JAHAN BEGAM v. MUHAMMAD ABDUL GHANI KHAN, 5 O. L. J. 49 307

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), s. 10—Divorce—Judicial separation—Adultery and cruelty after separation, effect of.

A wife who has obtained judicial separation on the ground of her husband's adultery alone, is entitled to a dissolution of marriage on proof that her husband has again committed adultery after the separation and has in addition been guilty of cruelty to her after the separation. L B MA THIN KYU v. MG. RA THAIN 914

Easements Act (V of 1882), ss. 2 (c), 17 (c)—Water rights—Right to take river water over another's lands in undefined channel, nature of—Easement.

From time immemorial the plaintiff and his ancestors as owners of certain non-riparian lands had been taking water from a river at or about a certain spot on the banks and thence over the lands of the defendants successively till the plaintiff's lands were reached. The water was brought not in a defined channel but was allowed to spread over and irrigate defendants' lands first and then the plaintiff's.

Held, that even if the right enjoyed by the plaintiff and his ancestors could not be acquired as an easement, there was nothing intrinsically unreasonable in it; on the contrary it was compatible with the usages and sentiments of the agricultural population in many parts of India and having been enjoyed from time immemorial it was saved by section 2, clause (c), of the Easements Act.

Per Marten, J.—The plaintiff's claim was to river water and not to mere surface water on the defendants' lands and consequently section 17 (c) of the Easements Act had no application to the case. B JANARDAN GANGESHI KHADILKAR v. RAVJI BHIKAJI KONDKAR, 20 Bom. L. R. 398 448

Easements Act—contd.

ss. 4, 12, 15, 28—'Land,' meaning of—Easement, acquisition of—Evidence of user prior to statutory period, admissibility of—'As of right,' meaning of—Tenants of dominant tenement, user by, effect of—Artificial structure—Easement over roof, whether can be acquired—General right of easement, for sitting, drying clothes, etc., validity of—Right of way, delineation of.

In disputes relating to acquisition of easements evidence of user prior to the statutory period is admissible.

Artificial structures such as flat masonry roofs of shops are land within the meaning of that expression as used in section 4 of the Easements Act and easements can be acquired over them.

The user of an easement without any one's permission and without interference on behalf of the servient owner amounts to user 'as of right.'

User of the servient tenement by tenants of the dominant owner who are in occupation of the premises is, for the purpose of acquisition of an easement, as good as user by the dominant owner himself.

A general right of easement to use a roof as a place for sitting or as a place for drying clothes or for other purposes of this nature can be acquired under the Easements Act.

Where the area over which an easement of way has been acquired is small and the points of egress and ingress are fixed, it is not necessary for the Court to delineate the particular portion of the ground which persons enjoying the easement are entitled to use. O GANESH PRASAD v. KHUDA BAKSH, 21 O. C. 78 585

s. 4—Windows, right to open and shut into another's land, acquisition of, as easement—Injunction to lower level of roof to enable free movement of window.

The right to open and shut windows and shutters into adjoining land can be acquired as an easement within the meaning of section 4 of the Easements Act.

Where defendant built his house opposite to the window of the plaintiff's house which had been in existence for 30 years, with the result that the eaves of the defendant's roof rose above the level of the plaintiff's window and the shutters of the latter could not be shut and opened as usual:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff had an easement to swing on the shutters of his window into the defendant's land;

(2) that it was competent for the Court to issue an injunction to the defendant to lower the roof of his house so as to enable the plaintiff to shut and open the window freely. M RANGA ROW v. RAMA-THILAKANNA, 7 L. W. 32 435

ss. 12, 15 585

s. 15—'Belongs to Government,' meaning of—Servient tenement, transfer of, by Government to private individual, after 40 years' enjoyment of easement by dominant owner, effect of—Easement, acquisition of, against transferee.

The words 'belongs to Government' in the last paragraph of section 15 of the Easements Act refer not to the time of suit but to the time during which the easement is enjoyed.

Easements Act—contd.

Where, therefore, after 40 years' enjoyment of an easement as against Government, the latter transfers the property to a private party, the easement does not become absolute, but the person claiming it must make good his title by 20 years' enjoyment against the transferee after the transfer.

Semble.—Where the 60 years' period has nearly expired during Government ownership of the land and the land is then transferred by Government to a private party the acquisition of the easement might be held to be completed if the deficiency was made up by subsequent enjoyment against the transferee. M SRINIVASA UPADYA v. RANGANNA BHATTA, 34 M. L. J. 396: 41 M. 622 98

s. 17 (c) 448

s. 23—Re-construction involving change in situation of roshandans, whether fresh easement—Building up wall so as to block roshandans—Injunction, suit for, whether maintainable.

A re-construction of a house involving a change in the situation of the roshandans does not mean a fresh easement requiring a fresh period of 20 years for its acquisition.

Plaintiff sued for the issue of a mandatory injunction to the defendants that they should demolish a wall built by them. It appeared that the plaintiff had re-constructed his house and had changed the position of his parnals and roshandans. Defendants had thereafter built up their wall so as to block these parnals and roshandans:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief claimed. P DHARAM DAS v. PIYARE LAL, 93 P. W. R. 1918 985

s. 24—Accessory rights—Right to discharge rain water from eaves—Right to go over servient tenement to repair wall supporting eaves, whether accessory to easement.

Plaintiff, who was entitled to an easement of discharging water upon the defendant's land from projecting eaves, sued for an injunction restraining the defendant from making any use of his land which would prevent the plaintiff from going upon it for all the purposes of repairing the wall of his house abutting thereon and which supported the eaves:

Held, that inasmuch as it was not absolutely impossible to repair the wall from the inside it would be an altogether illegitimate extension of the doctrine of accessory easements to grant the plaintiff the injunction sued for.

Per Heaton, J.—The accessory rights mentioned in section 24 of the Easements Act are not intended to be of such a nature as to deprive the owner of the servient tenement of his rights of property, unless such a result is absolutely essential. B HIMATLAL MAGANLAL SHAH v. BHIKABAI AMRITLAL SHAH, 20 Bom. L. R. 403 422

s. 28 585

s. 47—Suspension of easement by agreement, whether extinguishes easement—Transfer, sale in execution, whether is—Rule against perpetuities.

Plaintiff entered into an agreement with one N., by which the latter admitted the former's right to discharge rain water on to the latter's house, and the plaintiff agreed not to exercise the right so long as N. or his descendants remained owners of the house;

Easements Act—conold.

if, however, the house was transferred, plaintiff was to resume the enjoyment of the easement. The house was sold in execution of a decree and was purchased by the defendant who had notice of the agreement:

Held, (1) that the sale in execution was a transfer within the meaning of the agreement;

(2) that the plaintiff, having purchased the house with his eyes open, could not be allowed to plead that he was not bound by the contract entered into by his predecessor-in-interest;

(3) that the rule against perpetuities had no application to the case.

An easement is not extinguished by cessation of user, where the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners. P FATEH CHAND v. PARAS RAM, 56 P. W. R. 1918; 34 P. L. R. 1918 618

Ejectment, suit for 317
—, suit for, against recorded tenant—Burden of proof 470

—, suit for—Notice sent through registered post—Proof of service of notice—Evidence necessary.

A notice to quit was sent through registered post. The posting was duly proved and the registered envelope was produced in Court with an endorsement purporting to have been made by the postman stating that the addressee refused to accept it:

Held, that though the evidence adduced as to the service of the notice was not legally sufficient, the plaintiff's suit for ejectment on notice to quit should not have been dismissed on the ground that the service of notice was not proved, but that the plaintiff should have been given an opportunity to prove the actual service of notice on the defendant. C KALANUA KHADIN v. AMIR ALI KHALIFA 917

—Title, proof of—Burden of proof—Possession, value of.

In a suit in ejectment the plaintiff must prove good title and there is no onus on the defendant to prove title relatively good or bad at all.

It needs twelve full years' possession to make title, and, therefore, where a plaintiff fails to prove anything more than possession within twelve years of suit, the onus is not shifted on to the defendant to prove good title. B BABUJI NARAYAN CHITNIS v. BHAGVANT BALWANT CHITNIS, 20 Bom. L. R. 346 550

Electricity Act (IX of 1910), s. 24, Sch., cl. vi—Fuse or cut-out—Service-line, cost of maintenance of—Liability of licensee—Installation, defective—Consumer, whether liable to pay for new cut-out.

A fuse or cut-out is a necessary part of the service-line and is kept under the licensee's seal.

The licensee is bound to bear the cost of the maintenance of the service-line whether or not it has been initially paid for by the consumer.

If the consumer's installation is defective, the licensee is entitled to discontinue the supply of energy to him.

In case of a dispute as to any alleged defect, the licensee can take action under clause VI, sub-clause (3), of the Schedule to the Electricity Act and refer the matter to an Electric Inspector who shall decide it.

Electricity Act—conold.

If the licensee continues to supply energy to a consumer when he knows or has reason to believe that the latter's installation is defective, he does so at his own risk and the consumer is not liable to pay for a new fuse or cut-out if the old one melts owing to a defect in his installation. P LAHORE ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO. v. DURGA DAS, 79 P. W. R. 1918 171
Estoppel 294, 331, 986

—Both parties estopped, effect of—Court, duty of, to decide case on merits.

In a case of one estoppel against another, the parties are set free and the Court has to see what their original rights are.

S., deriving title by sale from B., sold certain land to J. B. subsequently sold the same land to L. Before the sale to S., B. had mortgaged the land and in 1905 he sued S. and his co-mortgagees for redemption. On the same day L. sued S., B. and one R. for redemption of another mortgage executed by B. in favour of R. Both these suits were compromised: B. withdrawing and acknowledging S. as full owner, and L. agreeing to get possession (in the second suit) on payment of Rs. 550 to S. J. now brought the present suit to recover the land from L.:

Held, that though S. was estopped by the compromise decree from denying L.'s right to redeem, L. himself was estopped by the decree in B.'s suit from denying that S. was full owner and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the land in suit. P JIWAN LAL v. BEHARI LAL 68

—, doctrine of, whether applies to Criminal Law.

The principle of estoppel has no place in the criminal law and the idea of a Christian by estoppel is a contradiction in terms. A MAHA RAM v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 414; 19 Cr. L. J. 615 519

Evidence—Appeal—Remand, order of, when to be made.

It is an unusual course to remand for fresh evidence an appeal which has been argued, and which ought prima facie to be decided upon the materials which were before the Courts below. P C GANGA PERSHAD SINGH v. ISHRI PERSHAD SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 349; 16 A. L. J. 409; 34 M. L. J. 545; 27 C. L. J. 548; 22 C. W. N. 697; 20 Bom. L. R. 587; 23 M. L. T. 388; (1918) M. W. N. 382; 8 L. W. 17d 1

—First report, value of—Report made by accused, admissibility of.

A first report is generally very valuable corroborative evidence of the testimony of the person who makes it; but where it is made by an accused, it is not admissible in evidence at all and constitutes no corroboration either of the case against himself or of that against any other co-accused.

Where, therefore, the whole of the evidence was disbelieved by the Sessions Judge but the accused were convicted on the strength of a report made by one of themselves:

Held, that inasmuch as the conviction was based on material which was inadmissible in evidence, it could not stand. P HARJI v. EMPEROR, 4 P. R. 1918 Cr.; 19 Cr. L. J. 518 273

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 8—Res gestæ, admissibility of.

Under section 8 of the Evidence Act statements accompanying conduct and explaining such conduct are relevant. N TULSARAM v. ARJUNA 904

Evidence Act—contd.

ss. 21, 24, 25, 26—Confession—Oral confession made to a Magistrate, whether admissible—Proof.

In order to make a confession admissible in evidence it is not necessary that it must be recorded.

An oral confession by an accused person not being open to exception under sections 24, 25 or 26 of the Evidence Act, is, as an admission by an accused person, a relevant fact and may be proved at his trial under section 21. Such a confession made to a Magistrate is relevant and may be proved by the evidence of the Magistrate.

Where, therefore, the accused made a verbal confession of his guilt before an Honorary Magistrate:

Held, that the confession was admissible in evidence and could be proved by the evidence of the Magistrate. P FERROZ v. EMPEROR, 11 P. R. 1918 CR. 19 CR. L. J. 651 843

ss. 24, 25, 26

A confession made by an accused person on his trial for illicit possession of opium to a Superintendent of Excise is admissible in evidence, provided no inducement, threat or promise was held out or made to the accused in order to procure the confession.

An entry in a register of postings showing that certain Customs Preventive Officers were ordered to be at their stations at a particular hour does not refer to matters of State and is not excluded from disclosure under section 123 or 162 of the Evidence Act.

A statement made by a subordinate officer to his superior officer regarding the apprehension of a certain accused person within the hearing of various people cannot be withheld from the Court under section 124 of the Evidence Act. C ROKUN ALI v. EMPEROR, 22 C. W. N. 451; 19 CR. L. J. 524 284

ss. 25, 26 843
s. 35—Evidence, admissibility of—Certified copies of papers of partition under Regulation XIX of 1814, whether admissible.

Certified copies of the papers in the Collectorate, which prima facie appear to be the record of a partition made in a proceeding under Regulation XIX of 1814 between the predecessors of the parties to a suit, are good and admissible evidence, quite apart from anything contained in section 35 of the Evidence Act. J KHETRA NATH MANDAL v. MAHOMED ALLA RAKHA 921

s. 58 Execution of document—Proof—Admission—Inference drawn from matter not on record, validity of.

In a suit upon a mortgage alleged to have been executed by the father of the defendants, the latter denied all knowledge of the transaction. One of them, however, on being examined as a witness admitted that the signature on the deed was his father's. The suit had been brought on almost the last day allowed by the law of limitation, and from this the Court inferred that the plaintiff must all along have been receiving interest at the stipulated rate and that on that calculation the mortgage debt had been fully satisfied.

Held, (1) that as far as the defendant who identified his father's signature was concerned, his admission, under section 58 of the Evidence Act, relieved the plaintiff of any further responsibility of proving the mortgage-deed;

Evidence Act—contd.

(2) that the Court had erred in law in drawing the inference as to the payment of interest from matters not in evidence before it, and that, therefore, there had been no proper trial of the suit. B LAKHICHAND CHATRAKHUJ MARWADI v. LALCHAND GANPAT PATIL, 20 BOM. L. R. 354 555

ss. 65, 74 338
s. 80 258, 507
s. 91 507
s. 91—Oral evidence to explain document, admissibility of—Construction of document—"Up to" or "until" a certain day, meaning of.

The words "up to" or "until" a certain day in a contract may be construed as exclusive or inclusive of the day to which they are applied according to the context and subject-matter of the contract.

No extrinsic evidence as to the sense in which the words were used by the promisor or understood by the promisee is admissible under section 91 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Where in making an offer for the sale of a motor car the vendor said in a letter "please understand that my offer only holds good up to Wednesday next as the time I have is limited:"

Held, that having regard to the ordinary bearing of the words "up to" and to the well-known principle applicable to deeds and other documents that a document should in case of doubt and where all other rules of constructions fail be construed most strongly against the grantor, the offer remained open during the whole of Wednesday and did not expire at midnight of Tuesday. C METROPOLITAN ENGINEERING WORKS v. WALTER EUGENE DERRUNNER, 22 C. W. N. 4 6; 45 C. 481 305

s. 92 860
s. 92, applicability of, to document to which one of the parties to suit was not party.

The provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act, excluding oral evidence in regard to the question whether a certain plot of land was or was not covered by a sale-deed executed by one of the parties to a suit, do not apply when the other party to the suit was not a party to the document. C SUKUMARI DEVI v. KALIPADA MUKHERJEE 13

s. 106 822*s. 108—Presumption of death—Date of death—Evidence.

The only rule which section 108 of the Evidence Act prescribes is that a person who has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, is presumed to be dead at the time when the question whether he is alive or dead is raised. There is no presumption as to the time of his death, and if any one seeks to establish the precise period at which such person died, he must do so by actual evidence. P BASHARAT v. NAJIB KHAN, 38 P. R. 1918; 68 P. W. R. 1918 70

s. 114 653
s. 114—Estoppel 24

Evidence Act—contd.

— s. 115—Estoppel by representation or action causing another to change position—Conveyance by person entitled by estoppel, whether transfers good title against those bound by estoppel.

The doctrine of estoppel is based upon the change of position brought about by the representations or actings of the persons bound by the estoppel.

Estoppel applies not only in favour of the person induced to change his or her position, but of a transferee from such person, and it binds not only the person whose representations or actings have created it, but all claiming under him by gratuitous title.

The estates of B., a Raja, were taken under Government management under the Encumbered Estates Act. The manager appointed, who had a power of sale under the Act, put up a village to sale. B. bought it benami in the name of K., but the manager never executed any conveyance to K. Thereafter the management was removed and B. was restored to his estates. K. having died, B. procured K.'s heir L. to convey the village to B.'s illegitimate daughter R. After B.'s death R. conveyed it to A. who sued B.'s heir J. for possession:

Held, that J. was estopped from denying R.'s title. P C JAGANNATH PRASAD SINGH v. ABDULLAH, 16 A. L. J. 576; 5 P. L. W. 83; (1918) M. W. N. 406; 22 C. W. N. 891; 8 L. W. 163; 24 M. L. T. 62; 28 C. L. J. 192

770
— s. 116—Estoppel 656
— s. 118 497, 999

— ss. 123, 124, 162—Confession made to Superintendent of Exoise, admissibility of—State document, posting register, whether is—Official communication—Privilege 284

— ss. 155, 157—Statements made to Police, whether can be used as corroboration—Hostile witness, whether can be impeached by reference to Police diary.

Statements of witnesses made to the Police should not be used to corroborate them except in very special circumstances.

The evidence of a witness who is hostile to the Crown may be impeached by reference to the Police diary.

If in the course of a trial a witness is called upon to say that he saw the offence committed by the accused and when called upon says that the offence was committed by an entirely different person, it is only fair that the Crown should be allowed to use section 155 of the Evidence Act to disabuse the Jury of the effect made by a wilfully false statement. There is nothing in section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code to prevent this course being adopted. That section provides only for facilities to the accused to obtain copies of Police papers. Pat RAM CHARITRA SINGH v. EMPEROR, (1918) Pat. 95; 4 P. L. W. 325; 19 Cr. L. J. 512 272

— s. 157 272
— s. 162 284

— s. 162—Summoning Government servant to produce document—Discretion of Court—Procedure.

If a Court decides to summon a Government official for the production of certain documents, it should only do so after careful consideration and once the summons has been issued, production should ordinarily be insisted on if the party who obtained the summons so desires. N LAXMAN RAO v. VITHOBA 898

Evidence Act—concl.

Execution, application for, dismissal of—Fresh application, maintainability of—Limitation—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), Sch. III, cl. 6.

In execution of a rent-decree, the property of the judgment-debtor was sold, but the sale was afterwards set aside on the latter's application. The decree-holder taking no further steps, the executing Court thereupon passed the following order: "Sale set aside; the decree-holder taking no further steps, the case is dismissed for default." On a second application for execution being made by the decree-holder, beyond the three years' period limited by clause (6) of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act:

Held, that the second application could not be regarded as one in continuation of the previous application for execution, which ended with the order of the Court dismissing that execution case for default of the decree-holder. C MIDNAPORE ZEMINDARY COMPANY, LIMITED v. DINA NATH SAHU, 22 C. W. N. 766 712 — Instalment decree—Default—Acceptance of overdue instalments, whether evidence of waiver—Limitation.

Where a decree provides for payment by instalments subject to the condition of the entire decretal amount becoming payable at once on failure to pay any fixed number of instalments regularly, the mere acceptance of overdue instalments by the decree-holder is not of itself sufficient proof of waiver on his part to execute the decree for the entire amount.

Whether the payment and acceptance of an overdue instalment is to be treated as a payment regularly made in satisfaction of the instalments due, so as to extend the period of limitation for execution of the decree, is a question of fact. S BHAWANDAS FERROOMAL, FIRM of r. MEHRAJ, 11 S. L. R. 120 324 — Sale—Mortgage prior to attachment, whether binding on auction-purchaser.

A person who purchases property, which has already been mortgaged, in execution of a decree, cannot acquire larger rights than those which his judgment-debtor possessed on the date of the sale.

An auction-purchaser of a property mortgaged to a person under a registered deed, executed prior to the attachment of the property, is bound by the mortgage even if he had no notice of the mortgage and the mortgagee failed to have his lien notified at the time of the sale. O BHAIROON PRASAD v. SHRO DARBHAN, 5 O. L. J. 114 877 — Suit against lunatic—Court refusing to appoint guardian ad litem—Decree passed—Representative of lunatic, whether can object to decree in execution.

Where a suit is brought against a person of unsound mind and the trying Court is asked to appoint a guardian of the lunatic for the purposes of the suit, but refuses to do so and passes a decree against the lunatic, the representative of Execution—concl'd.

the lunatic after his death cannot raise an objection in the execution Court that the decree was null and void and could not be executed. PAT JANG BAHADUR LAL v. PALTU TEWARI, (1917) PAT. 166 218

Execution of decree—Attachment withdrawn—Declaration, suit for, by creditor that property belongs to judgment-debtor, maintainability of—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42, proviso, applicability of.

Independently of the provisions of Order XXI, rule 63 of the Civil Procedure Code, a decree-holder may sue for a declaration that certain property attached in execution of his decree belongs to the judgment-debtor, although at the time of the suit the attachment might have been withdrawn and the property may not be in the possession of the decree-holder. To such a suit the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act does not apply. L B MAUNG BA KYAW v. U LAN 972

Decree on contract entered into while estate under Court of Wards' superintendence—Property purchased from profits of estate after release from superintendence of Court of Wards, attachment of—Court of Wards' superintendence, release from, effect of.

Property purchased by a person from the profits realised by him from his estate after its release from the superintendence of the Court of Wards, is liable to attachment in execution of a decree obtained against him in respect of a contract entered into while his estate was under the superintendence of the Court of Wards. O DEHI BAKSH SINGH v. BED NATH, 5 O. L. J. 90 219

Execution of document—Proof 555
Ex parte application, duty of party making—Order extending time for filing appeal, whether can be cancelled by same Court.

When an ex parte application is made, it is the duty of the party making the application to call the attention of the Judge not only to the portion of the law or authority in favour of his case but also to the matters that are against him.

On an ex parte application made to the District Judge asking him under the provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act to extend the time for filing an appeal and to give the appellant time for the purpose of paying the Court-fees, the Judge made an order that time would be extended. But subsequently and before the memo. of appeal had in fact been admitted, he re-considered his order and revoked it:

Held, that the Judge had ample authority under the law to revoke or alter his previous order at any time before the appeal was admitted. C ISWAR CHANDRA KAPALI v. ARJAN 725

Factories Act (XII of 1911), ss. 34, 41, 42—"Occupier," meaning of—Separate sentences of fine on occupier and manager, legality of—Exemption of occupier or manager—Procedure.

An "occupier" of a factory within the meaning of section 41 of the Factories Act is the person entitled to the possession or use of the factory. He is the controller, for the time being, of the factory, the person entitled to use the factory for his own or another's profit.

Factories Act—concl'd.

He may be the owner, on the other hand he may be only a lessee or a mortgagee with possession, but it is he who decides whether the factory is to work or to close down. The manager merely carries out the occupier's orders to work the factory and if the occupier designates no manager, the occupier himself shall be deemed to be the manager for the purposes of the Act.

Section 41 of the Factories Act authorises a Magistrate to impose on the occupier and manager jointly and severally a fine not exceeding Rs. 200. There can be only one fine and for the whole sum each delinquent is jointly and severally liable. Separate sentences of fine on the occupier and manager, under this section, therefore, are not legal.

Section 42 of the Factories Act provides the remedy for an occupier or manager who is the victim of some other person's neglect, but he must take the prescribed steps to assure the real culprit's conviction and not merely attempt to exculpate himself. P NIRANJAN LAL v. EMPEROR, 13 P. R. 1918 CR.; 21 P.W.R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 495 159

— ss. 41, 42 159
Financial Commissioner Punjab's Standing Order No. 2, para. 12, object of 980
First report, value of 273

Forest Act (VII of 1878), ss. 25 (1), 31 (j), r. 3 (a)—Reserved forest—Shooting tiger in reserved forest without license to protect property—Offence.

Under rule 3 (a) of the rules made by the Bombay Government under section 25 (i) and section 31 (j) of the Forest Act, hunting and shooting in a reserved forest are prohibited except under a license to be obtained from the conservator of forests.

Some of accused's cattle were killed by a tiger and with a view, to prevent further injury to his property the accused successfully tracked and shot a tiger without a license in a reserved forest, to which the rules made by the Local Government under section 25 (i) and section 31 (j) of the Forest Act had been duly applied:

Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under section 25 (i) of the Forest Act. B AMBIRSAHER BALAMIYA PATIL v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 384; 19 CR. L. J. 610 514

— s. 31 (j) 514
Fraud 222, 250, 253

—Decree obtained by perjured evidence, suit to set aside, maintainability of.

No suit can be instituted to set aside a decree on the ground that it was obtained by perjured evidence. M KADIRVELU NAINAR v. KUPPUSWAMI NAICKER, 23 M. L. T. 372; 8 L. W. 103; 24 M. L. J. 590; (1918) M. W. N. 514 774

General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 164
— s. 6 (c), (e) 109

Guardian and ward—Guardian spending more than income of estate upon ward, whether entitled to recover excess—Accounts filed by guardian and accepted by Court—Presumption of correctness.

A guardian who, without taking the leave of the Court, chooses to spend upon the ward more than the income of the ward's property is not entitled, after his guardianship has determined, to come forward and sue the ward personally for the excess amount so expended.

Guardian and ward—concl'd.

It is the duty of a Court which appoints a guardian to examine into the accounts submitted to it by the guardian periodically to the best of its ability and to satisfy itself that they are properly prepared. A presumption of correctness attaches to such accounts after they have been scrutinized and accepted by the Court. O GOPAL v. SARJU, 21 O. C. 74 599

High Court, power of, to punish contempt summarily when committed out of Court. 338

Hindu Law—Muhammadan Law—Custom—Hali Memos settled in Kathiawar, whether governed by Hindu Law or Muhammadan Law.

As regards inheritance and succession Halmi Memos settled in Porebunder in Kathiawar did not retain Hindu Law at the time of their conversion to Islam, nor have they by immemorial custom adopted Hindu Law. In these matters, therefore, they are governed by Muhammadan Law and not by Hindu Law. B KHATUNAI v. MAHOMED HAJI ABU, 20 Bom. L. R. 289 619

Adoption—Orphan boy, whether can be adopted—Will in favour of adopted son, construction of—Widow, power of, to dispose of property inherited from father—Collaterals, rights of.

According to Hindu Law no other than the father or mother can under any circumstances give a boy in adoption. An orphan boy, therefore, cannot be adopted.

Where a Will is made in favour of an adopted son and the adoption is held to be invalid, the question is whether the mention of the devisee in the Will as an adopted son is merely descriptive of the person to take under the Will, or whether the assumed fact of his adoption is the reason, and motive of the bequest, and a condition of it.

Where a Hindu widow, who had no authority from her husband, adopted a son and subsequently made a Will in his favour, in which after reciting the fact of adoption she stated that she was making the Will "with a view to remove subsequent disputes arising in connection with the management of the property of the family":

Held, that the validity of the adoption was not a condition precedent to the devisee taking under the Will, and that in spite of the adoption being held invalid the devisee was entitled to the property which the widow had power to dispose of by Will.

Property inherited by a Hindu widow from her father is not, strictly speaking, her stridhan and a collateral of her husband has, therefore, no locus standi to contest her power of disposition in respect of such property. P RAMJI DAS v. DURGA PARSHAD, 6 P. R. 1918 90

Alienation by widow of her husband's property to pay off his debts—Payment undertaken by relative of deceased—Failure of relative to discharge obligation, whether revives debt.

A Hindu widow sold her husband's property in her possession in order to discharge debts of the deceased, which a relative of his had agreed to pay off but which he failed to discharge:

Held, that when the relative of the deceased made himself responsible and agreed to pay off the debts, they ceased to be debts either of the deceased or of his widow, and the mere fact that the relative failed to perform his obligation would not revive the debts so as to make them a good consideration for the alienation of the property by the widow. A NATHU v. TULSHA, 18 A. L. J. 443 728

Hindu Law—cont'd.

Alienation—Temple property—Mahant, alienation by 292

Bengal school—Yautuka and ayautuka property—Burden of proof—Succession—Ejectment, suit for—Mesne profits, claim for, against trespasser, maintainability of.

The burden of proving that the property which a Hindu lady purchased long after her marriage was her yautuka property, because the purchase was made from a special fund obtained during her nuptial ceremony, is on the person who asserts it.

To the ayautuka property left by a Hindu female the sons and the maiden daughters may be entitled in equal shares, but the married daughters are postponed to the sons.

Defendant No. 1, under colour of title from defendant No. 4 to whom he attorned, dispossessed the plaintiff's tenants who thereupon surrendered. Defendant No. 4 realised rents from the defendant No. 1 for some years. In a suit by the plaintiff for ejectment of defendants Nos. 1 and 4:

Held, that whatever the relation might be between defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 4, the possession of the defendant No. 1 as against the plaintiff was that of a trespasser, and the plaintiff was entitled to mesne profits as against him. C DELAUNY v. PRANHARI GUHA 22 C. W. N. 990 879

Guardianship—Guardian, mother, whether is.

Under the Hindu Law the mother is the natural guardian of a minor in the absence of the father, irrespective of the family being joint or separate.

PAT BHAIRO PRASAD SAHU v. RAMCHANDRA PRASAD, 4 P. L. W. 873 253

Step-mother, right of, to act as guardian of her step-son—Contract by guardian, whether chargeable on minor's estate.

In the absence of nearer relations, a step-mother is, under the Hindu Law, entitled to act as the guardian of her step-son.

A Hindu guardian cannot enter into a transaction so as to charge the minor on attaining age with personal liability.

Where a decree makes the minor personally liable on a contract by his guardian the Appellate Court has jurisdiction to amend and rectify it even in the absence of a memorandum of objections or cross appeal on behalf of the minor.

The minor's liability, however, for debts properly incurred on his behalf by his guardian can be charged against his estate. M VENKATASAMI NAIKCE v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI, 34 M. L. J. 177; 23 M. L. T. 280 949

Inheritance—Unchaste female, right of.

According to the Bengal School of Hindu Law, any female heirress who was leading an unchaste life before the date when the succession opened out is excluded from inheritance. C RAJABALA DASSI v. SHYAMA CHARAN BANERJEE, 22 C. W. N. 586 714

Joint family—Alienation by father—

Hindu Law—contd.

Suit by son for cancellation of deed—Antecedent debt—Family necessity.

Plaintiff sued for cancellation of two mortgage-deeds and a lease alleged to have been illegally executed by his father in favour of defendant. The 1st Court holding that the alienations were tainted with immorality and were not for any family necessity, cancelled the alienations. On appeal the District Judge held that it was not proved that the executant was leading an immoral life and that the debts were not tainted with immorality and dismissed the suit. On second appeal to the Chief Court:

Held, that it was necessary for the lower Appellate Court to decide, whether the debts in question were raised by the executant for some family necessity or to meet antecedent debts and to see whether the antecedency of the debts was real or merely a cover for what was essentially a breach of trust. P

LAJJA RAM v. NARINJAN LAL, 101 P. W. R. 1918 989

Joint family—Alienations by father—Suit by son—Immoral debts—Burden of proof—Evidence of immorality, whether sufficient.

In order to exempt a Hindu son's share in the family property from liability for his father's debts the son must show that the debts were incurred for immoral purposes.

There must be some definite connection established between the debt and the expenditure. It is not sufficient to prove that the father was a man of extravagant and vicious habits.

The onus of proof that the debt was incurred by the father for illegal or immoral purposes, is not shifted on to the creditor by proof of immoral habits. N EHIKA v. HABLAL 206 —Alienation by one member, whether can be impeached by other members not parties to alienation—Stranger, whether can impeach alienation—Grant of property to mahant and his heirs, whether grant in favour of temple.

If one or more members of a Hindu joint family, purporting to act on behalf of the family as a whole, make an alienation of joint family property, it is open to those members of the family who did not join in the alienation, to contend that the alienation was made without authority and not for valid necessity or for the benefit of the joint family and that it is not enforceable. But such alienation is good as against a person who is not a member of the joint family and does not claim through the joint family.

A grant of property made under a deed in favour of a mahant of a temple and his heirs for the services rendered by the mahant to the temple is not a grant of the property to the idol or to the temple, and the mahant and his heirs are competent to deal with the property as their private property. A BANARSI DAS v. SHRODARSHAN DAS SHASTRI, 16 A. L. J. 394 451 —Bond executed to manager—Payment to one of several heirs, whether discharges promisor—Payment to one of co-heirs of promisee, effect, of.

Payment to one of the co-heirs of a promisee under a bond would not discharge the promisor from his liability. The same considerations govern payments made to a junior member of a Hindu family during the lifetime of its manager in whose favour the bond was executed.

Hindu Law—contd.

A payment made to one of the sons of a promisee under a bond, while the latter is undergoing a sentence of transportation and there are other sons of the promisee alive at the time, does not discharge the bond.

Where money has been advanced by the manager of a joint family the other members do not become co-promisees with him.

A person who has an interest in bonds or securities standing in the name of another is not a co-promisee with him. M ANKALAMMA v. BELLAM CHENCHAYYA, 7 L. W. 221; 34 M. L. J. 315; 23 M. L. T. 215; 41 M. 637 419 —Joint family consisting of brothers—Alienation by manager, whether binding on other members—Necessity.

The manager of a Hindu joint family, which owned a house in a town and lived by cultivation of an occupancy holding, executed a mortgage of the house in favour of the plaintiff. The mortgagor died and the plaintiff brought a suit for the sale of the house against the remaining members of the joint family, who contended that as they and their ancestors were cultivators and the house in dispute was used in connection with their cultivation, its hypothecation could not be valid according to law and no decree could be passed in respect thereto:

Held, that the house being situated in a town and there being nothing to show that it passed to the defendants as an appendage or adjunct of the tenure or that there was any connection whatsoever between the two, it could not be held to be appurtenant to their occupancy holding.

In a joint Hindu family consisting of brothers and their families, an antecedent debt incurred by a brother in the position of a manager is not binding upon his other co-parceners, unless it can be shown to have been incurred for family necessity. It is not the pious duty of brothers or nephews to pay debts incurred by their brothers or uncles. A NIRMALAY LAL v. KALLAN 546 —consisting of one adult co-parcener and minors—Testamentary guardian, appointment of, for minors' properties by manager, validity of—Statutory authority, sanction of.

It is not competent to the only adult co-parcener of a Mitakshara family consisting of himself and his minor co-parceners to appoint a testamentary guardian to the co-parcenary properties of the minor co-parceners.

Per Ayling, J.—The attractive doctrine that everything which is not expressly forbidden should be held lawful, if expedient, is one which has its dangers and requires careful consideration before application.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—On principle, a person who is not capable of making a gift of his property or to dispose of it by testament cannot be in a position to control that property after his death.

The Indian enactments dealing with guardianship, viz, the Court of Wards Regulation, the Guardians and Wards Act and the Widows' Re-marriage Act give no statutory authority for the appointment of a testamentary guardian in respect of co-parcenary property. They only refer to cases in which such power of appointment is permissible under the law,

Hindu Law—contd.

for example cases of self-acquired property in Madras or Dayabhaga property in Bengal. M CHIDAMBARA PALLAI v. RANGABAMI NAICKER, 34 M. L. J. 381; 23 M. L. T. 266; (1918) M. W. N. 265; 7 L. W. 454; 41 M. 561

905 — Joint family—Joint and self-acquired property, blending of, effect of—Gift by managing member of joint family property, validity of.

A member of a Hindu joint family may convert his self-acquired property into ancestral family estate by throwing it into the common stock.

A Mitakshara family of five brothers separated in estate. D. and K., two of the brothers, continued to live together, D. acting as guardian of K., who was a minor. Later on a son R. was born to D. Later still D. D., a third brother, died, and property came to D. and K. from his estate. D. kept only one account of the profits of this property, even after K. came of age, and he kept only one account for all his receipts from this and other property and of all his expenditure. A partition by metes and bounds was later effected between D. and K. and mutual exchanges were made whereby D. gave up his share in certain ancestral property for K.'s share in property acquired from D.D.'s estate and vice versa.

In a suit by D.'s son and grandsons after D.'s death to set aside deeds of gift executed by D. in favour of the respondents, on the ground that the property given was ancestral property and the gifts in consequence were invalid:

Held, that even assuming that the property coming from D.D.'s estate was D.'s self-acquired property, yet by blending the income of that property in the accounts with the income of the new joint family constituted on R.'s birth by D. and R. and by the mutual exchanges with K. D. had shown his intention to treat what came to him from D. D. as joint property and had converted it into ancestral estate and that the properties included in the deeds of gift were, therefore, joint family properties of which D. had not the right to dispose, and that the appellants were entitled to recover them. P C RADHAKANT LAL v. NAZMA BEGUM, 22 C. W. N. 649; 27 C. L. J. 632; 16 A. L. J. 537; 5 P. L. W. 72; 23 M. L. T. 292; (1918) M. W. N. 386; 35 M. L. J. 99; 20 Bom. L. R. 724

806

— Mortgage for necessity—Minor members, whether necessary parties to suit on mortgage—Mortgage-decree—Sale—Joint family property, whether passes under sale.

Where a mortgage is effected for family purposes, it is not necessary to make the minor members of the family parties to the suit on the mortgage.

In order to ascertain what passes upon an execution sale upon a decree made against the karta of a Mitakshara joint family it is necessary to look, first, at the circumstances in which the debt was contracted, secondly, at the form in which the plaintiff's claim was pressed, thirdly, at the decree made, fourthly, at the attachment, fifthly, at the sale proclamation and lastly, at the certificate of sale. PAT JAGDISH NARAYAN PRESHAD SINGH v. MANMATHA NATH, (1918) PAT. 71; 4 P. L. W. 331

76 — Partition—Division in status, when effected—Sale by co-parcener divided in status and

Hindu Law—contd.

excluded from enjoyment of his share—Vendee, position of—Profits, past, right of vendee to.

A definite and unambiguous indication by one member of a joint family of his intention to separate himself and enjoy his share in severalty will amount to a separation or division of status, and the filing of a plaint for partition is such an indication.

After a division of status between two co-parceners, they are in the position of tenants-in-common with reference to the property left undivided and, therefore, the party who is in exclusive possession of the property and takes the whole of the rents and profits thereof has to account to the other party for his share of such rents and profits.

A vendee from a co-parcener in a Hindu family, who has become divided in status from the other members and has been excluded from the enjoyment of his share in the property, is entitled to an award of profits from the date of such separation.

The rule of law that profits cannot be claimed till after decree applies only to the case of a joint family and not to the case of a divided family with joint property.

The Court will always endeavour as far as possible to allot to the purchaser the share he purchased.

Per Spencer, J.—Whatever the seller can get by way of income on his share, the purchaser of his right, title and interest can recover. M VANJAPURI GOUNDAN v. PACHAMUTHU GOUNDAN, 7 L. W. 225

62

— Joint family—Partition by father without consent of sons, validity of—Devise of father's share to one son—Right of other sons to claim division by metes and bounds.

Under Hindu Law a father can effect a partition between himself and his sons with or without their consent.

When a Hindu father effects a division with the consent of one of his sons, the other sons dissenting, he must be deemed to have effected the partition in exercise of his power as father.

Where the father in such a case registers the partition deed under section 35 of the Registration Act and afterwards devises the items that fall to his share to one of his sons, the other sons cannot claim a division by metes and bounds but must accept the items allotted to them.

Such a deed of partition is receivable in evidence as evidencing a contract by some only of the intended executants who signed the deed, and it can be looked into to ascertain the intention of the executants.

A testamentary disposition of specific properties cannot be utilized for proving the bequest of the share to be allotted to the deceased, in case it is found that the testator was not entitled to the specific properties but only to a share as a tenant-in-common. M NATESA IYER v. SUBRAMANIA IYER, 23 M. L. T. 507

335

— Sale by father of equity of redemption of family property as his acquisition—Redemption by vendee and possession thereafter as absolute owner—Redemption, suit for, by son's alienee

867

— Self-acquired property, whether can be converted into joint family property.

A member of a joint Hindu family who has acquired property of his own may convert it into joint family property in the ordinary sense of the term and thereafter all the members of the family will have the same rights in it as though it had been acquired originally by their joint exertions or descended to them from a common ancestor. B RANGBHAT RAMCHANDRAHAT v. SITABAT BANEDHAT, 20 Bom. L. R. 338 584

Hindu Law—contd.

— Partition—Property included by mistake—Discovery of mistake—Loss, apportionment of—Partition, whether can be re-opened.

Where parties arrive at a partition either by agreement, or by a decree, which is only a more solemn and binding form of agreement, there is an implied and mutual right of indemnity or contribution in respect of any paramount claim by a third person which throws the burden of a loss not contemplated in the partition proceedings unfairly upon one of the parties. If the original decision has been arrived at by a common mistake, which in the case of a decree has been adopted by the Court making the decree, the mistake can be set right pro tanto, i.e., the partition can be opened up in so far as is necessary to apportion the loss which arises out of the discovery of the mistake. A GANESHI LAL v. BABU LAL, 16 A. L. J. 339 4

— Religious endowments—Debutter—Asthali, nature of—Purchases out of asthali income, nature of—Alienation by guardian of minor mahant with leave of Court, whether binding on asthali property.

The mahant of a Hindu asthali or math holds the property of the math in trust for the institution itself. He can only alienate it in case of necessity.

Acquisitions with the income of an asthali are subject to the same trust as the original property.

In the absence of such necessity as would render the debts contracted by him binding on the institution, a mahant has no power to alienate its properties for the purpose of discharging those debts and if the asthali is not liable for such debts, the successor of the mahant is entitled to have the alienations set aside.

J, a mahant, appointed the first respondent, a minor, his successor and left a Will whereby he appointed C. guardian of the first respondent. J. had mortgaged the asthali property. The mortgagees after his death brought or threatened proceedings on the mortgages. To pay off these liabilities C. obtained from the District Judge leave to sell certain of the asthali properties.

Held, that C.'s powers could not be larger than those of the actual mahant and that in the absence of proof that the original debts were binding on the asthali, the sales must be set aside. P C BASUDEO ROY v. JUGALKISHWAR DAS, 5 P. L. W. 57; 16 A. L. J. 601; 35 M. L. J. 5; 22 C. W. N. 841; (1918) M. W. N. 431; 8 L. W. 120 818 — Succession—Dancing girl, succession to property of—Sons versus daughters—Daughter's daughter, whether to be preferred to son.

The property of a dancing girl will pass to her female issue first and then to her male issue.

Its devolution is by custom similar to the devolution of Stridhanam.

Hindu Law—contd.

Consequently, a daughter's daughter succeeds to such property in preference to the son. M NAGALINGAM PILLAI v. VADUGANATHA ASARI, 24 M. L. T. 81 672

— Widow, surrender by, of part of estate, validity of.

A surrender in favour of her husband's reversioners made by a Hindu widow otherwise than for consideration to meet legal necessities, in order to be valid, must be of the whole of her interest in the estate. C MOHANANDA DUTTA CHOWDHURY v. BAIKANTHA NATH DUTTA 872 — Will—Ancestral property—Manager of joint family, whether can distribute ancestral property by Will.

A Hindu proprietor or the manager of a joint Hindu family cannot make by Will any equal or unequal distribution of his ancestral property. P NAND LAL v. DEWAN CHAND, 78 P. W. R. 1918 162

— — —, construction of—Woman, estate taken by—Life-estate, whether can be created by Will—Contingent remainder after estate granted to woman, effect of—Adverse possession under Will—Alienation—Necessity—Recitals, value of.

The Will of a childless Hindu provided that his moveable and immoveable property should remain in the possession of his wife until her death, and that after her death it should pass into the possession of his niece, but that if on the death of his wife and niece there were living a son and a daughter born of the womb of the niece, then two-thirds of the moveable property should belong to the said son and one-third to the daughter. But as regards the immoveable property none shall have the least right of alienation:

Held, (1) that the Will purported to convey an absolute estate ultimately to the son and daughter of the niece and that the fact that the corpus was not expressly mentioned was not sufficient to justify the interpretation that the corpus did not pass;

(2) that the recital in the Will that there should be no right of alienation made no difference, so far as any rate as the niece's son and daughter were concerned, nor did it make any difference that the bequest in favour of the niece's son and daughter failed on the ground that they were unborn at the date of the testator's death;

(3) that the disposition in favour of the niece's son and daughter was intended as a gift of the remainder, and not merely a statement of what the testator believed to be the rule of succession in case of his niece's intestacy;

(4) that the Will was not intended to and did not vest an absolute estate of inheritance in the niece, and that, therefore, she did not in that capacity have an unfettered right of alienation;

(5) that the estate created in favour of the niece was an estate such as a woman ordinarily acquires by inheritance under the Hindu Law, which she holds in a completely representative character but is unable to alienate except in case of legal necessity;

(6) that the words restricting alienation in respect of the niece's estate were of the nature of surplusage, that is to say, the testator had in his mind the ordinary recognized restriction upon alienation which would apply independently of any provision in the Will, and that he had not in his mind the eventuality of an alienation becoming necessary either for the purposes of providing maintenance for the niece or for the preservation of his estate.

Hindu Law—concl'd.

An estate of the kind that a Hindu widow inherits in the case of intestacy can be created by Will.

Where a mere contingent remainder is created after a woman's estate and not a vested remainder, this is an indication in favour of the view that the estate created was a woman's estate in the technical sense and not merely a life-estate.

In construing a Will made by a Hindu testator, it is not permissible to take into consideration what the effect of such a Will would be under the English Law. It is not permissible for instance to import the idea that where an estate is devised to endure only for life, the result is that an estate in fee in remainder, whether vested or contingent, must exist in some one.

The English classification under which estates are projected along the plane of time and are measured by time alone, is foreign to the Hindu Law which measures estates not by duration but by use.

A Hindu can by Will create an estate for life in the English sense, but his intention to do so must be made clear by the terms of the Will itself without any importation of English ideas.

Actual proof of necessity which justifies an alienation under Hindu Law is not essential to establish its validity. It is only necessary that a representation should have been made to the purchaser that such necessity existed, and that he should have acted honestly and made proper enquiry to satisfy himself of its truth.

A recital in the deed is clear evidence of the representation, and, if the circumstances are such as to justify a reasonable belief that an enquiry would have confirmed its truth, then when proof of actual enquiry has become impossible, the recital, coupled with such circumstances, would be sufficient evidence to support the deed.

Quere.—Whether where a person enters under a Will of uncertain construction, an absolute title can be acquired by adverse possession in the absence of an express claim to hold an absolute title. PAT RAM BHADUR v. JAGERNATH PRASAD, 3 P. L. J. 199; 4 P. L. W. 377; (1918) PAT. 181 749

Instalment decree—Default in payment of instalment—Waiver.

An instalment decree provided that in case of failure to pay the amount of any two instalments the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the whole of the unpaid balance of the decree. The first instalment was not paid on the date fixed, but before the due date of the second instalment it was paid in full with interest at the agreed rate. There was a further default in paying the second instalment and the decree-holder thereupon claimed that there was a failure to pay the amount of two instalments at the period fixed, and, therefore, that he was entitled to claim the whole amount of his debt at that time remaining unpaid:

Held, that the real intention of the parties was that before the penalty could be enforced two instalments must be in arrears together and that condition not having been fulfilled in this case the decree-holder was not entitled to execute the decree for the whole of unpaid balance. SUBRAYA VENKAPPA HEGDE v. SOMBAYA HEGDE, 20 Bom. L. R. 335 581

Instalment decree—concl'd.

Intention, whether mixed question of law and fact.

The question with what intention a person did a certain act can hardly be said to be anything but a question of fact.

This question must be examined with reference to the subsequent acts of the person alleged to have a certain intention. PAT RAGHUBIR PRASAD v. MISRI KAHAR 303

Interest, payment of, after date fixed for redemption—Charge, interest, whether is—Excessive rate of interest, whether ground for relief.

The mere fact that the rate of interest stipulated for in a mortgage deed is excessive is no ground for relief, unless it is shown that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower. P. ALLAH DIN v. FATEH DIN, 31 P. R. 1918; 54 P. W. R. 1918; 27 P. L. R. 1918 101

—, whether can be allowed as damages for detention of money—Interest Act (XXXII of 1849).

It is open to a Court to award damages for wrongful detention of money after adjustment of accounts even though interest is not recoverable either under a contract or under the provisions of the Interest Act. C. KHETRA MOHAN PODDAR v. ASWINI KUMAR SAHA, 22 C. W. N. 498 667

Interest Act (XXXII of 1839) 401, 667Interpretation of Statutes 519

It must always be presumed that the Legislature does not intend to make any alteration in the law beyond what it explicitly declares, either in express terms or by implication, or in other words beyond the immediate scope and object of the Statute. In all general matters beyond, the law remains undisturbed. It is in the highest degree improbable that the Legislature would overthrow fundamental principles or depart from the general system of law without expressing its intention with irresistible clearness. S. SOBHRAJ DWARKADAS v. EMPEROR, 11 S. L. R. 128; 19 Cr. L. J. 591 399

—Act taking away jurisdiction of ordinary Courts.

An Act by which the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts of Judicature is taken away must be construed strictly. N. KAMA v. BHAJANLAL CHAUTANLAL 654

—Headings of chapters, value of 534

—, principles of—Retrospective effect.

An enactment, which deliberately withdraws certain classes of cases from the jurisdiction of Small Cause Courts, cannot be said to declare the law and does not have a retrospective effect. M. SUBRAMANIAM AIYAR v. NAMASIVAYAN ASARI, 23 M. L. T. 255; (1918) M. W. N. 238 11 —Vested rights preserved under repealed enactment, rules relating to.

A repealing enactment cannot impose an impossible condition on pain of forfeiture of a vested

Interpretation of Statutes—concltd.

right or be applied to cases in which its provisions cannot be obeyed. M. TIRUMALAIAM NAIDU v. SUBRAMANIAM CHETTIAR, 40 M. 1009 109

Jagir, transfers of portions of, nature and effect of—Resumption, right of—Burden of proof.

A jagirdar sold all his rights in certain villages to certain Chowdhris, who in turn sold all their rights in those villages to the ancestor of the plaintiff. The defendants, who were the descendants of the original jagirdar, contended that the transfer to the Chowdhris was not a sale, but merely a grant of bailari tenure according to which only heirs male of the grantee could succeed, and that as the last holder of the tenure had left no male issue, the plaintiff being his daughter's son, they were entitled to resume the villages. It was found that the ancestors of the plaintiff had been in possession of the villages for generations and that the words used in respect of the transfers of the villages were bikri and farokht.

Held, that the burden was on the defendants to prove their right to resume both as against the Chowdhris and as against the ancestors of the plaintiff. PAT RAMESWAR LAL BHAGAT v. GIRWAR PRASAD SINGH, (1918) PAT. 156 883

Joint owner placed in exclusive possession of some lands by mutual arrangement, whether can be disturbed by co-sharers—Partition, suit for—Joint possession, proof of.

One of the joint owners of an estate, who by mutual arrangement with the other co-sharers has been placed in exclusive occupation of some of the joint lands as representing his share, cannot be equitably disturbed by the latter, unless they seek a partition of all the lands comprised in the estate.

It is essential in a suit for partition that the plaintiffs should establish that they and the defendants are not only joint owners but are also entitled to joint possession, because the object of the suit is to transform the joint possession into possession in severalty. C. DURGA CHARAN ACHARJEE v. KHUN-KAR ENAMAL HUQ, 21 C. L. J. 441 705

Judge's knowledge of character of parties⁸ or witnesses, whether can be relied upon in deciding case—Procedure—Jurisdiction.

A Judge is justified in using his knowledge about the character of the parties to a suit to come to a decision upon the credit to be attached to their evidence on the case set up by them.

Where a District Judge declined to believe in the bona fides of a suit brought by the plaintiff, unless it was supported by evidence that left no doubt in the mind of the Judge about its credibility, on the ground that many of the suits launched by the plaintiff in his Court had been found to be false:

Held, that the Judge was justified in alluding to his experience of the plaintiff's litigation in his Court. L. B. SAN HLA BAW v. MI KHOROW NISSA, 9 L. B. R. 160 734

Jurisdiction 30, 71, 236, 494, 734, 959

— of Civil Courts

— of Civil and Revenue Courts—Partition case before Revenue Court—Title, question of, raised by applicants themselves—Civil suit, maintainability of. Where in a partition case filed in a Revenue Court, before any notices were issued to the recorded co-

Jurisdiction—concltd.

sharers or at any rate before any objections could be filed by them to the application for partition, the applicants themselves asked the Court to postpone the case until they could have the question of their title cleared up in a Civil Court and the Revenue Court granted the required postponement and the applicants then instituted the proposed suit in the Civil Court:

Held, that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. O. DEOKI NANDAN v. KALI SHANKAR, 5 O. L. J. 116 873 — Consent of parties, whether confers jurisdiction.

tim. Where a Court has no inherent jurisdiction to try a case it cannot pronounce any decree and if it does pronounce a decree that decree is null and void. On the other hand, if a Court has jurisdiction and the law requires some preliminary conditions to be observed ancillary to such jurisdiction being exercised, the parties may waive these conditions and in that event the jurisdiction cannot be impeached on the ground of irregularity in the exercise of the Court's jurisdiction. PAT RAGHU SINGH v. USUF ALI, 4 P. L. W. 445 920 — Sanction to prosecute granted by Subordinate Judge—Appeal, forum of—District Judge or High Court.

Where a sanction to prosecute is granted or refused by a Subordinate Judge, an appeal against the order lies to the District Judge, and not to the High Court, even where the value of the suit out of which the proceeding for sanction has arisen is beyond the appellate jurisdiction of the District Judge. PAT BHAIRO PRASAD v. HARIHAR PRASAD, 19 C. L. J. 31 679

— of Small Cause Court 323, 414

Karachi Port Trust Act (Bom. Act VI of 1886), ss. 87, 88—Board of Trustees for Karachi Port, suits against—Limitation.

The word 'person' in section 87 of the Karachi Port Trust Act technically includes and was intended to include the Board.

Sections 81 and 83 of the Karachi Port Trust Act do not distinguish suits against private individuals from suits against the Board, but section 87 deals with the limitation of suits against the Board or any servant or officer of the Board, while section 88 deems the responsibility of the Board for acts of their officers and servants. S. MOOSAJI AHMED & CO. v. KARACHI PORT TRUST, 11 S. L. R. 126 410

— s. 87—Limitation—Special period of limitation for suits against Karachi Port Trust, whether subject to general provisions of Limitation Act.

The general provisions of the Limitation Act regarding the exclusion of holidays and Court vacations in computing the period of limitation, have no application to any special period of limitation prescribed by any special or local law e. g., the Karachi Port Trust Act.

A suit against the Karachi Port Trust filed beyond the period of 6 months allowed by section 87 of the Karachi Port Trust Act, owing to the intervention of Easter holidays and vacation of the Court is barred by limitation. The maxim lex non cogit ad impossibilia has no application to such a case as the Karachi Port Trust Act—concl'd.

suit could have been filed earlier. S MOOSAJI AHMED & Co. v. ASIATIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD., 11 S. L. R. 06 168

Lambardari Rules (Punjab), r. 15—

Appointment of lambardar on death without heirs of last incumbent—Matters to be considered—Collector, discretion of, interference with.

Where a lambardar dies without heirs, the question of the appointment of a successor should be dealt with under rule 15 of the Lambardari Rules as though it were a case of the first appointment of a lambardar.

An officer making an appointment under rule 15 of the Lambardari Rules is at liberty to consider all matters which may reasonably be regarded as relevant to the suitability of an appointment, and he is expected to decide between rival candidates according to the general balance of their respective claims and of the administrative advantages, or disadvantages, of appointing each respectively. If he exercises his discretion in a reasonable manner, neither ignoring any portion of those matters which he ought to consider, nor perversely running counter to the general sense of the rule, his decision ought to be allowed to stand, and the mere fact that an appellate or revising officer takes a different view of personal claims is not a good reason for upsetting or modifying that decision. F. C. P. MASHIR ALI v. CHIRAGH KHAN, 1 P. R. 19:8 REV. 87

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 12, 18, 20—Service of single notice and presentation of single application in respect of acquisition of several plots—Splitting up of awards by District Court, whether disentitles petitioner from treating them as single award.

Where in respect of several plots only one notice was sent to the owner under section 12 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act and he presented only one application under section 18 and one reference was made by the Land Acquisition Officer to the District Court, the fact that the award was split up by the latter should not prejudice the party who is entitled to treat it as one single award. M VENUGO NAIDU v. DEPUTY COLLECTOR OF MADURA DIVISION. 34 M. L. J. 279 468

ss. 18, 20 468
ss. 29, 30, 45—Compensation, apportionment of—Tenant of abadi site, whether entitled to share of compensation—Wajib-ul-arz, provisions of.

The plaintiff, a perpetual lessee of a village claimed from the defendant, a tenant, the entire compensation received by the latter under the Land Acquisition Act in respect of a house site in the abadi of the village. The village wajib-ul-arz declared the right of the defendant to occupy the site as long as he pleased, but also declared the right of the plaintiff to resume the site of the house after the occupant left the village, the latter having only the right to transfer the materials of the house:

Held, that the defendant had no interest in the land but was a mere licensee to occupy it and that he was not, therefore, entitled to a portion of the compensation awarded for the acquisition of the site under the Land Acquisition Act. N SHANKAR GOVIND v. KISAN 554

s. 45 554

Landlord and tenant

289

Accretion to tenancy by formation of chur in river—Tenant, rights of.

Lands which have gradually accreted to a mukar-rari holding, forming a chur in a small shallow river cannot be claimed by the Zemindar as a portion of his khas patit but belong to the tenant subject to the payment of additional rent in respect thereof. C GOBINDA HOTA v. KRISTAPADA SINGHA BARU 929

Agreement to grant lease—Lessee admitted as tenant—Subsequent lease to third person, validity of.

Defendant was tenant of certain land which the landlord agreed to re-let to him on his paying a certain sum of money in cash. Defendant paid the amount and continued in possession of the land agreed to be let to him. The landlord subsequently granted a lease of the same land to the plaintiff:

Held, (1) that the landlord was not entitled to grant a lease to the plaintiff, inasmuch as he had already, by reason of the agreement with the defendant followed by the acceptance of the money, constituted the latter as a tenant on the land;

(2) that plaintiff, when he came to deal with the landlord, must be deemed to have had constructive notice of the rights of the defendant who was actually in possession and cultivating the land. C EDON MOLLAH v. BADAN 49

Agreement to pay enhanced rate of rent after expiration of term of tenancy, validity of.

An agreement by a tenant that if he holds over upon the expiry of the term he would pay rent at a higher rate than that which he paid during the term, is valid and enforceable. PAT RAMADHIN CHAUDHURY v. KUMODINI DASAI 901

Agricultural lease—Disclaimer of landlord's title, what amounts to—Forfeiture of tenancy—Lease for life or for term, whether determined by disclaimer—Relief against forfeiture—Power of Court—'Renounce', meaning of.

The principles of section 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act apply to agricultural leases, though they are not covered by the enactment.

A mere allegation of title by a tenant which does not amount to repudiation of the landlord's title, cannot work forfeiture of the tenancy.

Where the defendant, who was plaintiff's tenant for life, in a document whereunder he assigned certain properties which belonged to him in jeam, described certain other properties as his jeam, and the landlord sought to recover these latter properties which were comprised in his lease on the ground that his title was repudiated:

Held, that as the assertion was not addressed to the landlord or followed up by a transfer of that particular property to a third party, but was only an incidental reference in a document intended to convey some other property, it was not enough to constitute a disclaimer of title.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Where there is a disclaimer of the landlord's title by the tenant, it will work a forfeiture of the tenancy even though the lease is for life or for a term.

If there is a denial of title, Courts have no power to relieve against forfeiture. In such a case, the tenant must prove, in order to obtain relief from Court, that the denial was occasioned by the fraud mistake or accident of the landlord and that the tenant himself was neither careless nor negligent.

Landlord and tenant—contd.

The expression 'renounce' connotes that some act is done to the knowledge of the landlord which is calculated to convey to him the impression that the tenant repudiates his title.

Per Napier, J.—Where there is no statutory provision determining particular relations between landlords and tenants in India, resort may be had to the principles of the English Law of Real Property, bearing in mind the difference in the origin of tenures and the conditions peculiar to land tenures in India. The words 'repudiation' and 'renunciation' require something a great deal stronger than a mere assertion not communicated to the landlord. Though a hard and fast rule cannot be laid down, a very good test to apply would be, whether the assertion would operate as a starting point for adverse possession against the landlord. M. KOMALUKUTTI v. PELIKALAKATH MUHAMMAD, 34 M. L. J. 170; 23 M. L. T. 178; 7 L. W. 291; (1918) M. W. N. 200; 41 M. 629 743

— Apportionment of rent—Joint landlords, right of, to recover rent proportionately to their shares.

Before the rent of a holding is actually apportioned either by an amicable arrangement between all the parties concerned or by a decree, one of the joint landlords cannot, as a matter of right, claim from the tenants what he estimates to be his proportionate share of the rent.

Joint landlords cannot at their choice collect rent in separate shares even after giving due notice to the tenants of their separate demands. C. SATYESH CHANDRA SARKAR v. JILLAR RAHMAN, 27 C. L. J. 438 721

— Cesses, landlord agreeing to bear, effect of.

Where a landlord let out a tenure at Rs. 50 per annum including the cesses:

Held, that the landlord clearly undertook by contract, as between himself and the tenure-holder, that he would bear the cesses. C. JOGENDRA NATH MITRA v. APARA PRASAD MUKERJEE 616

— Denial of landlord's title—Forfeiture of tenancy—Determination of tenancy.

A denial by a tenant of his landlord's title in a suit for rent causes a forfeiture of the tenancy enabling the landlord to eject the tenant as a trespasser.

In order to determine a tenancy on the ground of denial of title by the tenant, it is not necessary that any notice should be given or a prescribed act should be done by the landlord. It is sufficient if something is done by the lessor to show his intention to determine the lease. PAT MUHAMMAD ABDUL LATIF v. HABIBUR RAHMAN 642

— Dowl kabulyat, construction of—Permanent interest, acquisition of—Landlord entitled to re-enter upon parties failing to settle rate of rent on expiration of temporary term, effect of.

Where a Dowl Kabulyat provided inter alia that in the event of the landlord and the tenant not being able to arrive at a new rate of rent after the expiration of the temporary term covered by the Dowl Kabulyat, the landlord would be entitled to take possession of the land leased:

Held, that the provision was absolutely inconsistent with the fact that the tenant had a permanent

Landlord and tenant—contd.

interest in the land leased. C. MOHIM CHANDRA PAL v. PRADYAT KUMAR TAGORE 651

— Ejectment—Co-sharer landlord, whether can eject tenant—Partial ejectment, whether can be allowed—Tenancy, whether can be created by prescription.

No co-sharer landlord can put an end to a tenancy unless he represents the entire proprietary body. Any co-sharer can sue to eject a trespasser from the entire area covered by a trespass, but only the full landlord can sue to eject a tenant.

A man who is put on the land as a tenant by a co-sharer and who remains with his status undisputed for many years, is prima facie a tenant who has been accepted as such by the proprietary body.

There can be no such thing as a partial ejectment of a tenant to the extent of the share of the co-sharer claiming joint possession, nor can there be joint possession by the landlord with the tenant.

Semble:—There can be created no tenancy by prescription. N. DHANOOAL v. RAMLAL 496

— Grant of patta to tenant by Government, effect of—Adverse possession, claim of.

Where the relationship of landlord and tenant has once been created, it cannot be terminated by any adverse action taken against the landlord by a third party, whether that party be the Government or some other rival claimant, and the tenant will still be estopped from denying the landlord's title.

The grant of a patta by Government to the tenant of a third person or a declaration of its ownership of the property will not dissolve the relationship of landlord and tenant already existing or start adverse possession in favour of the tenant against the landlord. M. ELEDATH THAYAZHI v. ELIANGATTIL SANKARA VALIA, (1918) M. W. N. 376; 7 L. W. 574; 24 M. L. T. 79; 8 L. W. 44 656

— Lease in consideration of services—Option of landlord to accept money-rent in lieu of services or to eject tenant—Landlord, right of, to eject on tenant's refusal to perform services.

Where a lease was granted prior to the date of the Bengal Tenancy Act in consideration of the tenant undertaking "to render those services which his predecessor had rendered in the house of the landlord's predecessors and to duly perform those which he would be required to do in the landlord's house at the time of marriages", with an option to the landlord, on the tenant's failure to perform the services, to recover Rs. 2 as rent in lieu thereof or to eject the tenant:

Held, that the lease was a perfectly good one and under its terms the landlord was not bound to accept Rs. 2 in lieu of the services, but was competent to eject the tenant, in the event of the latter's refusal to perform the services. C. SANCHIRAM DE BAHARI v. HARA PRIYA THAKURANI 611

— Lease, construction of—Toll, payment of, in respect of goods sold on boat or road.

The defendant took a lease of a certain property, to which the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act applied, for the purpose of carrying on a shop. The lease provided for the payment of a certain amount of rent and also for the payment of a toll over the stipulated rent as part of the rent in respect of goods that should be sold in the shop or on boat or on road on certain terms:

Landlord and tenant—contd.

Held, that on a reasonable construction of the lease the defendant was liable to pay the toll not only in respect of goods sold in the shop but also in respect of goods which, having been taken from the shop to the nearest boat or road, would be sold there, but that his liability did not extend to the case of goods sold on boats and roads far away from the shop. C KISHORE LAL GOSWAMI v. TARAPADA BHATTACHARJEE 875

— Lease to tenant for term with liberty to landlord to settle land on expiration of term, whether confirmatory of pre-existing tenancy.

A document which gives the tenant a lease for particular term at a fixed rent and which gives to the landlord the right at the expiration of that term to settle the land with whomsoever he pleases, cannot be taken as a mere recognition of a pre-existing tenancy. C DHARANI KANTA LAHIRI v. ISMAIL SHAIKH 221

— Occupancy rights—Takiadar, whether can build pucca mosque on takia land without consent of proprietors—Suit by proprietors for injunction—Death of some plaintiffs-appellants, pending appeal—Appeal, whether abates in toto.

A takiadar is not entitled to build a pucca mosque on any part of the takia land in his possession as an occupancy tenant without the consent of the proprietors.

A suit was brought by several proprietors of a village against the defendant for a perpetual injunction restraining him from building a mosque on certain takia land of which he was in possession as an occupancy tenant. On the hearing of the second appeal in the Chief Court it appeared that some of the plaintiffs-appellants had died and no application had been made to bring on the record their legal representatives within limitation:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as the suit could in the first instance have been brought without the deceased plaintiffs having been joined at all, the appeal did not abate as a whole but only so far as the deceased plaintiffs-appellants were concerned;

(2) that as the building of a mosque was inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was originally given, the defendant was not competent to build a pucca mosque on the takia land. P SAWAN v. MEHR DIN 963

— Occupancy tenancy in Punjab, nature of—Forfeiture—Denial of landlord's title, effect of

The occupancy tenant of the Punjab is more than a mere permanent tenant; he is an individual who in many cases should have been the landlord, and he enjoys a permanent tenancy subject to certain conditions, at a concession rent.

The English rule of forfeiture on denial of the landlord's title is applied in the Punjab in the case of ordinary tenancies and even in the case of permanent tenancies on a rack rent and when the denial of the landlord's title admits of no other remedy, but the rule is inapplicable in the case of an occupancy tenancy. P FAKIR v. WAZIR KHAN, 32 P. R 1918 105

— Rent received by gomasta of landlord, whether sufficient to prove tenancy

Landlord and tenant—contd.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the ordinary presumption would be that the gomasta of a landlord performed his duty and duly delivered the rent collected by him to his employer the landlord. Therefore independently of the question whether a gomasta had authority to grant an amal-namah or settle a holding, the receipt of rent by him on behalf of his employer from the person in occupation of a holding is sufficient to prove the tenancy of the latter. C JAHIRMUL BARU v. KERAMUTULLAH MOLLA 196 — Rent, suit for maintainability of, against one of several heirs of deceased tenant—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 43, applicability of.

A landlord cannot maintain a suit for arrears of rent against one of several heirs of a deceased tenant without joining the others as defendants. Section 43 of the Contract Act has no applicability to such a case. C SIBA KRISHNA SINHA SARMA v. JAGAT CHANDRA 732 — Suit for arrears of rent—Decree with limitation that it should not be executed against tenant personally, validity of.

Where in a suit for rent the Court finds that the defendant-tenant is liable, it should pass a decree in favour of the landlord-plaintiff in the ordinary way without any limitation as to the execution of the decree, e.g., that the decree shall only be executed against the jama in default and not against the tenant personally.

Where in a suit for rent the Court, holding that the plaintiff's evidence as to the defendant's possession of the jama was meagre and unsatisfactory, but was not so bad as could be wholly discarded, made a decree in favour of the landlord with the limitation that the defendant-tenant would not be personally liable under the decree:

Held, that the decree must be set aside and the case remanded for a re-hearing and a clear finding whether the defendant was or was not liable for rent in respect of the jama, and that on that finding there should either be a decree in the ordinary manner without any limitation or the suit should be dismissed altogether. C DWARKA NATH DEY v. SAILAJA KANTA MULLIK 702 — Tenancy, whether divisible—Mortgage by one co-tenant in favour of another, whether binding on Malguzar.

A tenancy, so far as the landlord is concerned, is indivisible and cannot be affected by an act to which the tenants alone are parties. Therefore, a mortgage of his share by one co-tenant in favour of the other is not binding upon the landlord. N ANAND RAO v. GIRDHARILAL 474

— Trespass by tenant—Injunction, suit for 592

— Under-proprietary right, proof of—Sir, land held as, effect of—Res judicata—Proprietary title, question of, decision as to—Mortgagee, decision against, whether binding on mortgagor.

While there can be no doubt that under-p.o. proprietary rights may be acquired by long adverse possession extending over the necessary period, it is at the same time necessary that a person who claims to have acquired a title in this way, must give definite evidence to show that he asserted an under-proprietary title.

Landlord and tenant—conclld.

Where it was found that certain persons had escaped ejectment on the ground that they had been holding their land as sir and that they had been described as sirdars in the receipts for rent given to them by the landlord:

Held, that on the above finding they could not be held to be under-proprietors of the sir land.

A decision obtained against the mortgagee alone in respect of a question as to proprietary title is not binding on the mortgagor. O KHUNU SINGH v. ABRAS BANDI, 5 O. L. J. 121 849

Lease, construction of —, construction of—Covenant for renewal.

Where a lease granted by Government contained a clause to the following effect: "If you agree to pay the enhanced rent which will be fixed at the time of re-settlement in future, the Government will have the right to settle with you, and if you decline, with some other person."

Held, that the clause in the lease embodied in essence a covenant for renewal under which the lessee became entitled to a fresh lease on the same terms as before, except as to the amount of rent and the covenant for renewal. C SECRETARY OF STATE v. DIGAMBAR NANDA, 27 C. L. J. 413 939

—, construction of—Covenant for renewal.

Where on a settlement made by the Government the grantee executed a Kabuliyat containing the following clause:—"If I agree to the enhanced rent to be fixed at the time of the next settlement in future, the Government shall have the power to settle the lands with me, or if I do not agree then with others":

Held, that the clause in the lease was in essence a covenant for renewal, under which the lessee became entitled to obtain a renewal of the lease on the same terms as were contained in the original lease, except as to the amount of rent and the covenant for renewal, and that according to the true construction of the original lease the term of the renewed lease would continue till the completion of the next periodical settlement by Government. C SECRETARY OF STATE v. SIRAPRO AD JANA, 27 C. L. J. 447 983

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 13 (b)—Pleader—Professional misconduct—Acting for both parties in one suit.

A Pleader, who acts for one party at one stage of a suit or proceeding and then, without the leave of the Court, acts for the opposite party in the same suit or proceeding, although he may not act out of any improper motive, is guilty of gross carelessness and disregard of the rules of the profession, amounting to gross misconduct in the discharge of professional duties within the meaning of section 13 (b) of the Legal Practitioners Act. PAT EMPEROR v. BIR KISHORE RAI, 3 P. L. J. 380; 5 P. L. W. 229; 19 Cal. L. J. 635 684

—, rules under, r. 41—Case involving large pecuniary value—Two sets of fees, award of.

Under rule 41 of the rules framed under the Legal Practitioners Act, it is competent to a Court to award two sets of fees to a party where more than one Legal Practitioners Act—conclld.

Vakil has been engaged by him owing to the large pecuniary value of the case, even though it does not involve questions of special difficulty. M CHALIKANI VENKATARAMANIM GARU v. VATSUYA NEKKATA SUBHADRYANMA, 34 M. L. J. 458; (1918) M. W. N. 371; 24 M. L. T. 56 437

Licensee—Ejectment, suit for—Notice to quit, whether necessary.

In order to maintain a suit for the ejectment of a licensee, a notice to quit is not necessary even where the licensee has erected huts upon the land. C GABINDA CHANDRA GHOSH v. NANDADULAL SUT, 27 O. L. J. 523 317

LimitationLimitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 3 168

—S. 5—Appeal, delay in filing—Sufficient cause—Mistake of legal adviser.

A legal adviser's mistake, in order to justify an extension of the period prescribed for presenting an appeal, must be a bona fide one; and nothing can be deemed to be done in good faith which is not done with due care and attention.

Presentation of an appeal to a Court which has obviously no jurisdiction to entertain it is not a bona fide mistake. P AHMAD HASSAN v. SHAMS-UL-NISA, 10 P. L. R. 1918; 69 P. W. R. 1918 542

—S. 5—Appeal filed beyond time—Sufficient cause—Mistake of legal adviser—Proof.

Before an extension of time can be granted under section 5 of the Limitation Act on the ground that the appeal has been filed beyond time owing to a mistake made by the legal adviser of the appellant, there must be proper evidence establishing that a mistake was committed and that it was a bona fide one. C ISWAR CHANDRA KAPALI v. ARJAN 725

—S. 5—Delay in presenting appeal—Presentation to wrong Court, whether sufficient cause.

Delays in presentation of appeals are within section 5 of the Limitation Act and the Court has power to excuse delays.

Where an appeal is time-barred on the date of its presentation and the delay is due to the fact that it was previously presented in a wrong Court and returned for re-presentation to the proper Court, the delay can be excused under section 5 of the Limitation Act. M KARAKKATTITATHIL RAYARAPPA v. KOYTAN CHARLE VERTIL, 35 M. L. J. 51; 24 M. L. T. 28; 8 L. W. 154 489

—S. 10, applicability of, to suit for accounts by minor against Administrator, whether substantial question of law 182

—S. 10—Trust—Assignment of land—Suit for possession—Limitation.

Where as the result of a mutual arrangement plaintiff assigned some land to the defendant who was to remain in possession of it taking profits and bearing loss until the termination of the assignment:

Held, that a suit to recover possession of the land by the plaintiff was governed by section 10 of the Limitation Act. P SKOTI v. BHAGIRATH, 12 P. L. R. 1918; 70 P. W. R. 19 8 325

—S. 14—Exclusion of time spent in bona fide proceeding in Court not having jurisdiction—Due diligence—Delay, effect of.

A decree for rent was obtained against two co-tenants of a holding and was satisfied by one of them on 9th August 1910. On 20th May 1913 the latter instituted a suit for contribution against the other co-tenant in the Small Cause Court which, holding that it had no jurisdiction to try the suit, directed the return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court on 27th November 1913. The plaintiff refused to take back the plaint and lodged a revision in the High Court on 19th February 1914, which was dismissed on 16th March 1915. On 15th June 1915 she applied for the return of the plaint which was returned on the 30th June 1915, on which day she presented it in the Court of the Munsif.

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

Held, that even if it were assumed that the plaintiff was entitled to exclude the period from the 20th May 1913 to the 16th March 1915, she could not in any case be allowed to exclude the period between the 16th March and the 30th June under section 14 of the Limitation Act, inasmuch as she did not prosecute her suit with due diligence in view of the fact that she waited for three months after the dismissal of her application for revision before she asked for the return of the plaint and that, therefore, the suit was barred by time.

Held, further, that the plaintiff was not justified in refusing to take back the plaint from the Court of Small Causes merely because she wished to file a revision in the High Court, inasmuch as if she had taken back the plaint her action could not have prejudiced her application for revision and, on the other hand, she would have been able to present the plaint in the proper Court immediately on the dismissal of the application. A HAMIDA BIRI v. FATIMA BIRI, 16 A. L. J. 429 991

— s. 14—Execution—Application for transfer of decree, dismissal of—Subsequent application for attachment—Limitation—Exclusion of time occupied in appeal and second appeal against first order.

A decree-holder applied in the Tinnevely Munsif's Court on 13th September 1909 for transfer of his decree to the Ambasamudram Munsif's Court. The application was rejected by the Munsif but was allowed in appeal. In second appeal, however, the High Court restored the Munsif's order on 13th February 1914. The decree-holder then applied for attachment of the judgment-debtor's properties on 14th October 1913.

Held, that the application was barred by limitation and that the time occupied in the appeal and second appeal in the matter of the first application could not be excluded under section 14 of the Limitation Act, inasmuch as the application was proceeded with in a Court having jurisdiction and the decree-holder could not be said to have pursued his remedy through a bona fide mistake in the wrong Court. M VIDHYA THEERTHA SWAMIGAL v. VENKATARAMA IYER, 33 M. L. J. 692 460

— s. 15 (2), applicability of, to suits under s. 104H, Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885).

Section 15 (2) of the Limitation Act cannot be applied to extend the period of six months provided for the institution of suits under section 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act. C SECRETARY OF STATE v. GANGADHAR NANDA, 27 C. L. J. 374 228

— s. 19—Acknowledgment—Deposition made by defendant, whether acknowledgment.

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

A deposition made by the defendant in a previous case but not signed by him or by an agent duly authorised by him in that behalf does not fulfil the requirements of section 19 of the Limitation Act and does not, therefore, amount to a valid acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of that section. P KAPUR CHAND v. NARINJAN LAL, 34 P. R. 1918 99

— s. 19, Sch. I, Art. 78—Acknowledgment—Payment by cheque—Cheque dishonoured—Limitation.

The fact that the defendant, in a suit to recover money alleged to be due on accounts taken between the parties, sent to the plaintiff a hundi and a cheque which were dishonoured on presentation, cannot attract the application of Article 78 of the Limitation Act to the suit.

The mere delivery of such a hundi and cheque does not constitute an acknowledgment within the meaning of section 19 of the Limitation Act. C PADMA LOCHAN PATAR v. GIRIS CHANDRA KIL, 27 C. L. J. 392 241

— ss. 20, 21—Limitation, saving of—Interest, payment of—Co-mortgagor, payment by, whether binding on other co-mortgagors

Where payment of interest as such is made by one of several co-mortgagors, such payment cannot in view of section 21 of the Limitation Act save limitation under section 20 of that Act except as against that co-mortgagor, unless it is shown that the other co-mortgagors authorised the payment. O MUBARAK ALI v. GOPI NATH, 5 O. L. J. 73 613

— s. 21—Acknowledgment by partner, whether binding on co-partner—Implied authority to acknowledge, proof of, admissibility of.

In the absence of direct evidence that a co-contractor or partner has authorised his co-contractor or partner to make acknowledgments or payments saving limitation on his behalf, such authority can be inferred from other circumstances, such as the position of the other co-contractors or partners in the business. M PANDIRI VEERANNA v. GRANDHI VEERABHADRASWAMI, 34 M. L. J. 373; 23 M. L. T. 261; (1918) M. W. N. 286; 7 L. W. 552; 41 M. 427 18

— s. 120 432

— Sch. I, Art. 11 (a), applicability of 103

— Art. 30—Carrier, suit against, for injury to goods carried—Limitation.

A suit for compensation for injury to goods while in the possession of a carrier, e. g., a Railway Company, falls under Article 30 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act and must be filed within one year from the date when the injury occurs. S LOUIS DREYFUS & Co. v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 11 S. L. R. 103 173

— Art. 31, applicability of 485
— Arts. 36, 62, 102—'Wages,' meaning of—Archaka of temple, claim by, for salary and perquisites—Limitation.

The term 'wages' in Article 102 of the Limitation Act is a very general term; although it is usually used in connection with daily wages, it also includes the wages paid as monthly salary.

A claim, therefore, for the salary and perquisites of office by the archaka of a temple, whose position is essentially that of a servant under the temple trustee, is governed by Article 102 of the Limitation Act.

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

If the perquisites are received from third persons, they are not wages and if the claim is for their recovery from the trustee as in tort, Article 36 and not Article 102 will apply. M BHARADWAJ MUDALIAR v. ARUNACHALLA GURUKKAL, 23 M. L. T. 248; 7 L. W. 624

Sch. I, Art. 61 414
Art. 62 786
Art. 78 414
Arts. 89, 90—Principal and agent—Accounts, suit for, of moneys entrusted to agent—Misapplication of moneys—Limitation, commencement of—Agency, termination of. 241

A suit by a principal for accounts of moneys entrusted to his agent is governed by Article 89 of the Limitation Act, even though there are averments in the plaint that the agent either through negligence or misconduct has misapplied the moneys in an unauthorised manner.

The words "other suits" in Article 90 of the Limitation Act show that that article does not include suits which properly come within Article 89.

Such matters as the liability of the agent for wilful default and to account for moneys that should have come to his hands come within the scope of an ordinary money account and are governed by Article 89.

The termination of an agency is a question of fact for the purposes of Article 89 of the Limitation Act and the agency must be considered as having terminated when the authority of the agent is revoked, or the agent renounces the agency or the business of the agency is completed, which is practically another case of revocation or determination of authority. M MUTHIAH CHETTI v. ALAGAPPA CHETTI, 41 M. L. 430

Art. 102 414
Art. 120 786
Art. 120—Landlord and tenant

Trespass by tenant—Injunction, suit for—Limitation.

In 1893 defendant, who was the tenant of a house, built his own house on the adjoining land and constructed a staircase which was supported by a pillar driven into land belonging to the house of which he was the tenant. In 1905 the plaintiff took a permanent lease of the latter house and in 1912 he asked the defendant to pull down the staircase. The latter refused and the plaintiff then brought a suit for a mandatory injunction directing the defendant to remove the staircase.

Held, that the suit was barred by limitation under Article 120, Schedule I of the Limitation Act. B HARIRAM KISNIKAM v. SHIVAKAS RAMCHAND, 20 Bom. L. R. 327 592

Arts. 126, 144, 148—

Hindu Law—Joint family—Sale by father of equity of redemption of family property as his acquisition—Redemption by vendee and possession thereafter as absolute owner—Redemption, suit for, by son's alienee—Limitation, commencement of.

First defendant and his father G. mortgaged family property to 2nd defendant. G. subsequently sold the equity of redemption as if the property was his self.

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

acquisition to 3rd defendant. Third defendant redeemed 2nd defendant and obtained possession of the property. After G.'s death 1st defendant sold his share in the property to the plaintiff. In a suit by the plaintiff for possession of 1st defendant's share on payment of a proportionate portion of the mortgage amount:

Held, that Article 126 of the Limitation Act was applicable to the suit and that time commenced to run from the date of 3rd defendant's entering into possession.

Per Sadayira Aiyar, J.—Article 126, which speaks of a suit "to set aside" the father's alienation of ancestral property, includes a suit in which possession is claimed and does not only contemplate a mere declaratory suit.

An alienation under Article 126 need not be for consideration. The Article applies alike to an alienee with and to an alienee without notice. M MURAJALLI MUNIA GOUNDAN v. RAMASAMI CHETTI, 34 M. L. J. 528; 8 L. W. 28; 24 M. L. T. 22; (1918) M. W. N. 448; 41 M. 650 867 Sch. I, Art. 134—Alienation of athen property by mahant—Suit by succeeding mahant—Limitation.

Article 134, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act governs a suit instituted by a succeeding mahant of an athen for possession of property appertaining to the athen by setting aside an alienation for valuable consideration made by the preceding mahant in respect of that property. If such a suit is brought beyond 12 years from the date of such an alienation, it is barred by time to the extent of the interest which the alienation purports to convey, inasmuch as each succeeding mahant does not get a fresh start of limitation on the ground of his not deriving title from any previous mahant. O BASOEO BAN v. RAM SARN, 5 O. L. J. 38 292

Art. 134—Mortgage of occupancy holding to zemindar—Transfer of holding by zemindar—Redemption, suit for—Limitation.

An occupancy tenant gave a usufructuary mortgage of his holding to the zemindar, who sold his property rights including the holding to the defendant. The plaintiff brought a suit for redemption and the defendant contended that the plaintiff being an occupancy tenant and having been dispossessed for more than six years from his holding, his suit for possession was barred by time:

Held, that the suit was not one to recover possession of a holding from which the plaintiff had been unlawfully dispossessed, but was a suit by a mortgagor to recover possession of the mortgaged property from his mortgagee and certain persons to whom the mortgagee had transferred the property and as the plaintiff had not been unlawfully dispossessed from the holding, the limitation of 12 years applied from the date of transfer to defendant under Article 134 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act. A ABHILAKH DHALPHORA v. LILADHAR DHALPHORA 549

Art. 134, scope of—Transfer by mortgagee—Redemption, suit for, against transferee—Adverse possession, plea of—Absolute interest, acquisition of, by purchaser—Tests—Burden of proof—Adverse finding on issue, while final decision favourable to party, effect of—Res judicata.

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

Article 134 of the Limitation Act governs only those cases where the transferee from the mortgagee acquires an absolute title to and interest in the property transferred.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Article 134 of the Limitation Act is only a branch of the law of prescription, and the question to be determined in cases governed by that Article is, what it is that the purchaser prescribed for. If the transferee bargained for and believed he was bargaining only for the interests of the mortgagee, he cannot acquire title as the absolute owner of the property. The fact that he knew his vendor had only mortgagee rights would not be conclusive on the question. The real test would be, did he ask for and obtain an absolute interest in the property and believe himself that he was acquiring an absolute interest in it.

The fact that a party against whom an issue is decided has no right of appeal does not affect the rule of res judicata.

Where the decision on an issue is not necessary for the disposal of the case, it will not operate as res judicata.

Where an unnecessary decision on an issue is embodied in the decree itself, the matter becomes res judicata.

Where a judgment decides more issues than one and it is doubtful on which of those issues the final conclusion was based, the decision on all the issues will be res judicata.

Where the decision on an issue is unnecessary and the party against whom it is given cannot appeal as the final decree is in his favour the decision on the issue would be res judicata. The proper procedure for the party adversely affected by the issue is to ask the Court to embody it in the decree.

Per Bakerell, J.—A transferee who claims the benefit of Article 134 of the Limitation Act must adduce evidence that he intended to purchase an absolute title, which will be, in the first place, the deed of transfer but may also consist of the contract of sale and the negotiations which preceded it. Evidence as to the documents of title produced by the vendor and the steps taken by the purchaser to ascertain the former's title to the property will be important as showing the interest to be transferred. If the title adduced by the vendor and the deed of transfer to the purchaser are consistent with an intention to transfer an absolute interest, the burden will lie on the plaintiff to show that the circumstances of the transfer negative such an intention. M MUTHAYA SHETTI v. KANTHAPPA SHETTI, 34 M. L. J. 431; 7 L. W. 482; 23 M. L. T. 291; (1918) M. W. N. 331

975Sch. I, Art. 135*563

Art. 142—Possession and dis-possession—True owner obtaining possession by force—Limitation, commencement of.

Possession of the true owner, however obtained, counts in his favour for the purposes of Article 142 of the Limitation Act in a suit brought by him for recovery of possession on establishment of title.

The plaintiffs, having been dispossessed by the defendants of certain lands belonging to them, succeeded in ousting the latter therefrom and retained possession until they were evicted under a decree in a suit brought by the defendants under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act:

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

Held, that time began to run against the plaintiffs from the moment they were evicted in execution of the decree under the Specific Relief Act, and not before. C HARI DAS v. DEBENDRO RAM BANERJEE

548

Sch. I, Art. 144 563, 656, 867

Art. 148 867

Art. 148, applicability of, to suit for redemption of charge—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 95—Co-mortgagor redeeming mortgage—Charge on shares of other co-mortgagors—Possession of co-mortgagor, whether adverse to others.

Article 148 of the Limitation Act does not apply to a suit to redeem a charge which one of several mortgagors redeeming the mortgaged property has under section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act on the shares of the other co-mortgagors.

Three brothers D, G. and K. were the joint owners of a taluq which they had mortgaged. A., in execution of a decree against two of the brothers, D. and G., having purchased the taluq, redeemed the mortgage and obtained possession of the lands through Court. Subsequently he procured from the superior landlord a settlement of the whole taluq in his favour. The finally published Record of Rights contained an entry showing that the taluq was in exclusive possession of A. by virtue of the sale-certificate he had obtained at the execution sale:

Held, that A. having redeemed the mortgage obtained a charge on the share of the third brother K. by virtue of section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act, but that his possession of the taluq, having regard to what happened subsequent to his redemption of the mortgage, was not the possession of a co-sharer of K. but was in exclusion of K. and adverse to him. C PURNA CHANDRA PAL v. BARADA PRASUNNA BHATTACHARJEE, 22 C W N. 637

783

Art. 181.

Quere.—Whether Article 181 of the Limitation Act applies to an application to enforce an injunction or whether such an application is exempt from the operation of the Limitation Act. C SACHI PRASAD v. AMAR NATH RAI, 27 C. L. J. 506

864

Arts. 181, 182—Execution

—Decree satisfied by attachment and execution of another decree in judgment-debtor's favour—Decree set aside on appeal—Refund of amount realised—Application for execution—Limitation

Appellant obtained a decree for costs against respondent. In execution of that decree appellant attached and executed a decree obtained by the respondent against a third person. The latter decree was, however, set aside on appeal, and appellant had to refund the money realised by him in execution of that decree. The appellant then made a fresh application for execution of his own decree more than three years after his last application:

Held, (1) that the application being in form and in substance one for execution of a decree, Article 181 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act had no application to it;

(2) that the application was governed by Article 182 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act and, having Limitation Act—1908—concl'd.

been made more than three years after the date of the last application, was barred by limitation. A
SUNDER LAL v. BANARSI DAS 531

Sch. I, Arts. 181, 182—(Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 5 (2))
 —Mortgage suit—Application for final decree—Limitation applicable.

Article 181 and not Article 182 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act is applicable to an application for a final decree in a mortgage suit under Order XXXIV, rule 5 (2), Civil Procedure Code, where the preliminary decree was passed after the new Code, Act V of 1908, came into force. M PATTABIRAMA NAIDU v. SUBRAMANIAM CHETTI, 7 L. W. 438 76

Art. 182 (5)—Execution of decree—Payment of portion of decretal amount by judgment-debtor—Limitation, fresh starting point of. A decree-holder gets a fresh starting point for limitation to execute the decree within the meaning of Article 182, clause (5) of the Limitation Act, from the date on which a portion of the decretal amount is paid by the judgment-debtor. C JOTINDRA KUMAR DASS v. HAGAN CHANDRA PAL 903

Art. 182 (6)—'Date of issue of notice,' meaning of.

The date of the issue of notice in Article 182 (6) of the Limitation Act means the date on which the notice actually issues from the office of the Court, that is to say, the date for which it is signed by the shristadar in the name of the Court. Pat KHODA BUKHSH v. BAHADUR ALI, (1918) Pat. 130; 3 P. L. J. 285; 4 P. L. W. 324 203

Art. 182 (6)—Date of issue of notice, what is.

The words, "date of issue of notice" in clause (6) of Article 182 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act mean the date on which the notice was in fact issued, and not the date on which the Court ordered it to be issued. B NILKANTH LAXMAN JOSHI v. RAGHO MAHADEU PAYALE, 20 Bom. L. R. 351 559

Art. 182 (7) 436

Madras Civil Courts Act (III of 1873), s. 14 89Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), s. 3 471

ss. 3 (2) (d), 8 (1) (2) and Exception—Merger of kudiavaram interest in fractional melvaram holder in inam Lease Rent, suit for, whether cognizable by Civil or Revenue Court—Jurisdiction—'The inamdar,' meaning of—Exception to s. 8, applicability of.

A suit for rent by a fractional sharer in an inam village who has acquired the Kudiavaram interest in the entire village in respect of a lease of a portion of the village after such acquisition, is cognizable by the Revenue and not by the Civil Court, the holding not having ceased to be part of the estate.

The expression 'the inamdar' in the exception to section 8 must be read in its strict sense as equivalent only to the owner of the entire interest in the inam and the exception is applicable only to sub-section (1). M RAJACHARI v. THIRUMUGOOR DEVASTANAM, 34 M. L. J. 419; 7 L. W. 588; (1918) M. W. N. 506 71

Madras Estates Land Act—cont'd.s. 8 (1) (2) and Exception 71

s. 26—Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865), s. 11—Landlord and tenant—Faisal rate, presumption of, as proper rate of rent—Contract to receive lower rate by prior landholder, whether binds successor—Decision in favour of reduced rate in suit by previous landholder, whether res judicata in suit for faisal rate by successor.

Though the provisions of section 11 of the repealed Madras Act VIII of 1865 are not re-enacted in the Madras Estates Land Act there is a presumption that the faisal rate fixed by Government is the proper rent that can be levied on the land.

A contract between a landholder and a tenant for payment of a favourable rate of rent will not, except in cases specified in section 26 1 of the Madras Estates Land Act, bind the successor-in-title of the landholder who can enforce the faisal rate or the rate in force prior to such contract.

Per Phillips, J.—A decision of Court negating a landholder's right to levy faisal rate and upholding a contract between him and his tenant for payment of reduced rent will not be res judicata in a suit by the landholder's successors to enforce the original rate, as under section 26 (3) of the Madras Estates Land Act, a special privilege is conferred on the successor to a landholder, not possessed by the original landholder himself, i. e., the right to enhance an unduly low rate of rent agreed to by the latter.

Per Bakerwell, J.—The prior decision will not operate as res judicata, unless it is shown that the plaintiffs in that suit had an absolute interest in the property, in order that they might be held to be the predecessors-in-title of the landholder seeking to enforce the original rate in the subsequent suit. M KAREPPA GOUNDAR v. NARAYANA CHETTIAR, (1918) M. W. N. 188; 7 L. W. 376; 24 M. L. T. 35 406 ss. 77 (1), 189, 192, 3—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. VII, r. 10, O. XLIII, r. 1 (a)—Suit in Revenue Court—Remand by District Court for presentation to Civil Court—Appeal, second, to High Court, maintainability of—High Court, power of, to treat appeal as revision—Rent, suit for, on cessation of service for which tenure granted—Forum—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court, scope of.

s. 77 (1) 471

No second appeal lies to the High Court against an order of the District Court in appeal remanding a suit instituted in the Revenue Court for presentation to the Civil Court.

Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), Civil Procedure Code, which gives the right of appeal against orders passed under Order VII, rule 10, is inapplicable to suits in Revenue Courts by virtue of section 192 of the Madras Estates Land Act.

The High Court has power to treat an appeal as a petition in revision under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, especially when the question in issue is one of jurisdiction. Section 115, Civil Procedure Code, is not controlled by section 192 of the Madras Estates Land Act.

A suit for rent, based on the allegation of the land being a Ryoti land in which the defendant has occupancy rights, is cognisable by the Revenue Court notwithstanding plaintiff's admission that the defendant held at a favourable rent on condition of doing services which were discontinued and which discontinuance disentitled him to claim the reduction. Under the circumstances, the land cannot be said to be held on service tenure at the date of suit so as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts.

Madras Estates Land Act—conclld.

When the allegations in a plaint bring the case within section 77 of the Estates Land Act, the suit must be filed in the Revenue Court and the jurisdiction of the Court will not depend on any plea the defendant might raise. The fact that the Court will have to go into complicated questions will not affect the jurisdiction of the Revenue Court. M VENKATA RAMAYYA APPA ROW v. CHAKALI VEERASWAMIGADU, 34 M. L. J. 309; 23 M. L. T. 251; 7 L. W. 508; (1918) M. W. N. 327; 41 M. 554 471

— ss. 189, 192 471
Madras Forest Act (V of 1882), s. 26. scope of—Existing rights, saving of—Conviction without enquiry into rights claimed, legality of.

Section 26 of the Madras Forest Act does not empower the Government to regulate the use of the land which is dealt with in Chapter III to the detriment of any rights existing in individuals and communities.

Where the residents of a village claim the right of pasturage and the right to cut fuel, a conviction under section 26 without an enquiry into these allegations is illegal. M THATHA PILLAI v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 600 504

Madras Land Encroachment Act (III of 1905), s. 3—Pathway on private land, obstruction of, by owner—Penal assessment, levy of, legality of.

Government have no right under Madras Act III of 1905 to levy penal assessment where an owner of land obstructs a pathway over the land to which the public have acquired a right of user. M ALACDIS SAHER v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 6 L. W. 436 30

Madras Local Boards Act (V of 1884), s. 73 729

Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865), s. 11 406

Madras Revenue Recovery Act (II of 1864), ss. 25, 38—'Defaulter,' meaning of—Sale for arrears of revenue, suit to set aside, maintainability of—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Omission to distrain moveables, whether sufficient to set aside sale—Collusion among bidders, effect of.

An agreement made between the purchaser and other persons after the sale to go in shares, a collusive agreement between the bidders not to bid against each other, the omission of any attempt to distrain the moveable properties of the defaulter or the crops on the land are not sufficient grounds to set aside the sale by a suit filed in the Civil Court.

The 'defaulter' referred to in section 25 of the Madras Revenue Recovery Act who is entitled to notice or demand before attachment and sale is the ostensible registered proprietor. To plead that section the plaintiff must show that he is the defaulter. A person who owns the land but allows the patta to stand in another person's name and thus puts him forward as the ostensible owner, cannot claim the benefit of the section or complain that Government erroneously served the written demand on the latter. M MANAKARI VENKAPPA CHARI v. HOLAGUNEL POMPOXA (GOWD), (1918) M. W. N. 191; 7 L. W. 372; 23 M. L. T. 297 474

Madras Revenue Recovery Act—contld.

— s. 38.
 An irregularity in the conduct of a sale held under section 38 of Madras Act II of 1864 empowers the Collector to set it aside, but there must be other sufficient grounds for a Civil Court to interfere. M MANAKARI VENKAPPA CHARI v. HOLAGUNEL POMPOXA (GOWD), (1918) M. W. N. 191; 7 L. W. 372; 23 M. L. T. 297 474

— ss. 44, 59, 63—Regulation X of 1831, s. 2—Sale of minor's property for arrears of revenue—Suit to set aside sale, absence of, effect of—S. 59 of Act II of 1864, applicability of, to cases governed by Regulation X of 1831—Regulation X of 1831, applicability of, to ryotwari estates of minors—Registry in name of minor's mother, effect of.

A sale of a minor's property under the Madras Revenue Recovery Act is not a proceeding to which section 59 of the Act is applicable so as to compel the aggrieved parties to sue within 6 months of the sale. Section 59 is inapplicable to cases protected by Regulation X of 1831.

Regulation X of 1831 does not only apply to such estates of minors as are ordinarily taken charge of by the Court of Wards; Ryotwari lands owned by minors also come within the protection of the Regulation.

Where the patta erroneously stands in the name of the minor's mother, that fact does not preclude the minor from invoking the aid of Regulation X of 1831.

Per Spencer, J.—Section 2 of Regulation X of 1831 includes the estates of minor sole proprietors not under the charge of the Court of Wards. This section and the preamble to the Regulation and the foot-note to section 20 of Regulation V of 1804 make it clear that the prohibition extends to minors' estates of every description not subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards. The section does not apply to minor members of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara Law, who have by birth merely an undivided interest in the estate. M SAMINATHA AIYAR v. GOVINDASAMI PADAYACHI, (1918) M. W. N. 409; 8 L. W. 37 595

— s. 59 595
 — s. 59—Sale for dues to Government—Notice, absence of, to defaulter, effect of—Irrregularity—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Suit to set aside sale beyond limitation—Proceedings after sale, knowledge of, effect of—Estoppel.

Failure to serve notice of sale on a defaulter under Madras Act II of 1864 does not affect the jurisdiction of the Collector to sell the property for arrears due to Government.

An omission to serve notice will amount to an illegality or irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction by the Collector within the meaning of section 115, Civil Procedure Code, and would vitiate his proceedings; but that is not enough to enable the party aggrieved to obtain a declaration that the sale is not binding on him, if he does not sue within the period specified in section 59 of the Act.

Madras Revenue Recovery Act—
concl'd.

The fact that the sale was without notice will not enable the defaulter whose property was sold to ignore subsequent proceedings taken to his knowledge as having been taken without jurisdiction. M VADLUR CHINNA NAGI REDDI v. DEVINENI VEN. KATRAMANIAN, 23 M. L. T. 231; (1918) M. W. N. 224; 7 L. W. 468

s. 63

653
595

Malabar Law—Compromise of suit by Karnavan on behalf of Tarwad—Karnavan not impleaded as such, effect of—Compromise decree, whether binds Tarwad—Burdens of proof—Registration Act (XX of 1866)—Non-registration of compromise decree.

The validity of a decree passed on compromise was not dependent on registration under the Registration Act of 1866.

The onus of proving that a compromise is illegal or void is on the party asserting it.

Where a decree is in effect against a Tarwad, the fact that the Karnavan was not specially impleaded in his representative capacity will not make it the less a decree against the Tarwad.

It is not the form of the suit that is essential, but the question in each case is whether in substance the person suing or sued conducted the litigation for his own benefit or as representing the family of which he was the head. M KARAKKATITATHIL RAYARAPPA v. KOYOTAN CHARLE VEETIL, 35 M. L. J. 51; 24 M. L. T. 28; 8 L. W. 154

489

—Melcharth, execution of, by devaswom agent—Consideration, application of, for purposes of devaswom—Melkanondar, duty of, to enquire as to application of funds—Recital in deed as to nature of executant's control over devaswom, whether renders melcharth unenforceable.

A Melcharth executed by the agent of a Devaswom is not unenforceable merely because the executant describes the nature of his control over the Devaswom.

The grant of a Melcharth by the trustee of a Devaswom is an ordinary incident of its management, the propriety of which the Melkanondar is under no obligation to scrutinise, and the latter is not bound to enquire into the existence of any particular necessity for funds by the Devaswom or into the application of such funds by the trustee. M VYTHI-NATHIEN v. PADMANABHA PATTAR

659

Malabar Law and Usage—Karnavan, appointment of senior Anandhravan as, by family Karar—Removal of Karnavan, suit for, maintainability of.

Where the senior Anandhravan in a Malabar Tarwad is appointed to the office of Karnavan by a family Karar whereunder the existing Karnavan renounces or is deprived of his office, a suit will lie to remove the Karnavan so appointed for misconduct.

A family Karar to which all the adult members of a Tarwad are parties and by which a person is deprived of his status as Karnavan is not the same thing in the eye of the law as a unilateral act of relinquishment of his office by the Karnavan, though the result on his status as Karnavan may be the Malabar Law and Usage—concl'd.

same. M PAZHAVATHIL MAVILAPUTAI VEETIL CHINDAN NAMBIAR v. KUNHI RAMAN NAMBIAR, 34 M. L. J. 40; (1918) M. W. N. 233; 23 M. L. T. 316; 7 L. W. 542; 41 M. 577

26

—Otti mortgagee, right of pre-emption of—Involuntary sale, enforceability of right in—Notice of sale and of sale price, whether necessary—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 60, 65, O. XXI, rr. 89, 90, 91, 92.

The right of pre-emption of an otti mortgagee in Malabar does not arise in the case of an involuntary sale, and he is not entitled to notice of the sale or of the sale price in such a case. M VARADDEVAN v. ITTIRARICHAN NAIR, 34 M. L. J. 412; 23 M. L. T. 302; (1918) M. W. N. 318; 7 L. W. 547; 41 M. 562

46

Malicious prosecution—Proof—'Reasonable and probable cause,' meaning of—Innocence, proof of, by plaintiff, whether necessary.

In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must prove four things, (1) that he was prosecuted, (2) that the prosecution ended favourably to him, (3) that the defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause, and (4) that the defendant was actuated by malice. Under the second and third heads, questions as to plaintiff's innocence generally arise. But they must be regarded only as incidental to the question whether the prosecution ended in the plaintiff's discharge or acquittal and whether the defendant acted without reasonable or probable cause.

The plaintiff is not charged with the onus of affirmatively proving his innocence.

Reasonable and probable cause means an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based on a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds of the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. M GOVILA KRISHNA KUDVA v. BANGLE NARAYANA KANTHY, 34 M. L. J. 517; 23 M. L. T. 341; 7 L. W. 604; (1918) M. W. N. 454

803

Master and servant—Liability of master for servant's wrong.

A master is answerable for every such wrong of his servant or agent as is committed in the course of the service and for the master's benefit, though no express command or privity of the master be proved.

The owner of a vessel is not liable qua owner for damage caused by the negligence of the crew. He is liable only as employer of the wrong-doer. L B. BRUCE, D. M. v. KYAW ZIN —Liability of master for wrongful act of servant.

822

A master is liable for the wrongful act of his servant where the servant, acting in a matter which is within the scope of his authority, that is, within the course of his employment, commits a wrong by exceeding the authority vested in him. The act itself which constitutes the wrong may be in excess of the servant's authority, but if in thus transgressing his authority the servant is doing in the master's interests one of the class of acts which the master has employed him to do, then the master is liable. B GIRJASHANKAR DAYASHANKAR v. B. B. & C. I. RAILWAY, 20 BOM. L. R. 126

715

Mercantile Law—Bill of lading—Carrier by sea, right of, to limit liability by bill of lading.

According to English Law it is open to a carrier by sea to limit his liability by a writing such as the bill of lading. Consequently the following conditions in a bill of lading are perfectly valid:

(a) that the Company shall not be liable for any damage caused by sweating, fermenting, heat, boilers, or storage, whether arising or not from the negligence of the persons in the service of the Company;

(b) that the liability of the Company shall absolutely cease when the goods are over or beyond the side of the Company's own ship level with the rail;

(c) that the Company shall not be liable for any damage capable of being covered by insurance.

S MOOSAJI AHMED & CO. v. ASIATIC STEAM NAVIGATION Co., Ltd., 11 S. L. R. 106 168

Mesne profits, claim for, against trespasser, maintainability of 879

Minor, decree against—Negligence of guardian ad litem in conduct of suit—Bad management of suit—Failure to raise money by encumbering property in order to prevent final decree from being passed, whether gross negligence—Non-service of summons on minor's guardian, whether sufficient ground for setting aside decree by suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 13, O. XVII, r. 2.

Gross negligence on the part of a guardian or next friend in conducting a suit on behalf of a minor is a good ground for the minor to bring a suit for setting aside the decree.

But mere bad management of a suit by the guardian or an omission to raise money on behalf of the minor by further encumbering the estate, in order to prevent a final decree in a mortgage suit from being passed, is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a mortgage decree unless the conduct of the guardian amounts to fraud or gross negligence.

The mere non-service of summons on a party to a suit is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the decree in a fresh suit unless it is part of a scheme of fraud.

If an ex parte decree is passed against a minor under Order XVII, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, the remedy of the minor acting through his guardian lies in the provisions of Order IX, rule 13 of the Code, and he cannot obtain relief in a separate suit unless the absence of the guardian has resulted in such an injustice to the minor as would amount to gross negligence on the part of the guardian.

A minor once represented by a guardian does not cease to be so represented merely because an ex parte decree is passed against him owing to the absence of his guardian. N VITHOBA v. SAGO 882 —, liability of, for debt incurred in carrying on ancestral trade—Minor, liability of, for partnership debt—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 247.

The liability of a minor in respect of a debt incurred in carrying on an ancestral family trade, in which he is a sharer, is not greater than that of a minor admitted to a partnership, as laid down by section 247 of the Contract Act. Therefore, a minor, on whose behalf an ancestral trade is carried on, is not personally liable for the debts incurred in such trade. His liability is limited to his share in the trade. C KUTHA MOHAN PONDAR v. ASWINI KUMAR SAHA, 22 C. W. N. 488 667

Minor and guardian—Compromise effected by guardian in consideration of settlement of disputed claim, whether binding upon minor—Claim under alleged Will, whether can form consideration for compromise where Will not genuine.

A mimanshapatra (deed of compromise) executed by a father on behalf of his minor son, by which the interest of the minor in an inherited estate is given up in consideration of the other party giving up a portion of their claim under an alleged Will, is not binding upon the minor, unless it is proved by the other party that there was in fact such a Will and that under that Will they had a claim which was made honestly and in good faith, though it is not incumbent upon them to prove the Will in solemn form after a long distance of time.

The position of a minor son is different from the position of the father who executes a mimanshapatra on his behalf: for though the father might not be able to avoid a mimanshapatra which he had executed for himself, the minor through his guardian can avoid a mimanshapatra executed on his behalf if his interest is not properly protected by his father in executing it. C KRISHNA CHANDRA DUTTA ROY v. HEMAJANKAR NANDI MOZUMDAR, 22 C. W. N. 483 477

Mortgage 76, 333

—bond made up of principal and prospective interest—Installments—Default in payment of installments—Interest, payment of.

Parties had dealings in money with each other and on making up accounts a certain sum was found due from the defendants to the plaintiff. To the sum found due an addition was made as prospective interest and a mortgage bond was executed in respect of the total sum by the defendants on the 4th October 1916. The bond provided for payment by instalments, and it was stipulated that in default of payment of any instalment it should carry interest at 2 per cent per annum to be compounded every year and that in default of payment of any two instalments the whole sum should become immediately recoverable. Default was made in respect of two instalments on 26th January 1899:

Held, (1) that plaintiff was entitled to recover (a) the principal sum secured by the bond; (b) proportionate interest out of the total sum fixed as prospective interest up to the 26th January 1899; and (c) compound interest at 12 per cent. per annum on the sum due on the date of the first default from that date up to the 26th January 1899;

(2) that the plaintiff was not entitled to any interest after the 26th January 1899. N BHAIJI v. BHAGWANT ATMARAM DHONGDI 722

—Contract giving one of two options to mortgagee—Mortgagee, position of—Waiver as to one option, effect of—Interest, default in payment of, waived, effect of.

A contract which gives the mortgagee one of two options does not bind him to either of them, if he chooses to stick to the other; in other words, it is open to him to waive the benefit of an acceleration, if the contract leaves him such an option; and that option cannot be taken away by Statute, unless there is anything to show that the grant of such an option is illegal or forbidden by law.

For example, where a mortgage-deed provided for the repayment of the principal with interest in 12 years and further stipulated that if the mortgagors failed to pay interest regularly every year, the mortgagee would be at liberty to sue for the recovery of the entire money due on the said deed before the expiry of the period fixed for redemption:

Mortgage—contd.

Held, that the mortgagee was at liberty to waive the default in the payment of interest and to wait for the expiry of the period fixed for redemption before bringing his action. O. MEHARAK ALI v. GOPI NATH, 5 O. L. J. 73 613 —decree against mortgagor after sale of equity of redemption—Purchaser of equity of redemption, position of.

J. made a simple mortgage of certain groves to M. in 1895. In 1907 he transferred the equity of redemption to the plaintiff, who got into possession of the property. Subsequently to the transfer the mortgagee obtained a mortgage-decree against J. and in execution purchased the property himself. Formal delivery of possession was made to the mortgagee, who afterwards sold the property to the defendant. The latter dispossessed the plaintiff, who thereupon brought a suit to recover possession of the property:

Held, (1) that the mortgage-decree having been obtained against J. after the transfer of the equity of redemption to the plaintiff, the latter was not affected by the decree;

(2) that the delivery of formal possession did not affect the plaintiff who was no party to the decree, and that, therefore, he was entitled to recover possession of the property. O. TASADUQ HUSAIN v. ASGHAR HUSAIN, 21 O. C. 70 606

—Deed allowing part payment of mortgage money—Tender made after demand by mortgagee, validity of—Interest, rebate of.

Plaintiffs sued to recover a certain amount of money, principal as well as interest, as a charge on property mortgaged to them by the predecessors-in-interest of the defendants. There was no provision in the mortgage deed for piecemeal redemption but it was contemplated that part payment of the principal mortgage money should be allowed. It appeared that a tender of a certain sum was made by some of the defendants on the 14th August 1909, but the plaintiffs refused to take part payment as they had become entitled to the entire mortgage money and did not wish that part of the property should be redeemed. The defendants did nothing till October 1913 when they again tendered the same sum. But on 28th January 1913 the plaintiffs had sent notices to all the mortgagors demanding payment of the full sum due under the mortgage:

Held, that under the circumstances no offer by any of the defendants subsequent to the 28th January 1913 could be a valid tender so as to entitle them to claim rebate of interest on the sums tendered and the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to recover the full amount of principal as well as interest. P. SALIG RAM v. SARGHAT-ULLAH, 83 P. W. R. 1918 175

—of occupancy holding to zemindar—Transfer of holding by zemindar—Redemption, suit for 549

—Part of consideration kept in deposit and paid afterwards—Remedies of mortgagor.

Mortgage—contd.

Where at the time of the execution of a mortgage bond for Rs. 3,000, only the sum of Rs. 1,000 was advanced to the mortgagor and the balance was kept in deposit with the mortgagee, which was subsequently paid over to the mortgagor on a registered receipt after the expiry of the due date of repayment stipulated in the mortgage bond:

Held, that in regard to the balance of Rs. 2,000 subsequently advanced the remedy of the mortgagee was not a mere personal action based on a simple contract, but he could recover the whole amount of Rs. 3,000 by a suit on the mortgage security. C. KASI NATH MITRA v. BHIKAN CHARAN MAITY 778

—Sub-mortgage, rights of—Discharge of original mortgage by substitution of other mortgages, how far affects rights of sub-mortgagee—Assignment of mortgage, absence of notice of, to mortgagor, effect of—Sale, right of, by sub-mortgagee.

There is no necessity to give notice of an assignment of a mortgage to the mortgagor, and such want of notice will not render the sub-mortgage invalid, save in so far as the assignee holds subject to the accounts between him and the original mortgagee.

The substitution of one mortgage by another mortgage will not affect the rights of a sub-mortgagee from the original mortgagee to bring the mortgagee's rights under the earlier mortgage to sale.

A sub-mortgagee has the right to sell the mortgagee's rights against the particular properties sub-mortgaged to him for the whole amount due to him and the mortgagor's remedy against him is just what he would have against the original mortgagee if the latter sought to enforce his debt against those particular properties, viz., to redeem by paying the amount due. M. PAPALA CHAKRAPANI v. LACHIMIACHU, (1918) M. W. N. 249; 23 M. L. T. 300; 35 M. L. J. 109 769 —suit on—Co-mortgagees, interests of, whether severable—Estoppel—Some co-mortgagees precluded from enforcing their rights—Rights of others.

In equity co-mortgagees are presumably tenants-in-common of the mortgage debt and their interests are severable or partible among themselves: so that one of them can sue on the mortgage provided those who are unwilling to be joined as plaintiffs are made defendants.

Where some of several co-mortgagees have by their conduct precluded themselves on the ground of estoppel from enforcing their rights under the mortgage against purchasers of a portion of the mortgaged property and a puisne mortgagee of the remainder, it is open to the Court to sever their interests from those of the other co-mortgagees who are under no disability or disqualification and to make a decree in favour of the latter in proportion to their interests in the mortgage debt. C. SAKHIUDDIN SAHA v. SONAULLA SARKAR, 27 C. L. J. 453; 22 C. W. N. 641 986

—of taluk—Mortgagee undertaking to pay land revenue—Default—Sale, collusive, for arrears, effect of—Redemption.

Defendant, who was the mortgagee in possession of a share in a taluk and had undertaken to pay the Government revenue, made default in payment of the revenue, so that the taluk was sold for arrears of revenue and was purchased by A. A. sold it to B.

Mortgage—could.

who shortly afterwards sold it to the defendant. Plaintiff, who was a purchaser from the mortgagor, sued to recover possession of the taluk from the defendant on redemption. It was found that the sale for arrears of revenue and the subsequent sales to B and the defendant were collusive transactions engineered by the defendant for the purpose of obtaining possession of the taluk as owner:

Held, that the sales did not affect the rights of the mortgagor or of the plaintiff, who was a transferee from the mortgagor, and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to redeem. C JAMILA KHATUN v. MAHAMUD KHATUN 735 —, usufructuary—Lease given by mortgagor—Sale of equity of redemption—Ex-proprietary rights—Rent, liability to pay.

The defendant gave a usufructuary mortgage of his zemindari to the plaintiff, who on the same date gave a lease of the same, to last during the term of the mortgage, to the defendant, who remained in possession as theikadar paying rent to the plaintiff under the lease. The rent having fallen into arrears, the plaintiff sued defendant, obtained a decree and caused the equity of redemption to be sold in execution. The plaintiff's mortgage was notified at the time of sale. No application for mutation of names was made and the record stood as it was at the date of the mortgage. The plaintiff again sued the defendant for arrears of rent for a period partly prior and partly subsequent to the date of the sale of the equity of redemption. The defendant denied his liability for the latter period on the ground that as his equity of redemption had been sold, he had become an ex-proprietary tenant and that as no rent had been fixed by the Collector under section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act, he was not liable to pay any rent in respect of that period:

Held, that so long as the mortgage subsisted, the defendant was a theikadar under his lease and as such liable to pay the rent stipulated for in the lease, whether or not he also became an ex-proprietary tenant of the zemindari. A MITHAN LAL v. CHHAJJI SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 394 529

Muhammadian Endowments Committee at Chittagong, whether statutory body—Mutwalli, appointment of.

The Muhammadan Endowments Committee at Chittagong is a statutory body and its recognition, where such recognition is necessary, of a person as the true and rightful mutwalli of a mosque, to which Regulation XIX of 1810 applied before its repeal by Act XX of 1863, is authoritative. C SULTAN AHMED v. ABDUL GANI 581

Muhammadian Law—Hindu Law—Custom—Halai Memons settled in Kathiawar, whether governed by Hindu Law or Muhammadan Law.

As regards inheritance and succession Halai Memons settled in Porabunder in Kathiawar did not retain Hindu Law at the time of their conversion to Islam, nor have they by immemorial custom adopted Hindu Law. In these matters, therefore, they are governed by Muhammadan Law and not by Hindu Law. B KHATUBAI v. MAHOMED HAJI ABU, 20 Bom. L. R. 289 619

Dower, prompt, right to, accrual of—

Dower, whether can be made conditional upon restitution of conjugal rights—Consummation absence of, whether bars recovery of prompt dower.

Muhammadah Law—contd.

The fact that a Court can make a decree for restitution of conjugal rights conditional on payment of prompt dower does not show that a wife's decree for prompt dower can be made conditional upon her living with her husband.

Prompt dower can be demanded by a wife at any time after the right thereto has vested in her whether or before after consummation and she can refuse all conjugal rights on the part of the husband until it is paid.

The right to prompt dower vests at marriage and it can be claimed by the wife at any time thereafter. It is a debt due by the husband to the wife and its payment cannot be made conditional on the wife living with her husband. P NAWAB BIBI v. MUHAMMAD DIN, 28 P. L. R. 1918; 100 P. W. R. 1918 893 —Gift—Heba-bil-owaz—Condition, invalid, attached to gift.

The ordinary rules applicable to gifts apply to the Muhammadan Law, like any other system of law, and one of these rules is that a gift is not invalidated by reason of an invalid condition being attached to it.

Where the conditions laid down in a heba-bil-owaz as to the form of enjoyment of the property cannot under the Muhammadan Law control the form of the gift, the gift is absolute and unqualified. C NEAMAT-UN-NESSA BIBI v. GOLAM PANCHATON KAZI, 22 C. W. N. 512; 27 C. L. J. 502 601 —Possession, delivery of—Gift of corpus, with reservation of usufruct, validity of.

Where in a deed of gift executed by a Muhammadan lady subject to the Hanafi law the donor excepted some of the property, retaining possession over it free of rent and revenue, and stated that after her death the donee would be its proprietor and that the donor would have no power to transfer it by mortgage, sale, or gift:

Held, that even in respect of the excepted property the deed operated as one of gift, inasmuch as the donor transferred the corpus of the property to the donee, reserving for herself the usufruct for life, which was not prohibited under the Hanafi law.

Held, further, that under the circumstances the stipulation not to transfer her interests in the property during her lifetime satisfied the conditions of the Hanafi law with regard to the delivery of possession.

Per Stuart, A. J. C.—There are three essentials of a gift under the Hanafi law—declaration, acceptance, and seizin. With regard to seizin, however, the rule is that where everything reasonable has been done to perfect a contemplated gift, nothing more is required. There is nothing in Hanafi law to prohibit a gift of the corpus combined with the retention of the usufruct, inasmuch as such a transfer does not create a limited estate.

Per Kanhैया Lal, A. J. C.—Where the intention to make an absolute transfer in presenti of all proprietary right is clear, any condition which derogates from the immediate completeness of the gift is regarded as void. Where the condition, however, may be given effect to without in any way interfering with or detracting from the immediate completeness of the gift, or rather the immediate transfer of the right in the substance of the gift, the condition as well as the gift are valid.

Muhammadan Law²—contd.

Any reservation of proprietary rights in the corpus would be inconsistent with an intention to make a gift, but the reservation of a right to the usufruct of a portion of the property given would not be inconsistent, if the intention to give the corpus be otherwise manifest. O FAKHR JAHAN BEGUM v. MUHAMMAD ABDEL GHANI KHAN, 5 O. L. J. 49 307 —Gift, validity of—Burden of proof.

The onus of proving the bona fides and validity of a gift executed by a pardanashin lady lies upon those seeking to claim under it. They must point out and prove the circumstances connected with the transaction. PAT ZAKIR RAZA v. MADHUSUDAN DASS, 4 P. L. W. 417 691

—Guardianship—Mother of minor girl appointed certificated guardian, whether can question marriage of minor effected by her uncle—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 42, 43—Suit for declaration that the marriage of a Muhammadan minor girl is invalid, whether maintainable.

Under the Muhammadan Law the mother, even when appointed certificated guardian of the person and property of her minor daughter, has no legal character within the meaning of section 42, Specific Relief Act, entitling her to a declaration that the marriage of her daughter with a certain person effected by her uncle, is not valid.

It would not be a proper exercise of judicial discretion to make any declaration under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act in a suit by the guardian of a Muhammadan minor girl for a declaration that her marriage with a certain person is invalid when the minor is not a party to the suit inasmuch as under section 43 of the Act, the decree would not be binding upon the minor. C SONALLA SARKAR v. TULA BIBI, 27 C. L. J. 603 203 —Inheritance, right of, renunciation or transfer of, before testing, validity of.

A transfer or renunciation of the rights of inheritance by a Muhammadan before that right has vested in him is prohibited under the Muhammadan Law. M ASHA BEEVI v. KARUPPAN CHETTY, 7 L. W. 215; 34 M. L. J. 460; 41 M. 365 35

—Marzul-maut, doctrine of, applicability of—Waqf Tauliatnama appointing successor to mutwalli, validity of.

In the case of a gift or other voluntary disposition of property under the Muhammadan Law the doctrine of marzul-maut only applies when the gift is made during such illness.

If a person holding the office of mutwalli, to which is attached the right of appointing a successor under the Muhammadan Law or under any general law applicable to the topic, freely executes a tauliatnama as a testamentary document for appointing a successor, while he is of sound disposing mind, its validity cannot be questioned. C SULTAN AHMED v. ABDEL GANI 581

—Pre-emption—Ceremonies, performance of, time of.

A right to pre-emption is based entirely upon the Muhammadan Law. It has been accepted by Muhammadan Law—conold.

Hindus in certain districts in consequence of their close contact with Muhammadans in those districts.

To create a right of pre-emption it is necessary that the Muhammadan ceremonies be performed immediately upon hearing of the sale. The date of performance is not an equitable question, so that ceremonies performed not immediately upon hearing of the sale but within a reasonable time are not good ceremonies and do not create a right of pre-emption.

In a pre-emption suit the plaintiff stated that though the sale took place on the 10th of June, he heard of it only on the 11th of August, and forthwith performed the necessary ceremonies. It was found as a matter of fact that the plaintiff heard of the sale in July of the year, and then performed the ceremonies after being advised by a Pleader to do so:

Held, that the ceremonies were performed too late to create a right of pre-emption. PAT JAGAN BHAGAT v. ARJANI MANDAL, (1918) PAT 3; 4 P. L. W. 345 255

—Waqf 581

—Will—Bequest of more than one-third, validity of—Consent of heirs, validity of.

The consent or acquiescence, express or implied, of the heirs of a Muhammadan to a Will by him in excess of two-thirds of his property is treated as a ratification by them of his conduct. Such consent may be express or may be implied from unequivocal conduct. O FAKHR JAHAN BEGUM v. MUHAMMAD ABDEL GHANI KHAN, 5 O. L. J. 49 307

Negligence 556

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 19 22

—s. 118(e)—Negotiable instrument, endorsements on—Order of endorsements—Presumption.

In the absence of direct evidence that the endorsements on a negotiable instrument were made in a particular order, the statutory presumption under section 118(e) of the Negotiable Instruments Act that they were made in the order in which they appear on the instrument, will prevail.

Per Wallis, C. J.—Quere.—Whether a suit can be filed on an endorsement made by a stranger on the back of a note, who does not satisfy the definition of an endorser. M KOTHANDARAMASWAMI NAIDU v. MUTHIA CHETTI 186

Nuisance—Oil mill, erection of, close to dwelling house—Discharge of foul smell and garbage—Noise—Abatement—Stoppage of work, right of neighbour to.

It is an actionable nuisance to erect an oil mill close to a dwelling house from which foul-smelling water is always discharged and unbearable noise is produced which can be heard even at some distance.

The owner of the house adjoining the mill is entitled to ask for prohibition of the working of the mill altogether where the nuisance cannot be abated.

The locality, the question whether the nuisance has been long in existence, whether the trade which causes it is commonly carried on in that locality and other questions of a like nature have to be considered in deciding whether a particular business carried on by a neighbour is an actionable nuisance. M SADASIYA CHETTY v. RANGAPPA RAJOO, 7 L. W. 506; (1918) M. W. N. 293; 24 M. L. T. 17 423

Oaths Act (X of 1873), s. 5 999

— s. 11—Plaintiffs, one of several, agreeing to be bound by defendant's oath—Other plaintiffs, whether bound by oath—Compromise of suit.

Section 11 of the Oaths Act shows that an oath is conclusive as against the person who offers to be bound by it; as against other persons it is not conclusive evidence and a Court has no right to treat it as such.

F. and other plaintiffs sued M. for possession of certain land. After the plaintiffs' evidence had been recorded F. agreed to let the decision of the suit rest on M.'s oath. M. took the oath and on this the Court dismissed the suit as regards all the plaintiffs:

Held (1) that the suit was correctly dismissed as regards F.;

(2) that the oath was not binding as against the other plaintiffs unless the defendant could show that they joined in F.'s challenge to the defendant or agreed to the dismissal of the suit either personally or by agent duly authorised in that behalf;

(3) that the mere presence of the other plaintiffs or of their Pleader at the time of F.'s challenge was no proof of assent, inasmuch as a man may disapprove of what is being done, though if he thinks it is to affect some one else only and not himself, he may not trouble to express his dissent. P TALAWAND v. FATEH DIN, 50 P. W. R. 1918 230

— s. 13—Evidence of child witness—Omission to administer oath, effect of—Evidence, weight of—Witness, competency of—Murder—Punishment—Capital sentence, when not to be passed.

Per Shah, J.—The evidence of a witness of tender years, though taken without any solemn affirmation in the prescribed form, is admissible by virtue of the provisions of section 13 of the Oaths Act. Such evidence, however, must be received with due care and caution.

It is necessary that before proceeding to examine such witnesses the Court should satisfy itself that the witness is competent to testify, that is, is capable of understanding the questions put to him and of giving rational answers to those questions. Thereafter the Court should proceed to administer an oath or affirmation as required by the Oaths Act.

If the witness is found to be incapable of understanding the obligations of such an oath or affirmation, he may be examined without an oath or affirmation, provided he is found to be a competent witness. These facts may be noted, so that the record may show that before taking the statement of a witness of that character, the trial Court had ascertained that the witness was a competent witness under section 118 of the Indian Evidence Act and that the omission to administer an oath or affirmation was due to his want of understanding the obligations of an oath.

The ignorance of a child on such a matter as the nature of a solemn affirmation is not necessarily equivalent to an inability to understand ordinary questions and give rational answers.

There is a certain degree of reluctance on the part of Judges to pass a capital sentence, when the substantial part of the evidence which the prosecution rely upon is evidence recorded without an oath or affirmation as required by the Oaths Act. B HARI RAMJI PAVAR v. EMPEROR, 20 Bom. L. R. 385; 19 Cr. L. J. 593 497

Opium Act (I of 1878), s. 9 284
Oudh Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1876), s. 174, scope of.

The language used in section 174 of the Oudh Land Revenue Act points to the property which was actually under the superintendence of the Court of Wards and not to any profits that may be derived therefrom after its release or to any acquisition made from the same. O DEBI BAKSH SINGH v. BUD NATH, 5 O. L. J. 90 219

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 27

—Improvement by tenant—Compensation for improvement, amount of.

Where it is found that a tenant is entitled to compensation for an improvement made by him on his holding, the Court is not justified in reducing the amount of compensation on the ground that a cheaper improvement could have served the tenant's purpose unless such a plea is raised by the landlord, inasmuch as such a consideration does not form part of the considerations enumerated by section 27 of the Oudh Rent Act. UPBR DWARKA v. BHAGWATI PRASAD SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 69 227

— ss. 52, 141—Grant for maintenance, interpretation of—Tenant under special agreement—Interest on arrears of rent.

Defendant held a village for his maintenance under a grant from the Taluqdar on condition (1) that he paid the revenue assessed on the same and 15 per cent. malikana and 7 per cent. sawai to the Taluqdar, (2) that the grant was resumable if the grantee failed to maintain the members of his family, and (3) that while the grant was hereditary the grantee was debarred from selling or mortgaging the village:

Held, that the grantee was a tenant holding under special agreement within the meaning of section 52 of the Oudh Rent Act and was, therefore, liable to pay interest on the arrears of rent due from him under section 141 of that Act. O SHEORAJ SINGH v. SHRI PRAKASH SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 141 855

— s. 141 855

Paper Currency Act (II of 1910),

s. 26, scope of—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 19—Note or bill payable to bearer on endorsement of payee, whether payable 'on demand'—Evidence, admissibility in.

A bill or note which is payable to the bearer who brings it to the place of payment on the order of the payee, does not offend against section 26 of the Paper Currency Act and is an on demand note. The note is receivable in evidence and is one made in accordance with law.

A note which does not fix any date for payment is an 'on demand' note. Also a note will be construed as an 'on demand' note if it is so expressed.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The principle underlying section 26 of the Paper Currency Act is that private persons should not be permitted to usurp the privileges of the Government, for the latter alone have the right to get a note negotiated by bare presentation. The language of an ordinary currency note is what the Legislature intended should not be copied by private parties.

Per Napier, J.—A bill of exchange is nonetheless payable on demand for the fact that the demand cannot be made on the day when the bill is drawn.

Paper currency Act—concl'd.

M. TITTU GOPALACHARIAR v. MAIYAPPA CHATTY,
 (1910) M. W. N. 77

Parjote, payment of—Suit to recover parjote, maintainability of Partition proceedings—Consent of joint owners—Mortgagee, consent of, necessity of.

A partition effected with the consent of the joint owners of the land is not invalidated by reason of the lack of consent of the mortgagee of an undivided share, and such a mortgagee has no claim to be made a party to the partition proceedings.

A mortgagee with possession of an undivided share in joint property has no right as such to intervene in partition proceedings, or to be a party to them, except when the property to be partitioned is a tenancy of which he is technically the landlord, that is to say, the person under whom the tenants hold land and to whom the tenants are, or would be but for a special contract, liable to pay rent.

A mortgagee of an undivided share in joint property, alleging injury to his interest by the collusive conduct of his mortgagor in partition proceedings, can claim his remedy by regular suit in the Civil Courts. A dispute of this character does not come within the functions of a revenue Officer dealing with a partition under the Land Revenue Act.
F. C. P. THAKAR DAS v. SULTAN BAKHSH, 2 P. R. 1918
 REV. & P. W. R. 1918 REV.

— suit
 —, suit for
 —, whether requires to be in writing.

The law does not require writing to complete a partition which has already been effected by Panchas.
N. FAKIRA v. TULSIRAM

Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 4, order under, whether decree—"Court", whether includes Appellate Court—Application under s. 4, when to be made—"Dwelling house," meaning of.

An order made under section 4 of the Partition Act is the course of a suit for partition is a decree within the meaning of section 2, Civil Procedure Code, and is, therefore, appealable.

The word "Court" in section 4 of the Partition Act includes the Appellate Court, which like the trial Court is bound to make an appropriate order under the section upon any member of the family, who is a share-holder, undertaking to buy the share of the transferee.

An application by a member of a family, who is a share-holder in the family dwelling house belonging to the family, under section 4 of the Partition Act need not necessarily be made upon the institution of the suit for partition by a transferee of a share in the house, but may be postponed till after the preliminary decree. The operation of section 4 extends to the appellate stage of the suit.

The word "dwelling house" in connection with its conveyance on partition generally means not only the house itself, but also the land and appurtenances which are ordinarily and reasonably necessary for its enjoyment.
P. RAN ABHISMANA BHADURI v. KESHAB CHANDRA ROY, 22 C. W. N. 610

Partnership
 —, suit for dissolution ofPatna High Court, whether bound by view of Calcutta High Court.

In cases falling under clause 6 of Article 182 of the Limitation Act the Patna High Court is bound to accept the view of the Calcutta High Court, inasmuch as it is on this view that Pleaders have been calculating limitation in making applications for execution. It would not be fair to turn round suddenly and say that the view of the Calcutta High Court is wrong.
PAT KHONA BUKHAR v. BHABHUB ALI, (1910) PAT. 130; 3 P. L. J. 285; 4 P. L. W. 324

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 21 (3), 161 "Public servant", meaning of—Quarter Master's clerk, whether public servant—Taking illegal gratification in respect of official act—Offence.

The mere fact that a person is in the pay or service of Government is not enough to constitute him a public servant within the meaning of section 21, ninthly, of the Penal Code. He must also be an "officer", i. e., holder of some office. The office may be of dignity and importance or it may be humble, but whatever its nature, it is essential that the person holding the office should have in some degree delegated to him certain functions of Government.

A Quarter Master's clerk merely as such is not necessarily a public servant within the meaning of section 21 of the Penal Code, but a person who is otherwise an officer in the pay or service of Government, does not lose his status as a public servant if, while still such an officer, he is employed as a Quarter Master's clerk.

For the purposes of section 161 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that at the time of the bribe-taking the accused person should be actually discharging the functions which constitute him a public servant; it is sufficient that he is a public servant and his act falls under one of the three clauses specified in the section.
P. AHAB SHAH v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 486; 15 P. R. 1918 CR.; 25 P. W. R. 1918 CR.

— s. 71
ss. 15, 379—Bribe theft—Sentence—Previous conviction—Enhanced punishment, principles governing.

There is no hard and fast rule that a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment must be passed in all cattle and boat theft cases, without regard to the value and utility of the stolen property, the youth of the accused, his previous character, or any other circumstances that may justly be taken into consideration in passing sentence. Each case should be considered on its merits, and, if extenuating circumstances appear to exist, the sentence should be modified accordingly. A sentence should never be heavier than is necessary to deter the criminal from committing the offence again.

In the case of men with previous convictions, regard should be had to their career and to the time that has elapsed between the convictions passed upon them. Sections 70, Indian Penal Code, and 22, Criminal Procedure Code, were not intended for the purpose of automatically enhancing by a kind of geometrical progression the sentence to be passed after a previous conviction. The reason for passing a more severe sentence in the case of a criminal with a previous conviction is primarily to protect society from the predations and offences committed by an habitual rogue, who has shown no signs of repentance. A Magistrate or Judge should make some enquiry into the repute and antecedent behaviour of a man whom he proposes to sentence severely. L B PO NYEIN v. EMPEROR, 9 L. B. R. 167; 19 CR. L. J. 655 847

Penal Code—contd.

— ss. 90, 360, 363—Kidnapping from British India—Consent of person kidnapped—Offence.

A person who kidnaps a girl over twelve years of age from British India with her consent is not guilty of an offence under section 360 of the Penal Code. B HARIHAR DADA v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 372; 19 CR. L. J. 602 506

— ss. 96, 99—Private defence, right of—

Complainant provoking fight and receiving injuries—Offence.

An attaching party went to the house of the judgment-debtor and began looking for the property when S assaulted them. The consequence was a fight in which S. received slight injuries:

Held, that as the fight was provoked by S and no very grievous injuries were inflicted upon him, the attaching party could not be said to have exceeded their right of private defence and were, therefore, not guilty of any offence. P DEVI DAS v. EMPEROR, 20 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 36 P. L. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 635 683

— s. 99— s. 161— s. 186—Obstructing public servant in discharge of public function—Written order, whether must be shown to accused.

In order to constitute an offence under section 186 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary to prove that the written order under which the public servant was acting was actually shown to the accused. It is enough if it is found that the public servant had the order with him and could show it to anybody who wanted to see the same or question his authority. O TRIBHAWAN v. EMPEROR, 5 O. L. J. 112; 19 CR. L. J. 611 833

— s. 193— s. 211— s. 218— s. 302— s. 302—Murder—Sentence—Youth of offender, consideration of.

Ordinarily youth is in itself an extenuating circumstance in murder cases as in other criminal cases. Cases of extreme depravity do occur in which the youth of the accused may not be a sufficient reason for imposing the lesser sentence. But the youth of the criminal is a circumstance which should always be taken into account by Sessions Courts in exercising the discretion vested in them by section 302 of the Indian Penal Code. L B CHIT THA v. EMPEROR, 9 L. B. R. 165; 19 CR. L. J. 648 840

— s. 336—Rash or negligent act endangering human life—Driving motor car without spectacles—Offence.

It is a rash or negligent act for a person to drive a motor car without wearing spectacles if his eyesight is really defective. But an omission to wear spectacles at the time of driving the car in every case where a driver may properly use spectacles would not necessarily render the driver liable under section 336 of the Penal Code. It must depend upon the nature of the defect in the eye-sight and the necessity for using spectacles in each case.

Penal Code—contd.

A licensed driver, who was required by his license to wear spectacles when driving a car, was found driving without spectacles. It was found that the defect in his eyesight was not very great, and that it would not appreciably interfere with his efficiency as a driver even though he drove without spectacles:

Held, that he was not guilty of an offence under section 336 of the Penal Code. B ABAS MIRZA v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 376; 19 CR. L. J. 605 509

— s. 341— s. 352— ss. 360, 363— ss. 366, 494, 498—Abduction of married woman—"Marry", meaning of.

Section 366 of the Penal Code applies to the case of the abduction of a married woman. The word "marry" in this section has the same meaning as it has in section 494 of the Code, i. e., the going through a form of marriage, whether the marriage should prove in fact legal and valid or illegal and invalid. C TAHER KHAN v. EMPEROR, 27 C. L. J. 436; 22 C. W. N. 695; 19 CR. L. J. 640; 45 C. 641 688

— s. 366—Kidnapping from lawful guardianship—Offence, essentials of

A girl, under 18 years of age, was sent by her father to take food to the bullocks, when on her way she was persuaded by the accused to accompany him. The latter cut off her hair and dressed her up in boy's clothes and lived with her for some time:

Held, that the accused was guilty of the offence of abduction under section 366 of the Penal Code with the intent that the girl might be compelled to marry against her will or forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. A HAR KESH v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 445; 19 CR. L. J. 645 837

— s. 379— s. 380— s. 420— s. 447— s. 447—Trespass—Possession necessary to be determined.

For a conviction under section 447 of the Penal Code the finding on the point as to who was in possession of the land in dispute is necessary.

Where a person enters upon land, not with the object of intimidating, annoying or insulting the complainant, but in the bona fide assertion of his own right to remain on the land till he is ejected therefrom in accordance with law, he is not guilty of an offence under section 447 of the Penal Code. PAT JAGAN DUBEY v. EMPEROR, 19 A. L. J. 629 677

— ss. 457, 380—Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1917), s. 23—Lurking house-trespass—Theft—Walking into oven house and stealing articles therefrom—Offence—Sentence.

Accused, who was a member of a criminal tribe and had been twice previously convicted of dacoity finding the door of a house open, walked in and proceeded to steal certain articles therefrom. He removed some of the articles preparatory to taking them away, but before he actually got away the alarm was given and he was caught;

Penal Code—conclld.

Held, that the accused was not guilty of lurking house-trespass under section 457 of the Penal Code so as to be liable to enhanced punishment under section 23 of the Criminal Tribes Act. A BHAGWANA v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 343; 19 Cr. L. J. 609 513

— ss. 465, 467 841
 — ss. 494, 498 688
 — s. 499, Excep. 9—Defamation—State- ment, relevant, by party to suit—Privilege—Malice.

A statement made by a party to a suit in good faith and for the protection of his interests, and which is relevant to the matter in issue, falls under exception 9 of section 499 of the Penal Code and is privileged. In order to take such a statement out of the exception, express malice must be proved. N BAIJA V. BAIU, 19 Cr. L. J. 641 833

— s. 500—Defamation—Using obscene and insulting language in respect of complainant—Offence.
 After an altercation between the parties was over, the accused addressing third persons used language of an obscene and insulting nature in respect of the complainant, a respectable Mukhtar:

Held, that the words were calculated to harm the reputation of the complainant and that the accused was, therefore, guilty of an offence under section 500 of the Penal Code.

Obiter dictum.—There is some authority for the proposition that words prima facie defamatory used in a street quarrel should be regarded as mere vulgar abuse and that their utterance under such circumstances does not necessarily suggest an intention to harm the reputation of the person to whom they are applied. A RAJA RAM SINGH v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 498; 19 Cr. L. J. 669 1005

— s. 504 517
 — s. 504—Insult with intention to provoke breach of peace—Barrister—Privilege.

An intentional insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace is an offence more cognate to the offence of assault than to the offence of defamation. A Barrister cannot claim privilege in the case of an assault, nor can he claim any privilege if his conduct is calculated to provoke an assault. N TIREKAR v. PIARRYLAL, 19 Cr. L. J. 666 1002

Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4—

Suit for declaration of ownership in respect of share in vatan, maintainability of—Certificate of Collector, necessity of.

A suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is the owner of a certain share in a kulkarni vatan falls within the purview of section 4 of the Pensions Act and is not maintainable without the Collector's certificate. B BALKRISHNA SUMBHADI GHATE v. DATTATRAYA MAHADEV GHATE, 20 Bom. L. R. 325; 42 B. 257 580

Pleadings, standard of, in India.

In this country a very high standard of pleadings cannot be expected. C NAJA MIA v. ABDUL KADAR 878

Possession, suit for—Boundary dispute—Burden of proof—Appeal—Appellate Court dissatisfied with local enquiry—Procedure.

Where the defendant in a suit for recovery of possession of land, even where the question is a question of boundaries clearly shown, is found to have been in actual possession of the disputed area, the burden will be on the plaintiff to establish his title.

Possession—conclld.

An Appellate Court is not bound in law to direct a fresh local investigation even where it is dissatisfied with the map and report of the Commissioner, appointed by the trial Court for a local enquiry. In such a case though it is open to the Appellate Court to send back the case for further enquiry, it does not commit any error of law if it decides the case on the evidence before it. Whether the decision thus arrived at is right or wrong (on questions of fact) is a question into which the High Court cannot enter in second appeal. C MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI v. SARAHINDU RAY, 27 O. L. J. 599 408

— value of—Adverse possession of co-owner.

The possession of one co-owner even over the whole co-parcenary, is not prima facie adverse to the other co-owners.

Though a certain lease may be inadmissible in proof of its terms, it may still be used to prove the relationship of landlord and tenant. N RAJHORA v. PALHORA 217

Pre-emption—Land on outskirts of town included in Municipal limits for certain purposes, whether becomes part of town—“Owner”, who is.

The mere fact that for certain reasons the Local Government has seen fit to include a part of the Premgarh estate within the Municipal limits of Hoshiarpur city, does not necessarily mean that the locality in question has become a part of the town for purposes of pre-emption. Although the site in dispute is situate between the Hoshiarpur city and the railway station, and shops have sprung up in the vicinity, it cannot be said that the town has extended so far.

Where a person buys agricultural land assessed to revenue and becomes one of the kheratdars, he must be regarded as an owner of the estate for purposes of pre-emption, no matter whether the area he buys is small and whether he pays only a few annas as revenue: and he does not cease to be such owner merely because he walls off the land and stores iron thereon. P SALAMAT RAI v. KANSHI RAM, 30 P. L. R. 1918; 106 P. W. R. 1918 887

— right of, how can be defeated—Fraudulent form of transaction, effect of—Mortgage to one brother—Sale of equity of redemption to another brother, effect of.

Persons are entitled to defeat the operation of the law of pre-emption if they can do so by legitimate means, but it is not permissible to throw a transaction of transfer into a fraudulent form for the purpose of avoiding a claim for pre-emption.

Where a property was mortgaged with possession for a long term to one of two brothers forming a joint family and the mortgage was followed by a sale of the equity of redemption in favour of the other brother:

Held, that there was really only one transaction, thrown into a fraudulent and deceptive form, to effect a complete sale, so that pre-emption of the property could be allowed regardless of the mortgage created on the same. O RAM DUT SINGH v. BALKARAN SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 87 231

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 17—Secured creditor, suit by, to realise security—Leave of Court, whether necessary.

A secured creditor of an insolvent can bring a suit to realise his securities without the leave of the Court under section 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. L B BADRI DAS v. CHETTY FIRM OF O. A. M. K. 918

Press and Registration of Books Act (XXV of 1867), s. 6—Refusal of District Magistrate to authenticate declaration—Proceedings, whether judicial—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

A District Magistrate, in acting or purporting to act under section 6 of Act XXV of 1867, cannot be said to exercise jurisdiction as a Court, Criminal or Civil, nor can his proceedings be said to be in any sense judicial.

Where, therefore, a District Magistrate refused to authenticate a declaration under section 6 of the Act:

Held, that the proceedings of the Magistrate were purely ministerial and the Chief Court had no power to interfere with his proceedings. P ABAD SHAH v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 621; 27 P. W. R. 1918 Cr.; 21 P. R. 1919 Cr. 525

Presumption

186, 217

— Evidence in rebuttal of presumption, consideration of 916

— of lost grant.

The presumption of a lost grant is one which may be made in India as well as in England. The presumption arises out of the strong desire of the Courts to find a legal origin for an ancient and uninterrupted user. The presumption may be rebutted like other presumptions. It also requires certain conditions and one is that the right could have been the subject of a grant. B JANARDAN GANGESH KHAPILKAR v. RAJJI BHIKAJI KONDKAR, 20 Bom. L. R. 398 448

Principal and Agent—Accounts, suit for, of moneys entrusted to agent 430

— Agent, authority of, limit of—Burden of proof.

In a case where the question is whether a particular act was or was not within the scope of an agent's employment, the burden of proving the limit of the agent's authority is on the principal, inasmuch as the character of the authority is a matter specially within the knowledge of the latter. L B BRUCE, D. M. v. KYAW ZIN 822

— Fraud of agent, liability of principal for—Station Master issuing receipt for non-existent goods, whether acting within scope of his authority—Railway Company, liability of.

A principal is liable for the fraud of his agent acting within the scope of his authority, whether the fraud is committed for the benefit of the principal or for the benefit of the agent.

A railway employee, however, cannot be said to act within the scope of his authority or in the course of his employment when he treats as brought for despatch that which is non-existent.

A Station Master fraudulently issued a Railway receipt which purported to show that a certain consignment of rice had been delivered at a certain station for despatch to another station, whereas no such consignment had been delivered for despatch at all:

Principal and Agent—conclld.

Held, that the Railway Company was not liable for the fraud of the Station Master, inasmuch as the latter could not be said to have been acting within the scope of his authority or in the course of his employment. N HUKUMCHAND v. BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY Co. 856

Probate, delay in taking, consequences of.

Although a Will propounded a long time after the death of the testator must give rise to a case in which the Court is bound to scrutinize the evidence very carefully, there is no rule of the law of evidence that a Will propounded so late, is incapable of being proved.

Where an application for Probate of a Will was made 17 years after the death of the testatrix who was an illiterate Hindu lady:

Held, that the prior history of the case was not unworthy of consideration and that the case demanded a careful investigation by the Court. C BENODINI DEBYA v. HRIDOY NATH GHOSAL, 22 C. W. N. 424 187

—, revocation of—Legatee under earlier Will, locus standi of.

A legatee, whose interest under a Will has been considerably cut down by an alleged Will said to have been subsequently executed by the testator revoking the earlier one, has locus standi to apply for the revocation of the Probate of the later Will on the ground of non-service of citation, even before he has obtained Probate of the earlier Will. C DRAUPADI DASVA v. RAJKUMARI DASVA, 22 C. W. N. 564 760

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), ss. 8, 9, 98—Probate granted to some executors without citation upon others—

Remedy of other executors—Executors not liable to render accounts under Will, whether exempt from exhibiting accounts to Court.

Where Probate has been granted to some of the executors appointed by a Will without citation upon the others calling upon them to accept or renounce their executorships, section 9 of the Probate and Administration Act becomes applicable to the case and the other executors can, on application for Probate, obtain it unless they are debarred under section 8 of the Act.

A provision in a Will that the executors shall not be liable to render accounts does not exempt them from the obligation of exhibiting to the Court of Probate the account of the estate required by section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act. But the Probate Court in such a case has no concern with the accounts of management by the executors. C PEARL LAL DAS v. BEPIN BEHARI DAS 336

— s. 23—Letters of Administration, grant of—Rival applicants—Procedure.

Where rival applicants apply for Letters of Administration one of whom is admittedly entitled to a share in the estate under section 23 of the Probate and Administration Act and the status of the others is disputed, the Court should grant Letters of Administration to the heir whose status is admitted. L B SHWE YIN v. MA ON, 9 L. B. R. 935

Probate and Administration Act— concl'd.

— s. 23—Letters of administration, grant of—Sister and adopted daughter, contest between—Procedure.

Where the full sister and an alleged adopted daughter of the deceased whose adoption was disputed applied for Letters of Administration to the estate of the deceased:

Held, that inasmuch as in the event of the adoption being established the sister would not under the Buddhist Law be entitled to any share in the estate, the Court would be justified in going into the question of adoption. L B AUNG MA KHAING v. MA AN BOX, 9 L. B. R. 163; 11 BUR. L. T. 65 737

— ss. 62, 85—Application for Letters of Administration with Will annexed, nature of—Duty of Court—Court, whether can refuse Letters.

An application for Letters of Administration with the Will annexed stands on the same footing as an application for Probate, and the Court is bound to grant the Letters unless it finds that the Will was not executed by the testator or that he was not of a disposing mind at the time of making it or that the Will was not his own voluntary act.

In an application for Letters of Administration to the estate of one D, with a copy of the Will annexed it appeared that N., the husband of D, made a Will dedicating certain property to a temple and directing that his widow be maintained out of his other property. After the death of N, D. applied for Letters of Administration to his estate. The executors under the Will appeared in Court and consented to the widow being granted the Letters, which were granted accordingly. Later on D. made a Will in which she appointed the applicants as executors, who after her death applied for Letters of Administration with a copy of her Will annexed. The executors under the Will of N. lodged caveats urging that D. had no power to make a Will:

Held, that as it was proved that D. executed the Will and as it was not contested that she was not of a disposing mind at the time she made it, the applicants were entitled to Letters of Administration with copy of her Will annexed. P BARE MISAR v. UMRE PARSHAD, 110 P. W. R. 1918 974

— s. 85 974
— s. 98 336
— s. 120 664

Promissory note, liability of minor on 761

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 16—Order of adjudication, effect of—Suit by undischarged insolvent after vesting order, maintainability of—Appeal, right of.

After the passing of an order of adjudication and the vesting of the insolvent's property in the Official Receiver under section 16 of Act III of 1907, the insolvent is ipso facto divested of the same and can have no vested interest in the property until after it is restored to him after administration. The insolvent cannot maintain a suit in respect of such property, nor has he a right of appeal against any decree passed in a suit instituted by him, the Official Assignee alone being competent to sue for enforcing the rights possessed by Provincial Insolvency Act—concl'd.

the insolvent at the date of adjudication. M SUBBARAYA CHETTIAR v. PAPATHI AMMAL, (1918) M. W. N. 259; 7 L. W. 516 239

— ss. 24, 26, 36, 52—Official Receiver, framing of schedule by—Enquiry, nature of—Court, jurisdiction of, nature of, under s. 26.

The power delegated to the Official Receiver under section 52 of Act III of 1907 is to frame the schedule after an ex parte examination of the evidence tendered by the alleged creditors of the insolvent and he does not decide judicially or finally upon contested claims. His entering a creditor's name in the schedule does not prevent the Court from entertaining applications under sections 26 and 36.

The provisions of section 26 contemplate a judicial enquiry. M MOHIDEEN KADIRSHAW MAKAIKAR v. OFFICIAL RECEIVER, TINNEVELLY, 41 M. 30 67

— ss. 26, 36 67
— s. 36—Jurisdiction of Insolvency Court to decide claims based on transfers made more than two years before adjudication.

Under the Provincial Insolvency Act the Insolvency Court has no jurisdiction finally to decide claims to the insolvent's properties based on transfers made by the insolvent more than two years before his adjudication. C AMINA KHATUN v. NAFAR CHANDRA PAL CHOWDHURY 180

— s. 43 (2) (b)—Fraudulent concealment of property—Proceedings under s. 4, nature of—Charge, framing of, whether necessary.

In a proceeding under section 43 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act it is not essential that there should be a definite charge, finding and a conviction as a foundation for a sentence under the said provisions. All that the law requires is that the principles underlying a criminal trial should be observed in essentials.

Where an insolvent who was being proceeded against under section 43 (2) (b) of the Provincial Insolvency Act was informed of the nature of the proceedings, the offence with which he was charged and of its consequences:

Held, that the essentials of a criminal trial were complied with. N GANPATY v. CHIMNAJI, 19 CR L. J. 627 675

— s. 52 67
Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 23—Transfer of suit of Small Cause Court nature to ordinary jurisdiction of Munsif—Appeal.

A suit for the recovery of damages for the appropriation of a jack tree was instituted by a landlord against his tenant on the Small Cause Court side of a Munsif's Court invested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction. The Munsif transferred the suit to his ordinary jurisdiction, on the ground that it involved questions of custom and title to immoveable property, and after taking evidence under the ordinary procedure made a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal an objection was taken that as the suit was triable by a Court of Small Causes the appeal was incompetent. This objection was overruled:

Held, that though the procedure which the Munsif followed in transferring the suit to his ordinary jurisdiction was not strictly in conformity with the language of section 23 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, yet his order of transfer might be regarded as an order made under section 24 of the Act, so that his decision was a decision by a Court having jurisdiction to determine questions of title and was, therefore, open to appeal. C ANHAYESWARI DEBI v. HATU SHIEKH 645

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act—contd.

Sch. II, Art. 8—Suit against partner for share of rent, whether suit for rent—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court.

Defendant, in consideration of being admitted as a partner in the plaintiff's tenancy, agreed to pay to the latter a certain sum as his estimated share of the rent of the holding:

Held, that the payment was not rent within the meaning of Article 8, Schedule II, of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, so that a suit for its recovery was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. A RAM NATH v. SEKHAR SINGH, 15 A. L. J. 86; 40 A. 51 323

Art. 13.

A suit to recover an amount alleged to be due to a hereditary archaka of a temple as the dues of his office falls under Article 13 of the Schedule to the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act.

If any portion of a claim is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court, the whole claim should be brought in the regular Court. M BHARADWAJ MUDALIAR v. ARUNACHALLA GURUKKAL, 26 M. L. T. 268; 7 L. W. 524 414

Art. 35, effect of amendment of Act V of 1914 upon 11

as amended by Act VI of 1914, Sch. II, Art. 35, cl. (ii)

Suit for value of paddy wrongfully and forcibly taken away, whether cognisable by Small Cause Court.

A suit to recover the value of paddy alleged to have been forcibly, wrongfully and maliciously cut and taken away by the defendant from the possession of the plaintiff is not cognisable by a Court of Small Causes. C LALU SARDAR v. OHEDALI MEHRA 15

Art. 41—Decree for maintenance against three brothers making one of them expressly liable for whole amount. Payment by defendant made liable. Suit to enforce contribution, whether cognisable by Small Cause Court—Jurisdiction.

A Hindu widow sued the brothers of her deceased husband for maintenance and obtained a decree. For certain reasons the decree made one of the defendants expressly liable for the whole amount of the decree. The latter made payments under the decree and then sued the other defendants for contribution:

Held, that under the peculiar circumstances of the case the fact of his having made payments under the decree gave rise to an equity in favour of the plaintiff as against the defendants, but that nevertheless the suit as brought could not be treated as a suit for contribution within the meaning of Article 41 of Schedule II of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, and was not, therefore, excluded from the cognisance of a Court of Small Causes.

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act—concl'd.

Per Walsh, J.—It is only suits for contribution of a peculiar and special character which are included in the exemption contained in Article 41 of Schedule II of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, and a litigant who wants to bring himself within the exemption must clearly establish that his suit in every respect complies with the very precise definition contained in the Article. A ANT RAM v. MITHAN LAL, 16 A. L. J. 44; 40 A. 125 560

Public path—Encroachment, suit for removal of, by private person—Special damage, proof of.

Special damage for obstruction of a highway has to be established in a case for the removal of an encroachment on the highway. N CHAINU v. MANBODH 894

Punjab Alienation of Land Act (XIII of 1900), s. 10—Mortgage—Condition operating by way of conditional sale, legality of—Mortgagor not member of agricultural tribe, effect of.

The language of section 10 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act is wide enough to include every mortgage which contains a stipulation as to conditional sale, and it is absolutely immaterial whether the mortgagor is or is not a member of an agricultural tribe.

A mortgage-deed provided that the principal money together with interest at a certain rate shall be paid within one year, and that on default the transaction shall be deemed to be a sale. It was further stipulated that the interest shall be payable from year to year, and that in the event of non-payment every year the debtor shall be liable to pay compound interest. The mortgagor was also prohibited from transferring the property until redemption:

Held, (1) that the covenant as to the payment of interest from year to year and as to the liability of the debtor to pay compound interest showed that the parties contemplated that interest should be payable after the expiry of the period fixed for redemption;

(2) that the mortgagor's liability to pay interest having been established, there was no equitable reason why he should get the property without discharging his obligation, i. e., the mortgagor must pay the interest before redemption. P ALLAH DIN v. FATEH DIN, 31 P. R. 19-8; 54 P. W. R. 191; 27 P. L. R. 1918 101

Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1857), s. 111 405

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 152, 153—Brothel and house of public prostitute, distinction between—Notice, necessity of, to constitute offence—Summary trial.

No offence can be said to be committed under section 153 of the Punjab Municipal Act until the owner or tenant of the house summoned by the Magistrate fails to comply within five days with the Magistrate's order to discontinue the use of the house as a brothel, and as no offence can be said to be committed by the owner of a brothel at the time when the complaint is made to the Magistrate, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hold a summary trial under section 260 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Punjab Municipal Act—1911—concl'd.

In view of the distinction drawn by the Legislature itself in section 152 of the Punjab Municipal Act between a brothel and the house of a public prostitute, the latter does not become a brothel within the meaning of section 153 of the Municipal Act merely because the owner plies the trade of a prostitute therein. P KANU v. MATHRA DAS, 12 P. W. R. 1918 Cr.; 19 Cr. L. J. 449; 55 P. L. R. 1918

113

Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), ss. 19, 20—Notice to pre-emptor not specifying property to be sold or its price, whether valid—Omission of pre-emptor to reply to notice—Suit, whether maintainable.

In a suit for possession by pre-emption, it appeared that the vendor on the 12th June 1913 applied to the Court stating that he proposed to sell certain property and praying that action be taken under section 19 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act and notices issued to the persons entitled to pre-empt. The Court issued the notices, but in those notices there was no mention of the actual property to be sold or of the price at which it was to be sold. The notices were served on the 16th June 1913 and the 1st of July was fixed for the appearance in Court of the persons to whom they were issued. On that date plaintiff appeared and protested that the notice had not given him all the requisite information. Thereupon the Court handed over to him for perusal the original application of the vendor and on the same day he filed certain pleas with regard to the price, etc. The hearing was adjourned to the 21st of July and on that date to the 11th of August, when a further postponement to the 12th of November was ordered. On that date the Court recorded an order to the effect that none of the parties was present, that the three months' limitation had expired and that the proceedings should, therefore, be filed. On the 9th June 1914 the vendor sold the land and the plaintiff instituted his suit on the 8th June 1915:

Held, (1) that under the circumstances there was sufficient notice of the sale given to the plaintiff within the meaning and for the purposes of section 19 of the Pre-emption Act but that on the other hand the plaintiff had failed to prove that he had complied with the provisions of section 20;

(2) that the right of pre-emption had been extinguished before the suit was instituted and the plaintiff was, therefore, not entitled to any relief. P JESA RAM v. MEHR CHAND, 104 P. W. R. 1918

935

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 19—Appraisal proceedings—Consent of landlord or tenant, whether necessary—Refusal of tenant to accept appraisal, effect of—Omission of Revenue Officer to vary or confirm appraisal—Financial Commissioner's Standing Order No. 2, para. 12, object of.

The consent of neither landlord nor tenant is necessary for the validity of appraisal proceedings under Chapter II of the Punjab Tenancy Act.

The refusal by a tenant to accept the result of an appraisal is not an adequate reason for declining to confirm it under section 19 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act.

Punjab Tenancy Act—concl'd.

The failure by a Revenue Officer to give effect to the direction contained in section 19 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, which requires him to make an order either confirming or varying an appraisal, does not affect the admissibility or the value of the evidence contained in the appraisal record.

In suits for the value of produce rents there is no conclusive presumption that produce calculated according to the Financial Commissioner's instructions in paragraph 12 in Standing Order No. 2 is the actual produce of the particular land in the particular harvest in suit.

The object of the executive instructions there given is to provide the Revenue Courts with a means of calculating the probable produce and its probable selling value, from the records of crop inspection, the Settlement Officer's estimate of average outturns and other available sources, in those cases in which reliable evidence of the actual produce and actual selling price is not available. F. C. P MULK SHAH v. NATHU, 4 P. R. 1916 Rev.; 1 P. W. R. 1918 Rev.

s. 59

980

800

s. 59—Occupancy rights, succession to—Burden of proof—Settlement record, entry in—Presumption of correctness.

M. son of K. claimed possession of certain occupancy land on the ground that he was the heir of one S. It appeared that in the Summary Settlement of 1853 one K. was entered as an asami of certain land in the same village, but K.'s name did not appear in the Regular Settlement of 1860 and S., the uncle of the plaintiff, was found to be in possession of certain land which he stated he had reclaimed from banjar within the previous 15 years and was granted occupancy rights therein. On the death of S. the land was mutated in the name of his widow, the landlord allowing her to remain in possession for her lifetime:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as it was not proved that the land entered in the name of S. was the same as that entered in the name of K., it could not be presumed to be the same;

(2) that a presumption of correctness attached to the entry in the Regular Settlement of 1860 and that S. having at that time been declared as having personally acquired occupancy rights in the land in suit, K. having had no part or share in bringing the land under cultivation, the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable;

(3) that presumption could not take the place of positive proof. P HAYAT MUHAMMAD v. MAHMUD, 107 P. W. R. 1918

938

s. 59—Occupancy tenancy—Joint tenants—Survivorship, right of—Tenants recorded as having defined shares, effect of.

The right of a landlord to claim the extinction of an occupancy right when there are joint tenants does not arise on the death of one of them, as they collectively constitute a single tenant and the right continues to exist in the survivor or survivors.

The fact that the occupancy tenants are recorded as having defined shares in the tenancy does not make any difference and does not affect the right of survivorship. P UDMI v. MUNSHI, 95 P. W. R. 1918

574

Railways Act (IX of 1890), ss. 108, 121, 128, 131.

Plaintiff was travelling in one of the defendant Company's trains. The compartment occupied by the plaintiff was greatly overcrowded to the inconvenience and discomfort of the occupants. After ineffectual efforts to obtain assistance from the guard or the station master at a station, the plaintiff stopped the train by pulling the communication chain. Thereupon the driver and the guard got down from the train, the driver pulled the plaintiff out of the compartment and cuffed and slapped him, the guard assisting in this assault. The plaintiff sued the defendant Company for damages for the assault committed on the plaintiff by the Company's servants.

Held, that the offence of pulling the communication chain without reasonable and sufficient cause was one in respect of which the Company itself had no power of arrest and that, therefore, the assault committed by its servants was outside the scope of their authority and the course of their employment and the Company was not liable therefor. B GIRJASHANKAR DAYASHANKAR v. B. B. & C. I. RAILWAY, Co., 20 BOM. L. B. 126

ss. 121, 128, 131

Record of Rights, entry in—Declaratory suit for correction of entry—Entries in two consecutive records—Suit for correction of entry in second record, maintainability of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 120—Limitation—Fresh cause of action.

Where there are two consecutive finally published Records of Rights, it is competent to a party aggrieved by the second to ask for a declaration in respect of the second record without first displacing any pre-judicial entries in the first record.

Where there was an entry in the Record of Rights prepared in 1888-89 against the plaintiff and then again there was a similar entry in the record prepared in 1906:

Held, that the entry in 1906 was a fresh invasion of the plaintiff's right, so that the plaintiff was entitled to sue for the correction of the record within six years of the second entry. PAT LATAPAT HUSAIN v. KALIKER NAND SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 303; 3 P. L. J. 361; (1918) PAT. 225 entry in—Presumption of correctness—Rebuttal of presumption, whether question of fact—Appeal, second—Appellate Court, whether can interfere with finding.

An entry in a Record of Rights is not conclusive, but it is an entry to which by Statute the presumption attaches that it is correct unless and until the contrary is proved by legal evidence.

The question whether the presumption of correctness attaching to an entry in a Record of Rights has been rebutted or not is a matter within the competence of a final Court of fact, and is incapable of being reviewed by a Court having the limited jurisdiction that the High Court has in hearing a second appeal. C RAM KUMAR CHAKREBORTY v. BIRENDR KISHORE MANIKYA BAHADUR, 22 C. W. N. 449 entry in, value of—Presumption—Evidence in rebuttal of presumption, consideration of—Court, duty of.

An entry in the Record of Rights merely raises a presumption as to its correctness, and where this presumption is sought to be rebutted the Court must show by its judgment that it has considered the Record of Rights—conold.

evidence on the record and then come to a distinct finding whether the evidence has or has not rebutted that presumption. PAT DURGA PRASAD v. HARIHAR PRASAD, 4 P. L. W. 448

Registration

Registration Act (XX of 1866)

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17

s. 17 Mortgage, equitable—Memorandum of securities handed over to mortgagee—Registration, whether necessary.

A document merely reciting what securities are handed over to an equitable mortgagee is a memorandum and not a mortgage and does not require registration. L B BADRI DAS v. CHETTY FIRM of O. A. M. K.

s. 17 (1) (c)—Receipt for possession of land allotted in partition already effected, whether requires registration.

A document, which is in terms merely a receipt for possession of some land allotted to one of the parties in a partition which has already been effected by Panchas, is not compulsorily registrable under section 17 (c) of the Registration Act. N FAKIRA v. TELUSIRAM

s. 17 (2) (vi)—Compromise embodied in proceedings of Court, whether compulsorily registrable—Party to compromise, whether can bring fresh suit—Estoppel.

Where a compromise entered into by parties to a suit is embodied in the proceedings of the Court, it does not require registration.

In a suit to recover possession of certain land the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had served him with a notice of ejectment and he had brought a suit to contest the notice, whereupon the parties reached a compromise whereby the plaintiff ceded the land in dispute to the defendant and the defendant withdrew his suit in the Revenue Court.

Held, (1) that the compromise did not require registration and secondary evidence of its contents was admissible;

(2) that by his admission of compromise before the Revenue Court the plaintiff having induced the defendant to withdraw his suit in that Court, he was now estopped from bringing the present suit. P GULAB v. BADHAWA

ss. 32, 33, 71, 73, 75, 87—Mortgage deed—Registration Presentation by duly authorized agent—Refusal to register—Registrar's order to register—Presentation on behalf of Collector as Manager of Court of Wards, validity of.

A mortgage-deed was executed in favour of one S. but before it could be registered S. fell ill. Subsequently S. executed a special power-of-attorney as required by section 23 of the Registration Act authorising one N. to present the deed for registration on his behalf. Accordingly, within the period prescribed by law N. presented the deed for registration and the Sub-Registrar made an endorsement on the deed certifying its presentation by N. under a special power-of-attorney authenticated in his office. The mortgagor, however, failed to appear and the Sub-Registrar, therefore, refused to register the deed. In the meantime S. had died and his widow on behalf of his minor sons applied to the Registrar, who made an order under section

Registration Act - 1908—concl'd

75 (1) of the Registration Act that the document should be registered. Within thirty days of this order the Collector in his official capacity as Munger of the Court of Wards, by whom the estate of the sons of S. had been taken over for management, sent the deed to the Sub-Registrar with an official letter, enclosing also a certified copy of the order of the District Registrar. The Sub-Registrar on receipt of this communication took cognisance of the same as a presentation of the document, within the meaning of section 75, clause (2) of the Registration Act, and proceeded to register the document accordingly:

Held, (1) (per Piggott, J.), that the endorsement on the deed by the Sub-Registrar that it was presented by N. under a special power-of-attorney registered and duly authenticated in his office entitled the Court to assume that the Sub-Registrar acted in the proper and lawful exercise of his powers under the proviso to section 33 of the Registration Act, and that, therefore, the original presentation of the deed for registration by N. was a proper and valid presentation under section 32 of the Registration Act:

(2) (per Curran) that the procedure adopted by the Collector after the order of Registrar directing registration of the deed was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of section 75 (2) of the Registration Act:

(3) that even if the procedure was irregular, the irregularity was covered by section 57 of the Registration Act

Per Walsh, J.—What happens after the Registrar's order under section 75 (1) of the Registration Act directing registration of a document is pure machinery. Any form of presentation, if it is supported by an application, which takes place on behalf of the presenter and is noted on the order in his favour, is sufficient for the purposes of clause 2) of section 75. A COLLECTOR OF MORADABAD v. MAQBUL UL-RAHAMAN 37

s. 35—Registration of partition deed, effect of 535

ss. 71, 73, 75, 87 37

s. 90—Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bomb. Act V of 1879), ss. 74, 76—Razinamas and kabuli-yats, whether evidence of transfer—Registration.

Per Beaman, J.—Although razinamas and kabuli-yats are not in themselves documents of transfer, they are fairly conclusive evidence that a transfer has in fact been made.

Razinamas and kabuli-yats executed between a mortgagor and his mortgagee extinguish the equity of redemption.

Quære.—Whether in proper cases governed by the Bombay Land Revenue Code, razinamas and kabuli-yats stand in need of registration at all?

Per Heaton, J.—It is quite possible that kabuli-yats are exempted from registration on consequence of the provisions of clause (b), section 90, of the Registration Act, as they appear to evidence assignments by Government of an interest in land. B NARAO RAMAJI KULKARNI v. NAGAYA ISHVARAPPA, 20 Bom. L. R. 358 492

Regulation XXVII of 1902, s. 32 786

Regulation XVII of 1806, ss. 7, 8—

Mortgage by way of conditional sale—Foreclosure—Notice, defective, effect of.

The mere fact that parts of the seal of the District Judge are not legible, is not a fatal defect in a notice of foreclosure served under sections 7 and 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806.

Nor is an ambiguity in the specification of the date of the mortgage-deed fatal, where it is such that it could not have led to any misconception on the part of the mortgagor.

Nor is an omission of words describing the property mortgaged, fatal: where it could not have caused any misunderstanding P RAGHU NATH v. RUKNA, 82 P. W. R. 1918 179

Regulation XIX of 1814 921

Regulation X of 1831, s. 2 595

Remand by Appellate Court, order of, for taking evidence for elucidation of obsolete or provincial expression, validity of.

A suit can be remanded by an Appellate Court for the purpose of taking evidence in order to elucidate the meaning of an obsolete or provincial expression. C ANHAYESHWARI DEBI v. HATU SHUKH 645

—, order of, when to be made 1

—, order of, whether appealable to His Majesty in Council 192

Res judicata 849

— in execution proceedings—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 5, sub-r 2 Application for final decree, whether can be considered as in continuation of previous application.

On the death of one of several decree-holders after the preliminary decree in a mortgage suit, the surviving decree-holders were, at the instance of the judgment-debtor, treated as the legal representatives of the deceased decree-holder. They then applied on their own behalf as well as the legal representatives of the deceased decree holder for a final decree for sale of the mortgaged properties, and after issue of notice upon the judgment-debtor a final decree was made. Afterwards on the judgment-debtor's objection to execution on the ground that the widow and not the surviving decree-holders was the legal representative of the deceased decree-holder, the widow made an application to be made a party as the legal representative of her deceased husband, which was granted and was treated as an application for a final decree. The judgment-debtor then raised objections to execution on the ground that the widow's application not having been made within six months from the date of her husband's death, the suit had abated and also that the application was barred by the three years' rule of limitation contained in Article 181 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act:

Held, (1) that unless and until the judgment debtor succeeded in having the final decree made on the application of the surviving decree-holders set aside, he could not be permitted to advance the objections, as the final decree, having been made after notice to the judgment-debtor, could not be attacked at a subsequent stage of the execution proceedings;

(2) that even if the widow's application was regarded as one for a final decree, it should be referred back to the judgment-debtor's original application for substitution of the surviving decree-holders as the legal representatives of the deceased decree.

Res Judicata—concl.

holder, or be dealt with under Order XXII, rule 9, and should next be considered as in continuation of the application of the surviving decree-holders for a final decree. C MAKUNDA LAL KUNDU v. PRIYA NATH MOITRA 657

—Landlord and tenant—Ex parte decree as to rate of rent, whether res judicata on question of rate of rent annually payable.

An ex parte decree in a rent suit, allowing the plaintiff's claim at the rate of rent alleged in the plaint, does not operate so as to render the question of the rate of rent annually payable res judicata unless there was a prayer in the plaint for a declaration as to the rate of rent as part of the substantive relief claimed. C BRAJENDRA KUMAR ROY v. SARAJENDRA NATH 416 —Profits, suit for—Sir and khudkash, profits of, rate of.

A decision in a previous suit for profits between the co-sharers of a village that the sir and khudkash of a particular co-sharer yielded profits at a certain rate in the years in suit, does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same co-sharers for profits in respect of other years. O

BALDEO BAKSHI v. PARTAD SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 67 218

—Rent suit—Decision as to rate of rent in particular year, whether res judicata.

A decree in a rent suit does not operate as res judicata as to the rate of rent payable for years other than the years covered by the decree.

Per Mullick, J.—The question whether a decision as to the rate of rent operates as res judicata depends on the frame of the issue. PAT KISHIN DEYAL RAI v. KULPATI KERR, 3 P. L. J. 372; (1918) PAT. 234 316

Restitution of conjugal rights, suit for—Discretion of Court—Court, whether can refer entire suit to arbitration.

It is entirely within the discretion of the Court to grant or refuse a decree for restitution of conjugal rights but the Court cannot delegate the decision of the entire suit to arbitrators, although it is open to it to refer any particular matter to arbitration.

Where, therefore, in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, the Munsif delegated the entire suit to persons appointed by the parties as their arbitrators:

Held, that the Court could not delegate its function to arbitrators and the case should be tried on its merits. P KALABUTU v. PRABU DIAL, 40 P. W. R. 1918 163

Revenue record in Berar, correctness of—Presumption.

Where nothing else is known, the person in possession of property is presumed to be the owner.

Though the revenue record in Berar is not supported by a statutory presumption like a Record of Right in the Central Provinces, an entry in the Record of Rights does raise a presumption, and the presumption arising from possession is weakened considerably if the person in possession fails to explain an adverse entry and is unable to state the origin of the possession by virtue of which he claims an adverse title to the recorded holder. N RAGHOB v. PALHOB 217

Review of order by lower Court after dismissal of appeal, legality of.

When an appeal from an order has been dismissed by a higher Court, the lower Court cannot review its order. P KISHEN DAS v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DOABA BANK, LTD., 40 P. R. 1918; 60 P. W. R. 1918 84

Revision 33, 337, 647

—High Court, power of 2F
—High Court, power of interference of 17, 325, 39

—High Court, power of interference of.

The High Court is not entitled to create what are really appeals put forward in the shape of revisions. A FAZAL RAB v. MANZUR AHMAD, 16 A. L. J. 433 773

Right to office, suit for declaration of, maintainability of—Teerthakars in Hindu temple, right of, to recite prabandam—Duty not legally enforceable.

A suit to establish a right to an office to which emoluments are alleged to be attached is maintainable, when the existence of the office as also the connection between the office and the honour and dignities and perquisites is proved by clear evidence.

To constitute an office, the one, if not the essential, thing is the existence of a duty or duties attached to the office which the office-holder is under a legal obligation to perform and the non-performance of which is visited by penalties. The rendering of a voluntary service cannot constitute an office. M VATHIAR VENKATACHARIAR v. PONAPPA AYYENGAR, 7 L. W. 64 959

Right to sue, want of, plea as to—Plaintiff suing on behalf of others as well as for himself—Defendant, knowledge of.

Where a defendant in a suit brought by the Manager of the Court of Wards knows that the Manager is suing on behalf of the ward as well as on behalf of other persons interested in the property in dispute, he cannot resist the suit on the ground that the ward is not the sole owner of the property. O HASHMAT ALI v. MAHEWA ESTATE, 5 O. L. J. 241 38

Riwaaj-i-am, evidentiary value of entries in—Burden of proof.

An entry in a riwaaj-i-am even though unsupported by instances constitutes a strong piece of evidence in support of an alleged custom and it lies upon the party impugning it to rebut the value of this evidence. P SAIDE KHAN v. AMIR-UN-NISSA, 109 P. W. R. 1918 966

Sale or mortgage—Consideration—Non-payment of purchase-money—Remedy of vendor—Oval evidence, admissibility of, to explain document—Sale of immovable property—Delivery of possession, whether necessary.

In a sale of immovable property the non-payment of the purchase-money does not prevent the passing of the ownership of the purchased property from the vendor to the purchaser and the purchaser can notwithstanding such non-payment maintain a suit for possession of the property, and the only remedy of the vendor is a suit for the recovery of the purchase-money.

Oral evidence is not admissible to show that a transaction which is ex facie a sale is really a mortgage, except to prove fraud on the part of the party taking benefit under the deed. L B VENKATACHALLUM v. MA. TUN E 860

Settlement Record, entry in—Presumption of correctness 938

Small Cause Court, suit cognizable by—Jurisdiction—Contribution suit.

A suit for contribution is not exempted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes. O BHAGWATI PRASAD SINGH v. MUHAMMAD ABUL HASAN KHAN, 5 O. L. J. 109 236

Special custom—Burden of proof—Acquiescence, what amounts to.

If a party pleads a custom opposed to the generally established custom prevailing in the community to which he belongs, the onus lies on him to prove that special custom and a solitary instance is insufficient to discharge that onus. P ABDULLA v. NABIA, 25 P. W. R. 1918 9

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 12, 17—Unpaid consideration for mortgage, suit for, whether one for specific performance—Maintainability of suit.

A suit to recover the unpaid consideration for a mortgage is a suit for specific performance of an agreement to lend money on a mortgage, and is not maintainable. M RAJAGOPALA Aiyar v. DAVOOD ROWTHEN, 34 M. L. J. 342 161

— s. 15.

A right to specific performance is in the discretion of the Court and can only be claimed subject to the condition laid down in section 15 of the Specific Relief Act. But after the parties have performed the contract by executing a sale-deed and delivering possession, the rights of the parties are no longer governed by the Specific Relief Act but by the Transfer of Property Act. N SHALIGRAM SADASHIO PANDA v. NARAIN 669

— s. 17 161

— s. 39 238

— ss. 42, 43 203

— ss. 42, 54 80

— s. 42—Declaration, introductory to relief for possession, nature of—Parties—Defendant not interested in property in dispute, declaration against, whether can be granted.

A. instituted a suit for declaration of title to and recovery of possession of the estate of one K, as his next reversionary heir after the death of K's grandmother, who had succeeded to his estate. M., a cognatic relation of K., was made a defendant to the suit, because in a probate proceeding relating to the Will of another separated member of the family, M. had claimed to be the nearest cognatic relation and had not admitted A.'s claim as an agnatic relation of the family. M. claimed no interest in the property in suit but it was alleged that he was interested in denying A.'s title to the estate of B., another member of the family, succession to which had not yet opened;

Held, (1) that the declaration claimed, being merely introductory to a claim for possession, was not one for which legislative sanction was required and that the suit was not one under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act;

(2) that M. not having claimed any interest in the properties in suit, it would be an abuse of the process of the Court to allow him to be harassed by being made a party to litigation, the only relief claimed in which was one in which he had no interest and in which he was not directly concerned, to enable the plaintiff to support a possible claim in Specific Relief Act—concl'd.

a future litigation which might arise. PAT ASHARFI SINGH v. MADHABSHWAR INDRA NARAIN SAHL, 4 P. L. W. 412 665

— s. 42—Trespasser, whether can sue for declaration that he is trespasser.

Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act does not contemplate an action by a person having no title

A trespasser cannot, therefore, sue for a declaration that he is a trespasser. PAT RAGHUBIR PRASAD v. MISRI KAHAR 303

— s. 42, proviso, applicability of 972

— s. 42, proviso—Declaration, suit for, maintainability of.—Defendant in possession as mortgagee from Hindu father—Suit by sons for declaration that their share is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of money-decree against father, maintainability of.

The proviso appended to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act refers to the legal character or right to property which is set up in the plaint. In other words, the further relief, referred to in that proviso, is a relief appropriate to, and consequent on, the right asserted.

Where the sons of a Hindu father sued merely for a declaration that their share in the family property was not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a money-decree obtained against their father, and it was found that the decree-holder defendant was in possession of the property under a mortgage effected by the plaintiff's father:

Held, that the suit was not barred by the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, inasmuch as it arose quite independently of the mortgage. O NARINDRA BAHADUR SINGH v. RAM SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 133 859

— s. 54 80

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 64—Failure to stamp document—Fraudulent intent.

Mere non-payment of a proper stamp duty does not make a person liable to prosecution under section 64 of the Stamp Act, unless it is proved that he had an intention to defraud the Government of its stamp revenue. C BROJENDRA NATH BAKSHI v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 515 275

Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 190—

One of several heirs of deceased sued as his legal representative—Letters of Administration, whether necessary.

Where one of several heirs of a deceased who died intestate was impleaded as a defendant to a suit as the legal representative of the deceased :

Held, that section 190 of the Succession Act applied to the case and that no right to any part of the property of the deceased could be established in any Court unless Letters of Administration were granted by a Court of competent jurisdiction. B TIMAJI KRISHNA POTDAR v. RAMA PIRAJI BHATKHANDI, 20 Bom. L. R. 175 862

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4, applicability of, to substituted plaintiff on death of original plaintiff.

Without the production of one of the certificates mentioned in section 4 of the Succession Certificate Act, no decree can be passed in favour of a person who has been substituted as plaintiff in a suit for recovery of money due on a bond upon the death of the original plaintiff.

Succession Certificate Act—contd.

Quere.—Whether the same principle applies to execution proceedings. C NEPUSI BEWA v. NASIRUDDIN, 27 C. L. J. 400

Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1837), s. 3 (1)

Summons case and warrant case tried together —Dismissal of case for default of prosecution, effect of —Procedure.

Where there are two offences complained of, one of which is triable as a summons case and the other as a warrant case, both arising out of the same transaction, the Court cannot separate the two, applying two kinds of procedure, but should adopt the procedure relating to the graver charge, i. e., the warrant case.

Per Napier, J.—Unless the Court chooses to separate the two offences and take them up, one as a warrant case and the other as a summons case, the fact that one of the offences complained of and tried by him is punishable by six months' imprisonment or less does not make that part of the trial a summons case. M RAGHUVALU NAICKER v. SINGA RAM, 34 M. L. J. 369; 7 L. W. 620; 19 Cr. L. J. 613

517

Testamentary suit—Caveat, remote reversioners, whether can file.

In a testamentary suit caveats against the Will were entered by B., the immediate reversioner of the deceased, and some other persons, alleging that the Will propounded was a forgery. Subsequently B. entered into an agreement with the propounders of the Will for an amicable settlement on their paying him a large sum of money raised by the sale or mortgage of a portion of the estate. Before this agreement was assented to by the other caveators, S. and R., who would be immediate reversioners of the testator after the death of B. during the lifetime of the testators' widow, filed caveats against the Will.

Held, that S. and R. had locus standi to enter the caveats, as B. by entering into the agreement had done his best to render it impossible for him successfully to challenge the Will or had at least shown that at all events he could not be relied upon seriously and successfully to contest the Will.

Quere.—Whether any interest, however slight, or even the bare possibility of an interest in the estate left by an alleged testator, is enough to entitle a party to oppose the Will. C SATINDRA MOHAN TAGORE v. SARALA SUNDARI DEBI, 27 C. L. J. 320

59

Transfer of case—District Magistrate, power of, to transfer case outside district.

There is no authority which enables one District Magistrate to transfer a case for trial to another District Magistrate. O KAYAMUDDIN v. DWARKA, 5 O. L. J. 145; 19 Cr. L. J. 671

1007

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), whether exhaustive

The Transfer of Property Act is not exhaustive of all modes of transfer and does not deal with transfer by an award. If there is a transfer of property which does not come within the special modes dealt with in the Act, the conditions as to writing and registration prescribed therein have no application. M AMIR BIBI v. AROKIAM, 34 M. L. J. 184

813

— s. 41

307

Transfer of Property Act—contd.s. 51—Compensation for improvements—Purchaser for value from limited owner, position of—Equitable principles.

Where a purchaser knows or is presumed to know that the vendor can sell only under certain circumstances and he either knows that such circumstances do not exist or wilfully abstains from making any inquiry on the subject, the mere fact that he purchased for consideration will not suffice to show good faith and he will not be able to claim compensation under section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act for improvements effected by him.

Apart from the provisions of section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, however, an equitable right may arise in favour of the owner of a limited interest who makes improvements on the property in his possession.

But this right can only come into existence if it can be shown that the true owner stood aside and abstained from asserting his rights. There must be in such cases some equity arising out of the conduct of the true owner and further, apart from the conduct of the owner in this connection, the right cannot come into existence unless it is found that the person in possession was under a mistaken belief that he had a permanent interest in the property. ETIZAD HUSAIN v. BENI BAHADUR, 5 O. L. J. 1

242

s. 53—Fraudulent transfer—Transferee's right under it—Bona fides—Payment of full value, effect of.

The purchaser of a property, with full knowledge of the intention of the seller to defraud or defeat his creditor, is not a bona fide transferee and his purchase is invalid as against the creditors, even though full consideration was paid for the purchase and a portion of the purchase-money was paid in discharge of a debt which the seller owed to third persons. C AFIAHUDDIN v. BASANTA KUMAR MUKOPADHYAYA, 22 C. W. N. 427

441

s. 53—Transfer to defeat or defraud creditors, whether liable to impeachment by creditors as defence to suit—Right of individual creditors to set aside sale.

A transfer effected with intent to defeat or defraud the creditors of the transferor confers a good title on the transferee, until it is set aside by a suit by the creditors for that express purpose. The creditors cannot plead the colourable nature of the transaction by way of defence to an action by the transferee to establish his title under the sale, if they have not already sued for its cancellation.

Per Coutts Trotter, J.—The mere obtaining of a judgment in India creates no title or only an inchoate title in the judgment-creditor, and therefore a creditor who impeaches a transfer must follow up his judgment by attaching the properties in order to enable him to utilise section 53 in answer to a claim founded on the impeached deed of transfer.

It is inconvenient to allow each and every creditor in turn to attack such deed independently.

Per Seeshagiri Aiyar, J.—There is nothing in Hindu Law which is inconsistent with section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. At any rate, the section may be taken as indicating the principles of equity, justice and good conscience which ought to guide Courts in the absence of specific legislative provisions.

Transfer of Property Act - contd.

On the language of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act it is open to any creditor to impeach a conveyance made by his debtor, provided he alleges in the plaint that the sale was intended to defraud him and others similarly placed. M. PATANIANDI CHETTY v. APPAVU CHETTIAR, 22 M. L. T. 474. 52

— s. 53 (2), presumption under.

Under the provisions of section 53 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act, the vendor is deemed to contract with the buyer that the interest, which he professes to transfer, subsists and that he has power to transfer the same. N. SHALIGRAM SADASHEO P. ANDE v. NARAIN. 669

— s. 54—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17
Transfer of mortgage-debt—Registration, whether necessary.

A mortgage-debt is immoveable property both for the purposes of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act and for the purposes of section 17 of the Registration Act.

Where a mortgage-debt is transferred by an instrument in writing and the value of the right, title and interest transferred is Rs 100 or more, the writing requires registration under the Registration Act. C. SAKHJUDIN SAHA v. SONAULLA SARKAR, 27 C. L. J. 453; 22 C. W. N. 641. 986

— s. 59—Mortgage—'Attestation,' meaning of.
The requirement as to attestation contained in section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, is not complied with unless the attesting witnesses are able to swear both to the act of execution and the identity of the person performing the act.

Where, therefore, the only evidence was that the attesting witnesses were on one side of a parda and the executant of the deed, a parda-nashin lady, on the other, that her son took the deed behind the parda, returned with it bearing a signature purporting to be hers, and said it had been signed by her, and that the witnesses thereupon attested:

Held, that the terms of the Statute had not been complied with and that the mortgage was void. P. C. GANGA PERSHAD SINGH v. ISHRI PERSHAD SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 349; 16 A. L. J. 409; 34 M. L. J. 545; 27 C. L. J. 548; 22 C. W. N. 697; 20 Bom. L. R. 587; 23 M. L. T. 388; (1918) M. W. N. 332; 8 L. W. 176. I — s. 59—Mortgage executed by pardanashin lady—Attestation—Witnesses on one side of pardah—Mortgage suit—Title paramount, question of, whether can be gone into.

In the case of a document executed by a parda-nashin lady, it is not necessary that the attesting witnesses should be actually inside the pardah: they are deemed to be present at the execution of the document in such a case, although they may be screened off from the executant by a pardah.

In an ordinary mortgage suit, title paramount to and independent of the mortgagor is not a necessary issue and should, as far as possible, be excluded from the trial of the suit, but that is not an absolute principle which should apply to the circumstances of each case. Where the leaving of such an issue undetermined would lead to inconvenience or hardship, it is proper that it should be tried in a mortgage suit. PAT. ZAKIR RAZA v. MADHUSUDAN DASS, 4 P. L. W. 417. 691

Transfer of Property Act—contd. *

— s. 67
— s. 72—Mortgage, usufructuary—Expenses of criminal litigation conducted by mortgagee to support title, whether chargeable on property—Suit for re-imbursement, maintainability of. 769

It is open to doubt whether an expensive criminal litigation, conducted by a usufructuary mortgagee for the purpose of securing the conviction of persons who have reaped and carried away the crops on the mortgaged land, can be regarded as a proceeding necessary to support the mortgagor's title.

Where, however, the mortgagee acts as a prudent owner and at the request of the mortgagor and the proceedings are rendered necessary, he is entitled to be indemnified in respect of such expenses.

In such an event the mortgagee has the right to add the amount so expended to the principal money and insist on its payment before redemption or sue separately for its recovery.

Section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act does not restrict the mortgagee's remedy to what is stated there. There is an independent cause of action for expenses incurred under any of the clauses of the section. M. VENKITASAMI NAICKER v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI, 34 M. L. J. 177; 23 M. L. T. 280. 949

— s. 82—Joint mortgage of several properties—Mortgagor, right of, to enforce debt against one property.

Section 82 of the Transfer of Property Act defines the relation of joint mortgagors inter se, and there is nothing in the language of the section which compels the conclusion that the mortgagee must distribute his debt in a certain manner or is unable to enforce it against each and every part of the property made security for the mortgage. Each of several mortgaged properties is, so far as the mortgagee is concerned, liable for the entirety of the mortgage-debt. B. TIMAJI KRISHNA POTDAR v. RAMA PIRAJI BHATKHANDE, 20 Bom. L. R. 175. 862

— s. 83—Tender of mortgage money—Deposit of more than amount due, validity of—Non-acceptance, wrongful, by mortgagee—Redemption, suit for—Cessation of interest—Interest to plaintiff from date of suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1909), O. XXIV, r. 2—Petition for deposit asking for costs, legality of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 38—Tender, nature of.

The deposit of a larger sum than is due to the mortgagee, from which the latter is asked to take whatever is due to him, is valid under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act and from the date of such deposit interest on such amount ceases to run.

Where a mortgagee wrongfully refuses to receive the amount deposited and the mortgagor is forced to bring a redemption suit, he is entitled to interest after the date of the service of the plaint and summons on the defendant.

Properties in schedule A were mortgaged to defendant in 1902. A portion of these properties covered by schedule B was subsequently mortgaged to one R. R. sued on his mortgage and brought the sch.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

dule B properties to sale, which were purchased by the plaintiff subject to defendant's mortgage. Plaintiff paid the money due on schedule A mortgage into Court and presented a petition, requiring that defendant should accept it and give possession of all the properties or that he should take from the amount deposited whatever was due on the schedule B mortgage and deliver to him the schedule B properties, and that the Court should provide for the costs. Defendant refused to receive an unspecified proportionate amount, but was willing to deliver to plaintiff the title-deeds of the Schedule B lands only on receiving the entire amount due on schedule A properties. Plaintiff in consequence, sued for redemption of schedule B properties, the whole amount deposited remaining in Court:

Held, (1) that as a larger amount was deposited in Court than was due under the schedule B mortgage, the tender was valid and interest ceased to run from its date;

(2) that under Order XXIV, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, plaintiff was entitled to interest after the date of the service of the plaint and summons on the defendant.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J—The rule as to tender is part of the law as to performance of a contract as laid down in section 38 of the Contract Act.

If parties make a bona fide attempt at performing their contracts, the rights of the parties should not be defeated by technicalities. There is no rule that where a person tenders a large amount and asks for a change, he should not have the benefit of the tender.

Per Napier, J.—Section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act does not contemplate the exercise of any discretion by the Court in the matter of making either party liable for costs or granting any relief. If a tender under the section is accompanied by a prayer for costs and the Court refuses to take action thereon, the tender is bad. The tender is equally bad if, in making the deposit, the mortgagor requires the Court to ascertain the amount due on the mortgage. M. SUBRAMANIAM AİYAR v. NARAYANASWAMI VANDIYAR, 34 M. L. J. 439; 7 L. W. 537 638

s. 84—Tender, what amounts to.

A mere readiness and willingness to pay not communicated to the creditor and without the accompanying circumstance of the debtor being in a position to pay immediately if the offer is accepted does not amount to a valid tender. N. SHEORATAN v. BINABILAL SEWARAM MARWADI 106

s. 84—Tender, what is—Usufructuary mortgage—Requisition by mortgagor for statement of accounts and expression of readiness to pay, whether constitutes tender—Assertion by mortgagee of title in himself, whether causes cessation of interest.

The mere expression of willingness on the part of a mortgagor to pay the amount due on the mortgage cannot amount to a tender within the meaning of section 84 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The assertion of a title by the mortgagee in himself, coupled with a statement of the amount due by the mortgagor on the mortgage in reply to a requisition by the latter for accounts, will not amount to a dispensation of tender, nor cause a cessation of interest as from that date.

Per Abdur Rahim, J—The Transfer of Property

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

Act lays down the conditions relating to a valid tender and a valid deposit. It nowhere says that, even if a valid tender has not been made, interest will cease to run if the mortgagee happens to set up a right to the property in himself.

Per Oldfield, J.—The foundation of section 84 of the Transfer of Property Act is that the liability for interest on the amount due on the mortgage shall cease from the date of the tender, inasmuch as the person who has made the tender not merely has to produce money in order to make it but must also keep it ready for payment in Court or otherwise. There is a distinction between the proposal to make a tender and an actual tender, and there is no reason why a person who makes the former should be treated any better than a person who makes the latter. M. CHALIKANI VENKATARAMANIM GARU v. VATAVYA VENKATA SUBHADRYAMMA, 34 M. L. J. 488; (1918) M. W. N. 371; 24 M. L. T. 56 437

ss. 85, 88, 89—Mortgage, suit on—Puisne mortgagee not made party, effect of—Order, absolute, for sale, effect of.

Under section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, a first mortgagee is bound to make a second mortgagee a party to his suit for sale, and if he does not do so, the second mortgagee is not bound by any order for sale obtained in such a suit.

On the making of an order absolute for sale under section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act the mortgagee's security as well as the mortgagor's right to redeem are both extinguished, and for the right of the mortgagee under his security there is substituted the right to a sale conferred by the decree.

P. C. HET RAM v. SHADI RAM, 5 P. L. W. 88; 16 A. L. J. 607; 35 M. L. J. 1; 24 M. L. T. 92; 25 C. L. J. 188; (1918) M. W. N. 518; 20 Bom. L. R. 79; 798

ss. 88, 89 798
s. 90 76
s. 95 783

s. 95—Payment by co-mortgagor—Charge, whether created—Payment made by natural guardian of co-mortgagor not appointed by Court, whether sufficient to create charge.

All that section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act requires is that one of several co-mortgagors should redeem the mortgaged property in order to obtain a charge on the share of the other co-mortgagors. It is not essential that the redemption should take place in Court. If the money is paid out of Court and the decree-holder accepts it and certifies the payment, the requirements of the section are fulfilled.

Plaintiff alleged that he had paid the whole amount of a mortgage decree passed jointly against him and the defendant, and claimed a charge against the mortgaged property in respect of the amount paid for the defendant. The defence was that the payment was made by the plaintiff's mother who was not authorised to act on behalf of her minor son, the plaintiff. Her name was proposed as the guardian ad litem of the plaintiff in the mortgage suit but she was removed from the guardianship and the defendant was appointed in her place.

Held, that though the payment by the plaintiff's mother was irregular, the acceptance of the decree-holder amounted to a certificate that the payment was duly made and had the effect of curing the irregularity and that the plaintiff, therefore, acquired a valid charge over the defendant's share in the mortgaged property. N TUKARAM v. APJUNA 904

Transfer of Property Act—concl'd.

— s. 111 (g) 642, 743

— s. 123—Gift—Registration—Buddhist Law, Burmese—Religious gift, whether requires registration. Burmese Buddhist religious gifts are not exempted from the operation of section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act. Therefore, a gift or dedication of a Kyaung is not valid unless registered. L B U ZAYANTA v. U NAGA 926

Trust—Dedication, proof of—Trustee, power of, to transfer trust property—Hindu Law—Temple property—Mahant, alienation by.

Where there was no clear proof of dedication in regard to a village, but it was found that for more than 200 years the village had been incorporated with a particular asthan, had been held by its mahant from time to time and had been treated as a part of the asthan property:

Held, that under these circumstances a dedication either by the mahant to whom the village had originally been granted or by one of the persons who succeeded him might be presumed.

Where a tenure is in the nature of a trust for a charitable purpose, the trustee has no right to transfer the same except for legal necessity. O BASDEO BAN v. RAM SARAN, 5 O. L. J. 38 292

—, public, for religious purposes 213

Trusts created by Will, whether liable to duty 578

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 36 529

— s. 111 873

— ss. 111, 112, 132, 133—Partition, suit for—Objection by persons not recorded co-sharers, whether maintainable—Appeal, forum of—Jurisdiction.

In a partition suit of certain land, trees and wells, the defendants objected to the partition on the ground that when their ancestors sold the village, they reserved to themselves and their heirs the said land, etc. The Assistant Collector decided in favour of the objectors, overruling the plaintiff's plea that defendants not being recorded co-sharers had no locus standi to object to the partition. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the District Judge, who allowed it on the ground that the objectors not being recorded co-sharers could not object under section 111 of the Land Revenue Act:

Held, that the defendants not being recorded co-sharers, sections 111 and 112 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act had no application to the case and that no appeal, therefore, lay to the District Judge. A LABHU v. RADHA CHARAN 544

— ss. 132, 133 544

Valuation of suit—Suit for declaration that property attached is not liable to sale, value of—Jurisdiction.

The value for purposes of jurisdiction of a suit for a declaration that a certain property attached in execution of a decree is not liable to sale, is the value of the decree sought to be executed, and not the value of the property attached. A ANAND KUNWAR v. RAM NIBANJAN DAS, 16 A. L. J. 374 494

Venue of case, how to be determined.

The venue of a case must be determined by the nature of the claim as laid, and not by the nature of the defence set up. N KAMA v. BHAJANLAL CHATANI 654

Vizagapatam Agency Rules, Rule X, cl. (5)—Suit by purchaser of mokhasa in Court auction to recover rent illegally collected by judgment-debtor and to restrain further collections, whether suit 'for immoveable property'—Jurisdiction of Agency Court—Leave of Agent, whether necessary—Madras Local Boards Act (V of 1884), s. 73.

The expression 'suit for land or other immoveable property' in clause 5 of Rule X of the Vizagapatam Agency Rules bears the same construction as in section 12 of the Letters Patent of the Madras High Court

The plaintiff purchased a mokhasa held by some of the defendants in a Court sale in execution of a decree against the 1st defendant the Zemindar, part of whose estate it was. The 1st defendant having collected cess by virtue of his being the registered Zemindar, the plaintiff sued for recovery of the amounts collected by the 1st defendant and for an injunction restraining him from making future collections:

Held, that this was a suit to recognize the plaintiff as a land-holder for the purpose of section 73 of the Madras Local Boards Act and could be filed in the Agency Court, Vizagapatam, without the Agent's permission. M MAHARAJAH OF JEYPORE v. LAKSHMI NARASIMHA, 7 L. W. 564; 35 M. L. J. 234 729

Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, value of—Parjote, payment of—Suit to recover parjote, maintainability of.

The wajib-ul-arz of a village recorded that every shopkeeper in the village was liable to pay parjote at a certain rate:

Held, that the entry pointed to the fact that the payment was based on agreement and not on custom and that being rent payable in kind under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz it could be recovered by suit. A MUHAMMAD FAIYAZ ALI KHAN v. BEHARI, 15 A. L. J. 873; 40 A. 55 329

Water rights—Government channel, right to use of, for irrigation—Easement—Possessory rights, claim of, legality of—Injunction, suit for, to restrain threatened interference with possessory rights, maintainability of—Declaration, prayer for—(Government not impleaded as party, effect of.

Ryotwari landholders can only claim a supply of water for irrigation of their lands from a Government channel subject to the right of the Government to regulate the distribution and supply in such manner as they deem fit.

No easement or prescriptive right can be acquired by a person in water in a Government channel when that water has been supplied by Government for the purpose of irrigating lands and in fulfilment, of the duty cast on them to supply water to lands which they classify as wet.

No person can claim possessory rights in a channel and ask for an injunction restraining threatened interference with such rights.

There can be no possessory rights in connection with incorporeal hereditaments. Where a right to easement, has not ripened by enjoyment for the prescribed period, the person who is in actual enjoyment would not get any remedy against any person interfering with such user and enjoyment, Water rights—concl.

Plaintiffs sued for recovery of certain lands from their lessees, the defendants. They also asked for an injunction restraining defendants from obstructing the flow of water into their lands from a Government channel called the Diguva channel and for a declaration of their rights. Plaintiffs did not establish any right of easement to the water in the channel, but they based their right to the injunction on the ground that, as the defendants, their lessees, were enjoying the water in the channel under some arrangement with Government, they must be deemed to have been in possession of the right to take water. The Secretary of State was not made a party to the suit.

Held, (1) that plaintiffs were not entitled to the injunction, as they could not be deemed to have had such possession as to entitle them to the relief;

(2) that as the Government was not a party, the Court could not, behind their back, give the plaintiffs the declaration asked for. M MAHANKALI LAKSHMIAM v. ARNAM NARAYANAPPA, 34 M. L. J. 425; (19 8) M. W. N. 276; 23 M. L. T. 37 80

Will—Conditional ratification of partition by testator, effect of—Suit by legatees impeaching partition, validity of.

A testator, by his Will, declared that the share allotted to him in a partition previously effected as between himself and his co-parceners was to be by his heirs on his death, if he did not question the partition during his lifetime. In a suit by the legatees under the Will to set aside the partition:

Held, that the conditional ratification of the partition by the testator was valid and that the suit was, therefore, not maintainable. M KALLIANI AMMAL v. NARAYANA MENON, (1913) M. W. N. 38 753

———, construction of 749

———, Legatee of specific property—Mesne profits, date of accrual of—Interest, award of, on mesne profits, legality of.

A legatee under a Will to whom specific property has been devised, is entitled to mesne profits thereon from the date of the testator's death.

The Court will, however, not charge an executor, who has been guilty of delay in accounting, with interest on arrears of income not paid by him. M GOWRI v. NARAIN MUCHINTHAYA, 23 M. L. T. 353; 7 L. W. 513 664

Will—concl.

———, oral, title based on—Burden of proof.

Where a person bases his title on an oral Will the onus lies heavily on him of proving the precise words on which he relies. P NARAIN v. GAINDO, 3 P. W. R. 1915 183

Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859), s. 1—Dealer in stones, whether artificer, workman or labourer.

Accused who dealt in stones took an advance from the complainant under an agreement to supply the latter with stones from time to time according to the terms of an agreement entered into between the parties. Accused failed to supply the stones and complainant made an application under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act:

Held, that the contract was not a contract by an artificer, workman or labourer nor was the money advanced on account of work to be performed by an artificer, workman or labourer and that, therefore, the provisions of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act had no application to the case. A BHAGWAN DIN v. MAHMUD ALI, 16 A. L. J. 407; 1910 R. L. J. 593 502

——— S. 1—Magistrate of Police, meaning of—Jurisdiction.

The term "a Magistrate of Police" in section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act must be limited to a Magistrate in the territorial limits of whose jurisdiction the employer resides or carries on business.

There is nothing in section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act which gives special jurisdiction to a Magistrate, within whose jurisdiction the contract was made or the advance received, to try an offence under the Act committed beyond his jurisdiction.

Both under the Common Law of England and under the Criminal Procedure Code no Court, unless expressly authorised by Statute, can try any offences other than those committed within the area of its jurisdiction. S SOBHAJ DWARKADAS v. EMPEROR, 11 S. L. R. 128; 19 Cr. L. J. 591 399

